[24 W. R., 311

1. ——— Right of appeal.—Act XVII of 1873 was not intended to deprive the Nawab Nazim of Moorshedabad of any right of appeal to the High Court which he had before it was passed. NAWAB NAZIM OF BENGAL v. AMRAO BEGUM 21 W. R., 59

2. ——— Submission of decree of Court as a claim to Commissioners—Power of High Court.—Certain judgment-creditors were held to have committed an error of judgment in submitting their decree to Commissioners appointed under Act XVII of 1873, as if it were a new and unascertained claim. Where this was done, and the Commissioners expressed their opinion upon the matter involved (although it had already been determined), the High Court held that it had no authority to enquire into their award. OMRAO BEGUM v. COMMISSIONERS APPOINTED UNDER ACT XVII OF 1873 24 W. R., 394

s. 11—Agreement for appropriation of payments—Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 60—Suit for rent.—So far as the Nawab Nazim's Debts Act is concerned, rent due by the Nawab is on the same footing as any other debt incurred by him, and before his property can be made liable to satisfy such rent debt, the consent of the Governor General in Council must first be obtained to the issue of execution. ROOKMINY BULLUB ROY v. MULK JAMANIA BEGUM. I. L. R., 9 Calc., 914; 12 C. L. R., 534

1. ——— s. 12—Jurisdiction of Commissioners—Parties.—The Commissioners appointed under the Nawab Nazim's Debts Act (XVII of 1873) (an Act to provide for the liquidation of the debts of the Nawab Nazim, and for his protection from legal process), having ascertained and certified that a certain zamindari was nizamut property (i.e., held by the Government for the purpose of upholding the dignity of the Nawab Nazim for the time being), the fact that this property had, before the passing of the Act, been conveyed by the Nawab Nazim to his son, did not deprive the Commissioners of jurisdiction to deal with the question. The plain language of s. 12 of the Act is not controlled by any words in the preamble. A suit brought by a claimant against the Government and the grantee to recover the property, without the Nawab Nazim having been joined as a party, could not proceed. *OMRAO BEGUM v. Claims against Nawab.—Onus of proof.—Act XXX of 1858 of the Legislative Council of India for the administration of the estate and payment of the debts of the late Nawab of the Carnatic empowered the Supreme Court at Madras to investigate in a summary manner claims against the Nawab's estate. Held that the provisions of the Act not only limited the extraordinary remedy which it gave to certain defined classes of debt but threw upon a claimant more than the ordinary burden of proof by compelling the holder of any written acknowledgment or security to prove the actual consideration given for it and upon those claiming the price of the goods delivered proof of the fair and actual value of such goods. GHOOLUM

NAWAB OF SURAT—concluded

Agent for the Governor of Bombay at Surat to pay certain moneys of the widow of the late Nawab of Surat to whomsoever a certificate of heirship to her might be granted by the Civil Court is not a sufficient authority under Act XVIII of 1848 for the institution against her grand daughters of a general civil suit under Regulation IV of 1827 or Act VIII of 1859. Nor does permission given in 1871 to institute a suit authorize the continuation of a suit instituted in 1869. ABMUDDIN KHAN
v MAHUNISSA BEGAM 12 Bom, 156

2 ——— Sue forth
Meaning of—Sanction obtained after suit filed—
The expression 'sue forth' in s 1 of Act XVIII of 1848 does not mean to sue for and to obtain so as to make the consent of the Governor a condition precedent to the institution of a suit. Accordingly where the grand daughter of the Nawab of Surat was sued along with her husband without previously obtaining the required consent and it was contended that the suit was irregularly instituted, and the proceedings thereunder void—Held that the suit was rightly instituted such a consent not being a condition precedent to the filing of the suit. ZIAUNNISSA BEGAM v MOTIRAM

Court who is appointed guardian of the estate of a minor under Act XX of 1864 is not an officer of Government within the meaning of s 32 of Act XIV of 1869 as amended by s 15 of Act X of 1876.
An officer of Government is not to come within those enactments must be a party to a suit in his official capacity. A Subordinate Judge who under

3. ———— Attachment of property in execution of decree—Failure to return property attached in satisfaction of decree—Beng. Act V of 1863, ss. 4 and 8.—In a suit brought against the plaintiff in the Collector's Court for arrears of rent, a decree was obtained, and a warrant was issued for the attachment of certain moveable property belonging to the plaintiff. The warrant was addressed to the Nazir of the Collector's Court, and was by him delivered to one of the registered peons of the Court for execution. The peon reported to the Nazir that he had attached the property in question, and had placed it in charge of certain persons, whose receipt for it he produced and filed. Subsequently, the plaintiff paid the amount of the decree into Court and an order was made releasing his property from the attachment. A peon was sent to restore the property to the plaintiff, but the persons in whose charge it was said to have been left alleged that they had never taken possession of the property, and the peon was unable to restore the property to the plaintiff. In a suit brought by the plaintiff against the Nazir to recover the property or its value, —Held that the Nazir was not liable, Bengal Act V of 1863 having altered the relation which formerly existed between the Nazir and the peons of the Revenue Courts, and put them in the position of paid servants of Government. *KALEE COOMAR CHATTERJI v. 4. ———— Warrant of arrest of judgment-debtor—Escape of debtor—Negligence.—The plaintiff sued out a warrant for the arrest of his judgment-debtor on the 4th December 1876. The warrant was lodged with the Nazir on the 16th December, and was to be in force till the 4th January 1877. On the 22nd December 1876 the Nazir was informed that the judgment-debtor was already in the civil jail under a writ of execution issued by another creditor. The Nazir then returned the warrant to the Subordinate Judge who had issued it. On the 29th December the Subordinate Judge again sent it to the Nazir's office, where it was duly received by the Nazir's karkun (defendant No. 2). This fact was not reported by the karkun to the Nazir (defendant No. 1) until the 4th January 1877. On the 1st January 1877 the judgment-debtor's debt was paid by Government, and he was released in honour of Her Majesty's assumption of the title of Empress of India. The judgment-debtor thereupon left the district, and could not be found, and the plaintiff's warrant remained unexecuted. The plaintiff sued the Nazir and his karkun for allowing his judgment-debtor to escape. Held that the Nazir ought not to have sent the warrant back to the Subordinate Judge, and that there was no necessity for a fresh order on it until the time which it had to run had expired. Held further that, if the Nazir forgot the existence of this unexecuted warrant

5. ———— Misrepresentation of solvency of surety by witness to surety-bond.—The plaintiff held a money-decree against M, who was arrested in execution of it. On being brought to the Court, however, M applied for his discharge as an insolvent under s. 273 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act VIII of 1859). He was released on the security of G, who executed a bond for the appearance of M at the inquiry into his insolvency. The defendant attested the bond, and wrote in the attestation that G was a solvent person. In consequence of the non-appearance of M, the plaintiff sought to execute his decree against the surety G, who, on his arrest, also applied for his discharge on the ground of his insolvency, and was discharged after inquiry. The plaintiff thereupon sued the defendant for the amount of his decree and cost of execution, on the ground of his representation in the attestation that G was solvent. Quere—Whether the Nazir was liable to the plaintiff for negligence in not taking a proper surety. *NAGO MAHADEV v. 1 ——— Requisites for action for negligence—Act contrary to law—To sustain an action for negligence there must be an obligation on the part of the defendant to use care and a breach of that obligation to the plaintiff's injury as an act contrary to law SVAMI NAYUDU v. GANGA DAI [I L R, 1 All, 60]

3 ——— Railway Company—Injury to persons travelling—The plaintiff was a passenger travelling on the defendant's railway and received severe injuries from a fall which he experienced in stepping upon the platform when the train stopped Held that the Railway Company was guilty of negligence in not keeping the station properly lighted in allowing the train to overshoot the station and in not warning the plaintiff against alighting, also that the injuries sustained by the plaintiff were caused by the negligence in question and that the plaintiff did not by his own want of care contribute to the accident *WOODHOUSE v. with pegs, but the tents were taken down each monsoon. For two or three years previously to the accident, people had been accustomed to cross the land without any hindrance or prohibition. The plaintiff himself had used the path across the land, as a short cut, for a period of eighteen months. This path led across the tenting ground to a gate which was generally open, and which opened upon the high road. No express permission had ever been given to any of the persons who were in the habit of using this path. It was a mere beaten track, and, so far from being a public way, it was from time to time obstructed, in the tenting season, by the ropes and pegs of the tents. The plaintiff had for some time been in occupation of a bungalow belonging to the first defendants, which was situated in that part of the land which was furthest away from the high road. There was a regularly constructed roadway from the bungalow to the high road, which the plaintiff might have used, but, as a short cut, he and others were in the habit of using the beaten track. For this he had merely a tacit permission. On the morning of the 1st September 1885, he left his bungalow and went to his business, as usual, by the short cut across the land. When returning by the same way at about 11 o'clock at night he fell into the hole which had been dug in the afternoon of that day, and sustained the injuries complained of. The hole was several feet deep, and was dug right across the pathway. The plaintiff had no notice of the hole being dug, or of any intention to dig it. The night was very dark, and there was no negligence on the part of the plaintiff, nor any want of ordinary care and caution. There was no watchman and no fence, nor was there any light which might enable persons using the path to avoid the danger. The second defendant, as above stated, had agreed to take the said land from the first defendants on lease for building purposes. On the day of the accident, some months before the execution of the lease, the second defendant through his engineer and contractor H applied to the first defendants for permission to make "borings" in the land, which permission was given. H thereupon caused the hole in question to be dug. In their written statement the first defendants contended that in using the short cut across their land, the plaintiff was a trespasser, and that he had used it without their knowledge or consent; that the hole was dug without their knowledge, and that the "borings," for which they had given permission, were merely small holes of a diameter of six inches, or thereabouts, which could not have been a source of danger. The second defendant pleaded that at the time of the accident he was not in possession of the land, but had merely entered into an agreement for a lease of it; that he had employed a competent engineer and contractor, H, to make borings, in order to ascertain of what the sub-soil consisted, and that H contracted to do the work and obtain leave from the first defendants to enter on the land; that the said H subsequently entered on the land, and according to his own discretion and without any control or interference from him (the second defendant), took such steps as he thought necessary to ascertain the nature of the said sub-soil; and he (the second defendant) contended that, if there had been negligence in the performance of the work, he was not liable. Held (1) that there was negligence in digging the hole across a path used by several licensees, and in not placing any person or light to warn passengers of the danger arising from the hole and the excavated earth which was heaped up near it. Held (2) that the first defendants were not liable to the plaintiff. The permission which they had given to H was a permission to make "borings" only; and the hole, which was actually dug by H, was dug without their knowledge or permission. H was not shown to be in any sense their servant or agent. The plaintiff was a bare licensee, and the first defendants were under no obligation to him to keep the path in a safe state or in good order. Held (3) that the second defendant was liable to the plaintiff. H was not a contractor, in the legal sense, so as to exempt the second defendant from responsibility, but was the servant of the second defendant pro hac vice, and that the digging of the hole was within the course of his employment, or within the scope of his authority. The Court of first instance awarded, as damages, a sum of Rs33,000, which, on appeal, was reduced to Rs17,000. EVANS v. TRUSTEES OF THE PORT OF BOMBAY

6. ——— Suit for damages by parents of a child killed by negligence—Act XIII of 1855—Death by negligence—Contributory negligence—Liability for negligence of servants—Damages, Assessment of—Deduction for maintenance of child—Funeral expenses.—The plaintiff's unmarried daughter, a child of between five and six years old, fell into an open manhole of a sewer in a lane in Bombay on the 20th August 1880, between 4½ and 5 o'clock P.M., and, when her body was recovered, life was extinct. The sewer was vested in the Municipality of Bombay, and was under the control of the Municipal Commissioner by virtue of ss. 220 and 289 of the Bombay Municipal Act of 1883. When such manholes are opened, it is the duty of the Municipal Commissioner under s. 321 of that Act to have them properly fenced and guarded. On the 20th August 1880 the manhole in question was opened for the purpose of inserting a flushing-door in the sewer. From the time the manhole was opened until the occurrence of the accident the deceased child's mother was seated at the corner of the street selling cucumbers about four yards from the manhole in question. The hole was at first properly fenced with four timber hurdles about 4 feet high set up right round it at a distance of 2 feet from the hole, secured at the corners with ropes. Soon after 4-30 P.M., the superintendent in charge of the work gave orders to cease work and close the manhole for the night. The accident took place almost immediately afterwards. The Judge found on the evidence that the child fell into the open hole in the interval that elapsed between the taking down of the fence and putting the cover on the hole. What she was doing the instant before she fell, there was nothing to show. She was seen running and playing about the street during the afternoon. Her mother, who was sitting close by, did not see the accident, her attention being at the moment occupied by some customers. She admitted that before the accident occurred she knew the fence was down and the hole open and she would not have left the child go to it had she been playing beside her. Held (1) that the defendants were guilty of negligence, and that they were liable for

of this nature distinct evidence of the loss sustained or benefit expected is not necessary. The jury may look at all the circumstances of the case and especially at the position of the parents and age of the child and call in aid their own experience in arriving at their conclusions. Where damages are allowed, a reasonable sum should be deducted on account of the maintenance for such period as the child might reasonably have been expected to live with her parents. In an action under Act VIII of 1805 no sum can be awarded in respect of funeral expenses whether for removal or disposal of the body or for outlay—for ceremonial or obsequial purposes. NABATEN JETHA v MUNICIPAL COMMISSIONERS OF BOMBAY . . . 8. — Loss by fire—Sale set aside—Decree in favour of vendor—Possession—Purchaser in possession after decree and pending appeal—Accident—Liability for damage—Maxim, Volenti non fit injuria—The plaintiff and the second defendant A were brothers and worked a cotton press in partnership. In August 1884 A sold the press for Rs3000 to V (the first defendant) who paid A Rs5000 earnest money, and was put into possession. The plaintiff then brought a suit (No. 327 of 1884)

against A praying for a dissolution of the partnership. V was also a party defendant to that suit. The plaintiff alleged that Rs35000 was much too low a price for the press, and he objected to the sale. He prayed that V might be restrained from continuing in possession of the press and working it and that a receiver might be appointed to take possession of it until further order. On the 21st April 1885, on a motion the Court refused to grant an injunction and receiver, but ordered V to pay Rs30000 (i.e., the balance of the purchase money) to the solicitors of the parties for investment until the hearing of the suit and directed that if that sum was not paid by the 21st May 1885 a receiver should be appointed to take possession of the press. The suit (i.e., No. 327 of 1884) was heard on the 15th February 1887, when it was held by the Court that the sale by A to V was without authority that the defendant V took nothing under it, and that the plaintiff was entitled to have it set aside. Certain matters still remained to be decided, but on the 25th February

The defendant V at once gave notice of his intention to appeal. There was some delay in drawing up the decree. The minutes were spoken to on the 31st March 1887, the decree was sealed on the 18th April 1887. Meantime on the 6th April 1887, and while the defendant V was still in possession, a fire broke value of the press or such further sum as might be necessary to rebuild and restore it. He alleged that the fire was caused by the working of the press and contended that the working of the press by the defendant V after the decree of the 28th February was an act of trespass by him, and that therefore, independently of the question whether the fire was caused by the negligence of V and his servants, the said V was liable for the loss occasioned by the fire. Held that, independently of negligence, the defendant V was not liable to the plaintiff for the loss of the press. Decree of the Court—The Court set aside the decree of the 28th February and ordered that the press should be sold and the proceeds applied in satisfaction of the decree. The Court also ordered that the defendant V should be restrained from continuing in possession of the press and working it until further order. The Court also ordered that a receiver should be appointed to take possession of the press until further order.

The Court has, in giving leave to defend, a discretion to order security for costs, not only where it doubts the bond fides of the defence, but also if it considers the matter of defence raised is unnecessary, though allowable. meaning of the words "proprietary rights" in s 7 of the Rent Act is equivalent to that of the term "full ownership" corresponding to dominium in the Roman law and fee simple estate in English law. The right of a usufructuary mortgagee cannot be called proprietorship and having regard to s 58 of the Transfer of Property Act the execution of a usufructuary mortgage does not amount to a transfer of the proprietary right. The word "lose" as used in s 7 of the Rent Act means the transfer of proprietary rights otherwise than by the will of the owner in consequence of some incident of law. The term "part with" is a general expression including both absolute and temporary alienation and a usufructuary mortgage is a parting with some of the incidents of ownership and falls within the purview

ship Bhagwan Singh v Murl Singh I L R 1 All, 549 dissented from Gopal Pande v Parsootam Das I L R 5 All 121 Ganga Din v Dhurandhar Singh I L R 5 All 490 and Gulab Rai v Indar Singh I L R 6 All 52 referred to Per OLDFIELD J—The words "lose or part with his proprietary rights in any mehal" in s 7 of the Rent Act mean a loss or parting which divests absolutely of all proprietary rights leaving no interest of a proprietary kind in the mehal this does not happen in a usufructuary mortgage and therefore

Rent Act means: (i) voluntarily lose as for instance by auction sale and (ii) "part with" means voluntarily and entirely divested of by means e.g. of gift or private sale. "Proprietary rights" means the whole of the proprietary rights and a usufructuary mortgage of zamindari property cannot be said to have lost or parted with his proprietary right therein, and therefore does not come under the provisions of s 7 of the Rent Act become an exproprietary or occupancy tenant of the s r land INDAR SEN v NAUBAT SINGH. I L R, 7 All, 553

3. — Usufructuary mortgage of zamindari including s r—Losing or parting with proprietary right in mehal—Ex proprietary tenant—A zamindar who makes a usufructuary mortgage of his zamindari including his s r land does not "lose or part with his proprietary rights" within the meaning of s 7 of Act XII of 1881 as to become an exproprietary tenant of his s r land Bhagwan Singh v Murl Singh, I L R, 1 All, 409, and Indar Sen v Naut Singh I L R 7 All, 553 referred to and the judgments of the minority of the Court in the latter case approved Khalsi Ram v Nathu Lal, I L R 15 All 219 and Jarao Bibi v Kifayat Ali Khan Weekly Notes Ali (1893), 377, referred to MADHO BHAWTI v BARTI SINGH [I L R, 18 All, 337

4. — Ex proprietary tenant—Ex proprietary tenancy arising on sale of part of the zamindar's share—In order that the provisions of s 7 of Act XII of 1881 may come into operation it is not necessary that the zamindar should lose or part with his proprietary rights in respect of the whole of his interest in the mehal BHAWANT PRASAD GHULAM MUHAMMAD I L R, 18 All, 121

MURLIDHAR v PEMRAJ I L R, 22 All, 205

5. — Ex proprietary tenancy—The words "held by him as s r" in s 7 of Act XII of 1881 (N W P Rent Act) must be construed to mean land belonging to him or to which he was entitled as s r and as literal an interpretation should be placed upon these words as is consistent with the canons of construction. In 1879 one of the defendants sold a one third share of certain s r land in a village to the plaintiff who at that time was in cultivatory possession thereof under a deed of mortgage executed in his favour by the same defendant in 1877. The plaintiff alleged that after the sale he continued in possession of the s r land till 1884 when he was dispossessed thereof by the defendants. He sued for recovery of possession of the land. Held that the defendants being exproprietary tenants of the land in dispute were entitled to hold possession thereof by operation of law with reference to the terms of s 7 of the N W P Rent Act and the plaintiff's contention that because for four or five years the defendants failed to assert their exproprietary tenant rights they were debarred from doing so could only be well founded if there had been any provision either in the Limitation Act or the Rent Act creating such a disability. Held also that, notwithstanding the fact that the plaintiff was in possession of the land in dispute as mortgagee at the time of the sale and continued in possession afterwards his vendor must be taken to have "held" the land as his s r at the time of the sale of his proprietary interest within the meaning of s 7 of the Rent Act HARJAS v RADHA KISHAN

6. — Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882) ss 41, 48—Transfer by ostensible owner—Meaning of "held"—Statute, Construction of—Retrospective effect—Mortgage of s r land before passing of Act XVIII of 1873—Sale of mortgagor's rights while that Act was in force—Right of mortgagor—In 189 A and J, two co-sharers of a moiety of a 10 biswas share in a village (K and W) being also co-sharers in the same moiety joined with H the holder of the other moiety, in giving to K a usufructuary mortgage of 87 bighas of land being the whole of the s r land appertaining to the 10 biswas share. The deed of mortgage authorized the mortgagee to retain possession of the land until together with a moiety of the 87 bighas of s r land, and it was stated in the deed that half the mortgage-money due to K on the mortgage of 1869 was due by the executors, and that they accordingly left the same with the mortgagees in order that the latter might redeem. In November 1876 H's 5 biswas share, together with its sir land, was sold in execution of a decree. Subsequently, K, alleging that the mortgagees under the deed of 1872 and the purchasers under the execution-sale of 1876 had dispossessed him, and that his mortgage-debt had not been paid, sued to recover possession of the 87 bighas of sir land, by virtue of his mortgage-deed of 1869. The Court of first instance held that the plaintiff was not entitled to enforce his mortgage in respect of K's and H's share in the 87 bighas, because they were not parties to the deed of 1869. The lower Appellate Court further held that from the date of the execution-sale of November 1876 H became an ex-proprietary tenant of his sir land, and that to give the plaintiff possession thereof would be contrary to the provisions of s. 7 of Act XVIII of 1873 (N.-W. P. Rent Act). Held that, inasmuch as it was clear that at the time when the mortgage-deed of 1869 was executed K and H were aware of the transaction which made K, the mortgagee, under the deed, of the whole property, and that, knowing this, they allowed the possession of A, J, and H to appear as if covering the entire zamindari rights in the 10 biswas share of the sir land, and inasmuch as the statements contained in the mortgage-deed of 1872 were an admission on the part of K and H that the mortgage of 1869 was executed with their consent, the equitable doctrine contained in s. 41 of the Transfer of Property Act applied to the case and K and H had no defence, either in law or in equity, to the plaintiff's suit, with reference to their shares, and for the purpose of obviating the lien of 1869. Ramcoomar Koondoo v. McQueen, 11 B. L. R., 46, referred to. Per MAHMOOD, J., with reference to the effect of the execution-sale of November 1876, in regard to the provisions of s. 7 of Act XVIII of 1873, that the general rule that statutory provisions have no retrospective operation did not apply to the case; that, by reason of the sale, H, who had proprietary rights in the mehal, and held the 5 biswas share of the sir as such (the word "held" as used in s. 7 of the Rent Act not being confined to manual or physical holding), lost his proprietary rights, and so became an ex-proprietary tenant of the land belonging to him at that time; that although the mortgage of 1869 must not be so affected as to deprive the mortgagee of all his rights, yet by the terms of s. 7 of Act XVIII of 1873 and by virtue of the sale his means of benefiting by the mortgage were necessarily changed; that neither the preamble nor s. 1 of the Act contained any saving clause which would justify the interpretation that all the conditions included in a usufructuary mortgage are to be exempted from the operation of the Act, or of s. 7 in particular, merely because the mortgage was a subsisting one: that under these circumstances possession must be given to the plaintiff of such rights as H had at the time of the mortgage, subject only to H's rights as an ex-proprietary tenant; that the rights of the purchaser of H's share under the sale were subject to the mortgage of 1869; and that by virtue of the rule enunciated in s. 48 of the Transfer of Property Act, the rights of the mortgagees under the deed of 1872, must give way to the incidents of the prior deed of 1869, both mortgages being usufructuary. Tulshi v. Radha Kishan, Weekly Notes, Ali., 1886, p. 74, referred to. Per TYNNELL, J., that in 1876, by reason of the execution sale, the sir rights and interests of H mortgaged by him in 1869, as such, went out of existence, and assumed a different character; that over that tenure in its altered character the plaintiff, though he still had his mortgage charge, had not, in the existing state of the law, a right to physical possession of the actual land; and that, subject to this new right of H's, the plaintiff retained his mortgage charge of 1869 over the zamindari interest in the portion of the land acquired by H's vendees. KARAMAT KHAN v. SAMI-UD-DIN . . . . . I. L. R., 8 All., 409.

7. ——— and s. 14—Suit for profits—Ex-proprietary tenant—Sir land held equally.
—A certain mehal, of which the plaintiff in this suit claimed a one-third share of the profits for a certain year, belonged in equal shares to the defendant (lambardar), and S and R, his two brothers, who had certain sir land in partnership. The plaintiff had acquired the share of S by auction-purchase, S thus becoming an ex-proprietary tenant. The sir land was not included in the rent-roll of the mehal, but was admitted by the defendant to be assessable with rent at a certain rate per bigha. Held that, whatever might be the course proper to be taken for the purpose of assessing such sir land or S's share of it with rent, and notwithstanding that such course had not been taken, the plaintiff was entitled in this suit to claim and obtain his share in the profits of the sir land. *MUHAMMAD ALI v. An arrear of assigned revenue is not a prior charge on the property in respect of which it is payable, against all the world. The effect of the provisions of ss 93 (1), 171 and 177 of the N-W P Rent Act (XII of 1881) is to show that what the Legislature contemplated was to place the revenue assigned to a mundladar upon the same footing as rent, that therefore, in order to recover an arrear of revenue, a mundladar must bring a suit in the Revenue Court, that, upon obtaining a decree, he may apply for execution against the immovable property of the judgement-debtor, that when such property is a mehal the Collector may make certain arrangements for discharge of the debt; and that failing such arrangements such immovable property may be sold, subject to any incumbrances there may be upon it. *BITHAL DASS v. 1. ——— Land in mehal held by the lambardar as "khud-kasht" at a nominal rental—Liability of lambardar to co-sharer for profits.—The land in a certain mehal was recorded as held by M, the lambardar as "khud-kasht" at a certain nominal rental. For two years in succession M sublet such land in part or in whole for a less amount than such nominal rental; the third year such land lay fallow. Certain persons sued as co-sharers in the mehal to recover from M their share of the profits on account of such years. M set up as a defence to the suit that there were no profits—on the contrary, a small loss. The lower Courts held M answerable for the rental recorded. Held that it was doubtful whether the provisions of s. 209 of Act XVIII of 1873 were applicable in the present case, and that, even if such provisions were applicable, the lower Courts having neither found that more was realized from the land than had been accounted for by M, nor that the failure to realize more was owing to gross negligence or misconduct on his part, the decree of the lower Courts could not be sustained. orders were passed by the Committee on such application because it had come by post. On the 18th April 1879 the plaintiffs sued the Committee for a declaration of their right to establish a market on such land and for a perpetual injunction restraining the Collector as President of the Committee from interfering with their so doing. The cause of action alleged was the refusal of the Committee of the 26th November 1878. *Held by STUART, C J, on the question whether such suit was barred by the provisions of s 43 of Act XV of 1873 not having been brought within three months next after the date of the alleged cause of action, that it was not so barred, inasmuch as the provisions of that section were only applicable to suits brought against a Committee for something done under that Act in which compensation was claimed and not to those in which compensation was not claimed and that therefore the present suit was not governed by the provisions of that section but by art 120 sch II of Act XV of 1877. Also that the rejection of the lessee's application gave the plaintiffs a cause of action, as there was privity between them and the lessee, and that, as there was nothing in the Municipal rules prohibiting the presentation of an application by post, the application of the plaintiffs should not have been rejected. Held by DUTHOIT J that the suit of the plaintiffs was governed by the provisions of s 43 of Act XV of 1873 and was therefore beyond time. to those in which compensation was not claimed. Held also by the Full Bench (confirming the decision of STUART, C J) that the refusal of the Municipal Committee to allow the plaintiffs' lessee to establish the market gave them a cause of action. BIRJ MOHAN SINGH v COLLECTOR OF ALLAHABAD

1. ——— s. 55—Municipal Board—Power of Municipal Boards to frame bye-laws—N.-W. P. and Oudh Municipalities Act (XV of 1873), s. 22—Nuisance.—Cl. (c) of s. 55 of Act XV of 1883 was not intended to empower a Municipal Board to make rules which would enable it to confiscate private rights without making any compensation, or to treat as nuisances acts which are not in law or with regard to public health or convenience capable of being considered nuisances. The clause was meant to give to Municipal Boards power to make rules for prohibiting the establishment of markets, that is, to prevent new markets being established, and to give them power to control the maintenance of existing markets or of markets which might be established with their sanction. By "maintenance" is meant the keeping up of a market in such a manner as would make it a fit place for the carrying on of a market having regard to public health and public convenience. GANGA NARAIN v. MUNICIPAL BOARD OF CAWNPORE . . . I. L. R., 19 All., 313

2. ——— Municipal bye-law, Presumption as to validity of.—Where a person was tried for and convicted of a breach of certain bye-laws purporting to have been duly passed by a Municipal Board, it was held that the presumption was that such bye-laws had been passed with due regard to the necessary procedure and were not illegal, and that it lay upon the accused to object to their validity, and was no part of the duty of a Court exercising appellate or revisional jurisdiction to enter of its own motion into the question whether such rules had been properly framed in accordance with the provisions of the law on that subject. Municipality of Sholapur v. Sholapur Spinning and Weaving Co., I. L. R., 20 Bom., 732, referred to. QUEEN-EMPRESS v. RAM CHANDAR . . . I. L. R., 19 All., 423

1. ——— s. 69—Complaint of offence against Municipal bye-law—Power of Municipal Board to give a general authority to institute complaints on its behalf.—Held that s. 69 of the N.-W. P. and Oudh Municipalities Act, 1883, confers upon Municipal Boards in the N.-W. P. and Oudh the power to delegate generally their authority to make complaints in respect of municipal offences, and this general delegation includes not merely the giving of authority to do the formal act of presenting a complaint to a Court, but the exercise of discretion as to whether in any given case a complaint shall or shall not be made. POWELL v. MUNICIPAL BOARD OF MUSSOORIE

2. ——— and s. 71—Municipal rules—Infringement of rules—Prosecutions—N.-W. P. Government Notification No. 865, dated the 3rd November 1869—Rule VI, Legality of.—Municipal Boards and Magistrates should see that, before prosecutions are instituted under the municipal rules, care is taken that the requirements of s. 69 of Act XV of 1883 (N.-W. P. and Oudh Municipalities Act) are satisfied. A District Magistrate, who was also Chairman of a Municipal Board, having information that a certain person had evaded the payment of octroi duty, directed his prosecution for breach of municipal rules. The Magistrate in thus causing proceedings to be taken, acted wholly of his own motion and authority. The accused was tried and convicted under Rule 6, Government, N.-W. P., Notification No. 865, dated the 3rd November 1869, read with s. 45 of Act XV of 1873 (N.-W. P. and Oudh Municipalities Act). This rule provided that any person evading or abetting the evasion of the octroi duties specified in a schedule should be deemed to have committed an infringement of a bye-law. It purported to have been made under s. 12 of Act VI of 1868 (Municipal Improvements Act, N.-W. P.), which authorized the making of "rules as to the persons by whom and the manner in which, any assessment of taxes under this Act shall be confirmed, and for the collection of such taxes." Held that, assuming the rule to have been legally made under s. 12 of Act VI of 1868, which was not clear, and that it was saved by s. 2 of Act XV of 1873, it would, as declared in s. 71 of Act XV of 1883 (N.-W. P. and Oudh Municipalities Act), continue in force until repealed by new rules made under such last-mentioned Act, and be deemed to have been made under that Act, and its operation was therefore subject to the provisions of that Act, and among them to s. 69, which made it a condition precedent to the institution of a prosecution against the petitioner, that there should be a complaint of the Municipal Board or of some person authorized by the Board in that behalf. Held that the position of the Magistrate of the district in connection with s. 69 was neither better nor worse than that of any other member of the Board, and unless he had been duly authorized by the Board as a Board, he had no more locus standi to cause a prosecution to be instituted personally than any other individual member; and the words of s. 69 being mandatory, and the petitioner having from the outset urged this objection to the legality of the proceedings, he was entitled to the benefit of it now, and the conviction was illegal and must be set aside. *QUEEN-EMPRESS v. A Magistrate cannot take upon himself to decide questions of fact and Mahomedan law, so as to satisfy himself as to what are the actual rights of the parties to the lands in dispute. If he has good reasons to believe that such a dispute is likely to cause a breach of the peace, the law enables him to ascertain and maintain actual possession, or, if it is shown that the members of the family are inclined to break the peace, he can bind them all over to keep the peace. Where there was a dispute between the parties, who were related to one another as to the amount of their shares to certain property which was claimed on the one hand to be joint in certain shares, and on the other hand to exclusively belong to the other party, and no proceedings had been taken under s. 145 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, nor was there anything to show that there was any probability of a breach of the peace, the Magistrate passed the following order: "The applicants must not plough more than 12 annas of the land." Held that such an order could not properly fall within s. 144 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, as an order under that section could only be passed on some emergency and would have effect for only two months. 93. ——— Order to pull down house—Criminal Procedure Code, 1861, s. 308—Report of jurors—Illegal order—Obstruction to public way.—The Magistrate of a district issued an order, under s. 308 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, calling upon the petitioner to remove a building, on the ground that it was unlawful obstruction upon a high road. A jury of five persons was appointed by the Magistrate's successor, under s. 310, to report within fifteen days whether the order was reasonable and proper. The jurors, being without instruction, took different views as to the performance of their duties; but four of them visited the premises, and were unanimous in finding that the building complained of was not on the high road at all. Five days after receiving reports to this effect, the Magistrate issued another order to the petitioner, requiring him to pull down his house within fifteen days, as the jurors had made no report within the time prescribed. The petitioner showed cause under s. 313, but without effect, and the order was repeated. The proceedings were ultimately forwarded to the Sessions Judge, whose successor in office returned them with the remark that nothing appeared to have been done contrary to the law for the removal of nuisances. Held that the petitioner had shown sufficient cause to satisfy the Magistrate, under s. 313, that the order to pull down the house was not reasonable and proper. REG. v. In the case of a tank, the Magistrate cannot order the proprietor to excavate it. The proprietor ought to have the discretion allowed him as to the mode in which he will remove the nuisance caused by the tank. 96. ——— Functions of jury—Obstruction—Public thoroughfare—Procedure.—Before a Magistrate can make an order under s. 521 of the Code of Criminal Procedure to remove an obstruction from a path alleged to be a public thoroughfare, he must first, in a proceeding held under s. 532, have come to the conclusion that the path is open to the use of the public. The only functions which a jury appointed under s. 523 can exercise are to consider whether the order made by the Magistrate under s. 521 is reasonable and proper, it being no part of their duty to determine the rights of parties in property. Held therefore that where a Magistrate, through a mistaken view of the law, ordered the removal of an obstruction on a pathway under s. 521, and had further submitted this order to the consideration of a jury appointed under s. 523, before he had himself come to a conclusion whether such pathway was a public thoroughfare, the only course left open to him under such circumstances was to stay all proceedings initiated under s. 521, and take action under s. 532. IN THE MATTER OF THE PETITION OF CHUNDER NATH SEN

NORTH-WESTERN PROVINCES AND ODDH MUNICIPALITIES ACT (XV OF 1883)—concluded.

127. ——— Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), ss. 268, 283, 290.—The mere fact of an encroachment on a tidal navigable river does not necessarily amount to a public nuisance so as to render a person causing such encroachment liable to punishment under s. 290 of the Penal Code, but there must be evidence that such encroachment causes one of the results specified in s. 268. In the matter of the petition of Umesh Chandra Kar, I. L. R., 14 Calc., 656, considered and commented on. The rule laid down in that case to the effect that any encroachment, however slight, on a tidal navigable river constitutes an offence under s. 290, is too widely stated. Each case should be determined on its own merits, and a decision arrived at as to whether the encroachment has caused an obstruction or not. The petitioner was charged with having erected a jag in a tidal navigable river, constructed of trees and dams, and thereby having committed offences under ss. 283 and 290 of the Penal Code. There was evidence to show that the jag was about 45 cubits long and 20 cubits broad, and that it was erected on the silted side of the river where it was about 300 fathoms broad, and that it did not obstruct the ordinary navigation of the river. The lower Court held that the jag could not but cause an obstruction, and convicted the petitioner under s. 283. Held that, as there was no evidence to show that the petitioner had caused any danger, obstruction, or injury to any person in any public way or line of navigation, the conviction under that section could of 1882, s 6 and VI of 1816, s 27—Since the repeal of s 7 of Madras Regulation VI of 1816 and s 6 of Madras Regulation III of 1803 by Act X of 1861, the Court has no longer the power of s 7 in cases by non-judicial proceeding the object of which is to discover the writer of a scandalous petition, it is not competent for the Magistrate conducting the proceed-conviction for giving false evidence where an oath was administered under the above circumstances REG

1. and s 13—Witness—
Omission to take evidence on oath or affirmation
—S 11 of the Oaths Act (X of 1873) imperatively requires of a witness to take an oath or affirmation at the time of giving evidence. It is inadmissible that a witness should be advisedly recorded without any oath or affirmation.

2. Omission to take evidence on oath or affirmation—Evidence Act (I of 1872), s 118—Competency of persons of tender years—The competency of a person to testify
as a witness is a condition precedent to the administration to him of an oath or affirmation and is a question distinct from that of his credibility when he has been sworn or has affirmed. In determining the question of competency the Court, under s 118 of the Evidence Act has not to enter into inquiries as to the witness's religious belief, or as to his knowledge of the consequences of falsehood in this world or the next
It has to ascertain, in the best way it can whether, from the extent of his intellectual capacity and understanding he is able to give a rational account of what he has seen or heard or done on a particular occasion. If a person of tender years or of very advanced age can satisfy these requirements, his competency as a witness is established. Having regard to the language of the Oaths Act (X of 1873) a Court has no option, when once it has elected to take the statements of a person as evidence but to administer to such person either an oath or affirmation as the case may require QUEEN EMPRESS v. MARU, I L R, 10 All, 207, referred to in a trial for murder
before the Court of Session, one of the witnesses was a boy of twelve years of age, and in answer to questions put by the Sessions Judge, he said that he worshipped Debi and understood the difference between truth and falsehood; that he did not know what would be the consequences here and hereafter of telling lies, but that he would tell the truth. The Sessions Judge proceeded to record the boy's statement but without administering to him any oath or affirmation.
Held that there was nothing in law to sanction this procedure on the part of the Judge. The High Court required the attendance of the boy and of the accused, and, having satisfied itself
of the competency of the former to depose as a

1. — s. 8—Oath purporting to affect a third person—Revocation of consent to be bound by statement made on oath taken in a particular form.—The plaintiff in a civil suit offered to be bound by the statement which the defendant might make on oath holding the arm of his son. The defendant accepted the proposal, took the required oath, and made a statement which had the effect of defeating the plaintiff's claim. When the defendant came into Court to take the oath, the plaintiff attempted to revoke his proposal, but alleged no further reason than that he did not understand what he had intended, and did not think the defendant would speak the truth. Held that the form of oath above indicated ought not, having regard to s. 8 of Act X of 1873, to have been administered; but as it had been administered, and was a form of oath especially binding upon Hindus, the statement made upon it should be accepted. Held also that, when one party to a suit offers to be bound by the oath of the other party, and such other party accepts the proposal, the party so offering to be bound should not be allowed to revoke his proposal except upon the strongest possible grounds proved to the satisfaction of the Court to be genuine grounds for revoking the proposal. *Lekh Raj Singh v. 2. — and ss. 9, 10, 11—Applicability to criminal proceedings—"Party to a judicial proceeding" does not include complainant or accused.—The provisions of ss. 8-11 of the Oaths Act (X of 1873) do not apply to criminal proceedings. The expression "party to a judicial proceeding" in s. 8 of the Act does not include either the complainant or the accused in a criminal case. In the course of a trial on a charge of assault the complainant's pleader agreed to be bound by the evidence on oath of a material witness, provided he swore on the Gita (a sacred book of the Hindus). The witness took the required oath, and stated that there was no assault, but merely a taking held of the hand. The Magistrate did not believe this witness, and proceeded with the trial. He convicted the accused on the other evidence in the case, and sentenced him to a fine of Rs. 25. Held that the Magistrate was not bound to decide the case on the evidence of the witness who swore the special oath. *QUEEN-EMPRESS v. The oath was taken, and a decree was passed accordingly. Held that the minor defendant was bound by the consent of his guardian since there was no evidence of fraud or gross negligence on the part of the latter, although the Court had not sanctioned the agreement under s. 462, Civil Procedure Code. *CHENGALREDDI v. In such a case the minor is bound by the consent of his guardian, although given without the leave of the Court, provided that there is no fraud or gross negligence on the part of the guardian. *Chengalreddi v. Nor can a pleader so bind his client. Under the Indian Oaths Act (X of 1873), no person but the party himself can make such an offer as is contemplated in s. 6. SADASHIV RAYAJI v. MARUTI VITHAL

The defendant accepted the offer and took the oath. Held that the plaintiff could not retract his offer to be bound by the oath. ABAJI v. BALA so proved. But if the issues so proved are not sufficient for the decision of the case such further facts as are necessary should be proved by evidence adduced on both sides. The Act provides not for the adjustment of a suit in an arbitrary way but merely for the conclusive proof of facts, such facts if not sufficient for the decision of the suit, should be supplemented by facts duly proved by evidence, and (4) that the facts proved by the special oath are conclusively proved and any further evidence that may be taken should be limited to matters not proved by the oath. THOTI AMMAL v SUBBAROYA MUDALI I L R, 22 Mad, 234

1 — Agreement to be bound by oath—Judgment on such agreement—Mad Reg III of 1806, s 8—The mere agreement of one of the parties to a judicial proceeding to be bound by the oath of the other is in itself no adjustment of the suit. If the matter stated in the agreement is sufficient as the grounds of a decision, a judgment may be passed for then it would be conclusive evidence under the Oaths Act. 2 — Agreement to be bound by oath of a particular person—Discretion of Court—The Oaths Act (X of 1873) does not constrain a Court to pass a decision in favour of a particular party. If a party to a suit says he will be bound by the oath of a particular person, s 11 of the Act only means that pro tanto he will be bound, so far as the matter of that evidence is concerned, and that evidence will be conclusive as to its truth as against him throughout the whole of the litigation but it in no way compels the Court trying the case to accept it as conclusive. Jayadeva Shanbog v Narayana Pai I L R, 2 Mad, 356 approved MUHAMMAD ZAKIR v CHEDA LAL evidence to be considered in the case together with the other evidence. In this case there was abundant other evidence, all of which was in favour of the plaintiff, and his refusal to take the oath did not necessarily constitute a sufficient reason to set aside that evidence. A party who makes an oath as prescribed by his adversary confers by so doing on his statement the character of conclusive proof, but his mere refusal to make the oath does not, under the terms of the Oaths Act (X of 1873), justify any legal presumption against him. Such refusal is to be considered merely as a piece of conduct to be considered along with the other evidence. CHINTAMAN BHAT v. SHRINIVAS BHAT [I. L. R., 22 Bom., 680]

Thereupon the Joint Magistrate, without holding any further preliminary inquiry, committed her on a charge, under s. 307, of attempting to murder C. The only eye-witness of the offence, according to the Sessions Judge, was a child, and as she did not understand the nature of an oath or solemn affirmation, her evidence was taken on simple affirmation. The Judge did not examine the child for the purpose of eliciting whether he knew it was wrong not to tell the truth, or whether he knew the difference between right and wrong, but he told him to tell the truth and permitted him to be examined as a witness. Held that the child should have been affirmed. Quære—Whether the omission to affirm the child having been intentional on the part of the Judge, the case came within the provisions of Oaths Act, s. 13. *QUEEN-EMPRESS v. 1. ———— Murder—Beng. Reg. IV of 1797
—Act XVII of 1862—General Clauses Consolida- tion Act (I of 1868), s. 6—Repeal of statute, Effect of—Right of defence to High Court.—Up to the 1st January 1862, a person committing the offence of murder was liable to trial and punishment under the Regulations. By Act XVII of 1862 the Regulations prescribing punishments for offences were repealed "except as to any offence committed before the 1st January 1862." By the same Act it was declared that no person who should claim the same should be deprived of any right of appeal or reference which he would have enjoyed under such Regulations. By s. 6 of Act I of 1868, the repeal of an Act does not affect anything done, or any offence committed, or any fine or penalty incurred before the repealing Act shall have come into operation. Under the provisions of this section, the repeal of Act XVII of 1862 by Act VIII of 1868 and Act X of 1872 did not, in respect of offences committed before the 1st January 1862, affect the penalties prescribed by such Regulations, nor were any of the Regulations prescribing punishments for offences, which were in force before the passing of Act XVII of 1862, repealed in respect of offences committed before the 1st January 1862, prior to the passing of Act I of 1868. Held accordingly, where a person committed murder in the year 1855, that such person was punishable under the Regulations. Held also that,

inasmuch as such right as the right of reference given by s. 3 of Regulation IV of 1797 accrues on conviction, and therefore in the present case had not accrued before Act XVII of 1862 was repealed, it is doubtful whether a person convicted of murder committed before the 1st January 1862 has such right. EMPRESS OF INDIA v. MULUA

lation IV of 1797 was repealed by Act XVII of 1862, and that Act was wholly repealed by Acts VIII of 1868

By Act XVII of 1862 the Regulations prescribing punishments for offences were repealed "except as to any offence committed before the 1st January 1862." By the same Act it was declared that no person who should claim the same should be deprived of any right of appeal or reference which he would have enjoyed under such Regulations. By s. 6 of Act I of 1868, the repeal of an Act does not affect anything done, or any offence committed, or any fine or penalty incurred before the repealing Act shall have come into operation. Under the provisions of this section, the repeal of Act XVII of 1862 by Act VIII of 1868 and Act X of 1872 did not, in respect of offences committed before the 1st January 1862, affect the penalties prescribed by such Regulations, nor were any of the Regulations prescribing punishments for offences, which were in force before the passing of Act XVII of 1862, repealed in respect of offences committed before the 1st January 1862, prior to the passing of Act I of 1868. That "property" in the Official Trustees Act was meant also to include action or actionable claims, and the vesting thereof was intended to have the effect of giving the Official Trustee complete power of enforcing all claims or demands in respect of the trust estate. The plaintiff, as a creditor of S E E, had obtained letters of administration to his estate and now brought this suit for the recovery of Rs 2,000 on a mortgage which had been executed in favour of S E E. S E E in his lifetime was the trustee of a sum of Rs 70,000, and the Official Trustee, who had been appointed trustee in his place and who was made a defendant in this suit, claimed the benefit under the said mortgage on the allegation that the said sum had been advanced by S E E out of the trust funds. The plaintiff contended that she was entitled to the usual mortgage decree and to get in the money thereunder, and that the proper course for the rival claimants to the money represented by the plaintiff in her personal capacity on the one side and the Official Trustee on the other was then to proceed to establish their rights to the money by separate suit or otherwise. Held that the contention of the plaintiff was not correct, and the Court was bound to determine the question raised by the plaintiff representing the estate of the deceased and the Official Trustee representing the trust estate, and that the Official Trustee could adduce evidence in this suit to shew that the money was advanced out of the trust estate. *GABRIEL v. 3. ———— Suit for possession—Dispute as to whether transaction was a mortgage or sale—Entries in account books showing debts.—The plaintiffs sued for possession of certain lands, alleging that they had been mortgaged to the defendant by their father under two documents. The defendant produced them and relied upon them as deeds of sale which conveyed to him absolutely the lands mentioned in them. The form of the instruments was not conclusive, but it appeared aliunde by the conduct of the defendant himself that the deeds were intended as mere securities for money, and that he had treated them as such. Certain entries in the defendant's accounts also treated the respective considerations named in the deeds as continuing debts due to the defendant from the plaintiffs' father. Held that the entries, when put in evidence, were sufficient to shift the burden of proof from the plaintiffs to the defendant, and that it was incumbent on the latter to give either oral or documentary evidence which in some way neutralised or explained away their effect, or showed that they related to other transactions than those mentioned in the two documents. *GOVINDA v. 3. AGENT.

4. ———— Gomastah, Suit against—Suit to recover advances due from discharged gomastah.—In a suit to recover advances alleged to be due from a discharged gomastah, who pleaded acquittance at the time of his discharge,—Held that plaintiff was bound to prove the payments to, and the receipts from, the gomastah, and to put in original documents, and not mere transcripts, even if the defendant had remained silent. WATSON & Co. v. SREEDHUR MUNDLE . . . 10 W. R., 421

5. ———— Agents of official assignee, Suit against—Proof of items of account.—Agents who have collected money on account of an insolvent estate are severally bound to prove to the assignee or his representative that the expenditure of the several amounts charged in their accounts has been actually and properly made and the onus probandi rests on such agents. It is incumbent on such agents to offer proof in support of all the items in their accounts which are impugned, and the propriety, or the actual expenditure of such items should form the subject-matter of issues properly framed. NUJUF ALI v. PATTERSON . . . 2 N. W., 104

6. ———— Principal, Suit against, for acts of agent—Authority of agent, Proof of.—In a suit against a principal as liable for the acts of an accredited agent of the latter, the onus lies on the plaintiff to prove that the alleged agent was the duly accredited agent of the defendants in reference to the transaction, the subject of the claim. *HATHE RAM v. 8. ———— Attachment of person of debtor—Execution of decree.—In an application for an order for execution of a decree by attachment of the person of the debtor, the onus is on the judgment-debtor to show, that he has no means of satisfying the debt, and that he has not been guilty of any misconduct; and not on the creditor to show that, by sending the debtor to prison, some satisfaction of the debt would be obtained. *SETON v. 9. ———— Claim by judgment-debtors to property seized in execution of a decree against them as representatives of original debtors—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 234.—Where, in execution of a decree against the representatives of a deceased debtor, specific property was seized as the property of the deceased debtor and as being in the possession of his representatives and the judgment-debtors claimed the property so seized as their own,—Held that the burden of proof lay on the decree-holder who asserted that the property seized in execution of his decree was the property of the deceased debtor and as such in the possession of the judgment-debtors. *ABDUL RAHMAN v. 6. BAILMENTS.

10. ———— Negligence—Hiring—Accident—Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 106—Contract Act (IX of 1872), ss. 150, 151, 150.—The question of the burden of proof in cases of accidental injury to goods bailed depends upon the particular circumstances of each case. In some cases, from the nature of the accident, [it lies] upon the bailee to account for its occurrence, and thus to show that it has not been caused by his negligence. In such cases it is for him to give a prima facie explanation in order to shift the burden of proof to the person who seeks to make him liable. If he gives an explanation which is uncontradicted by reasonable evidence of negligence, and is not prima facie improbable, the Court is bound in law to find in his favour, and the mere happening of the accident is not sufficient proof of negligence. S hired a horse from W, and while it was in his custody it died from rupture of the diaphragm, which was proved to have been caused by over-exertion on a full stomach. horse the defendant gave evidence to the effect that dence was not contradicted on any point, nor was diaphragm was a likely result of the horse running away while its stomach was distended with food. The Court of first instance held that the defendant was bound to prove that he had taken such care of the horse as a man of ordinary prudence would under similar circumstances have taken of own property, that he must have used his whip freely, or done something else which caused the horse to bolt, and that in so doing he acted without reasonable care, and had thus caused the animal's death. The Court accordingly decreed the claim. Held by EDGE, O J.

Court had no jurisdiction to pass and should consequently be set aside in revision under s 622 of the Civil Procedure Code. Per BEONHURST, J., that as the decree was not only unsupported by proof but opposed to the evidence on the record the lower Court had "acted in the exercise of its jurisdiction illegally," within the meaning of s 623. SHIELDS v WILKINSON. I L R., 9 All., 386

7 BOUNDARY

11 — Disputed boundary—Removal of boundary—Where a dispute arises regarding the direction of a boundary which one of the parties to a suit has demolished and the other party proves its general direction, the onus of proof that the direction is wrongly stated, if it be so lies on the former, who removed the boundary. JUDOOVATH MULLICK v KALLEE HISO TAGORE. [25 W. R., 524]

12 — Failure of proof—Suit concerning the boundary line between contiguous mehals. The land in dispute (which, with the mehals adjacent originally formed part of a permanently settled zamindari consisted of revenue paying mehals and of mehals alleged to be lakhuraj all belonging to one proprietor) was so situated that it necessarily belonged either to Haveli, one of the latter, or to the contiguous rent paying mehals. The Permanent Settlement did not define the boundary, nor was it fixed in subsequent resumption proceedings against Haveli, which ended in a temporary settlement of that mahal for twenty years. The ownership of Haveli having become severed from the ownership of the other mehals, the question of boundary arose, not as a question of revenue between the Government and a zamindar, but as one of title to land between the zamindars and proprietors of two contiguous and separate estates. The appellant having failed to prove that no part of the disputed land was included in the respondent's settlement (some portion at least being shown to belong to Haveli), and also having failed to prove by independent evidence his own right to recover the land specified in the plaint,—Held that the suit should not have been determined upon that mere failure on his part to support the burden of proof cast upon him, because the judgment would be as final and conclusive between the parties as an adjudication on the merits would be, and its effect would be to give something to the respondent which on the evidence belonged to the appellant's mehals. LEELANUND SINGH v MOHESHW SINGH.

It is not conclusive evidence against such auction-purchaser, nor could any length of adverse holding prior to his purchase preclude the auction-purchaser from recovering it, if he could show clearly that it belonged to the mehal which he had purchased. *PRAN KISHEN BANERJEE v. The onus of proof is upon him. He can have no right to attach property which is proved either never to have belonged to his judgment-debtor, or having been his to have passed out of his possession and ownership and become, in law, the property of others prior to the time at which attachment is sought. 33. ——— Suit for declaration of title—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 246—Equitable right.—Certain property belonging to one S was mortgaged by him in 1810 and 1813 to O, under form of conditional sale. S had three sons, H, A, and N, and in 1819 he sold the property included in the mortgages of 1810 and 1813 to his sons, H and A. In 1820 H and A entered into a fresh arrangement with O, who accepted from them a fresh mortgage of the property in lieu of those of 1810 and 1813, and of this mortgage in 1831 he obtained a decree for foreclosure. Subsequently, the Government resumed the property and settled it with O's widow as representing the proprietor, and the plaintiff afterwards purchased a one-third share of the estate. The defendant was the holder of a decree obtained in 1836 against the heirs of S on a money-debt of S, and in execution of that decree he, in 1866, caused the rights of N in the property to be attached and sold, and himself became the purchaser. On attachment, the plaintiff preferred a claim to it under s. 246, Act VIII of 1859, but it was disallowed. In a suit by the plaintiff praying for his right of ownership and possession, which was menaced by the defendant's decree and sale,—Held the onus was on the defendant to show that he had an equitable right which he could assert against the plaintiff. 37. ——— Suit for value of goods taken in execution where a claim to them is allowed under s. 246, Act VIII of 1859—Evidence of title.—M, to whom C, his judgment-debtor, had made over certain goods, attached the same in execution of his decree as the property of his judgment-debtor, but, on a claim being preferred to the goods by D and B under s. 246 of Act VIII of 1859, they were ordered to be released from attachment; they remained, however, in the possession of M. D and B having sued M to recover the value of the goods, the lower Court held that, inasmuch as M failed to sue within a year to set aside the order of the miscellaneous department, and to establish his right to take the property in satisfaction of his decree as belonging to his judgment-debtor, the plaintiff's right to it must be admitted without further enquiry or proof, and decreed the claim on the basis of that order alone. It was held in special appeal that the defendant was not debarred by that order or by the law of limitation from disputing the plaintiff's right to the goods, and that the plaintiffs were bound to prove their right to entitle themselves to a decree, and that the miscellaneous order was not conclusive proof of their right, and still less such an adjudication on the question as precluded a readjudication of it. 76. ——— Voluntary deed—Suit by settlor to set aside his deed.—One M (the original plaintiff) was priest in the family of the first and second defendants, and was treated with much kindness by the first defendant (N), upon whom he chiefly relied for advice in worldly matters. A sum of R30,000, which was the bulk of his property, was in deposit in the defendants' firm at interest. Early in 1887 he became ill, and in June 1887 he expressed a wish to execute a trust-deed and an English will. He gave instructions to N for the trust-deed. By this deed, which contained no power of revocation, he settled R30,000 upon the first and second defendants (who were uncle and nephew), as trustees to perform his funeral ceremonies and to carry out certain religious observances and to pay two annuities, each of R25, and with the residue to found a Sanskrit class. The deed provided for the payment during his lifetime, of a sum of R100 per mensem for his maintenance and expenses, or such larger sum as he might require for such purposes, but in other respects it was not to come into operation until after his death. The will of even date gave certain property to his wife, and subject to this bequest gave the residue of his property to his sister. After receiving instructions for these documents, N took them to an attorney. From these instructions drafts were prepared, which were read over to M in his room by the attorney's managing clerk. Neither drafts, nor instructions, nor the documents themselves were, however, left with M. The drafts were then engrossed, M having made some trifling corrections in them. On the 23rd June 1887 he attended at the house of the attorney. The documents were explained to him by the attorney, and were interpreted to him by a High Court interpreter. M was then examined by a medical man with a view to ascertain whether he was capable of understanding what he was doing. M then executed the trust-deed and the will, and both were then duly attested. At the same time M signed the accounts in the defendants' books, and the balance of the money, which stood to his credit over and above the R30,000 comprised in the deed, was produced and made over to him, and he made it over to N to be kept by him personally. Shortly after this, M's sister and her son came to Bombay, and he fell under their influence. He became dissatisfied with what he had done with the R30,000, and on the 21st November 1887 he executed a will by which he purported to remove the deed and the will of the 23rd June, and he left the whole of his property to his sister. On the 2nd September 1888 his nephew took him to Surat, and on the 14th September 1888 at Surat he executed a deed revoking the trust-deed of the 23rd June 1887. He also signed instructions and a power-of-attorney under which this suit was filed. He died subsequently to the filing of the suit, and his

90. ———— Proof of consideration—Promissory note—Suit by professional money-lender against a young man recently come of age—Presumption—Negotiable Instruments Act (XXVI of 1881), s. 118—Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 114, ill. (c).—Professional money lenders sued a young man recently come of age to recover certain loans of money alleged to have been advanced by them to him on promissory notes. The defendant, who under the will of his father was entitled to a large property but had not yet come into possession of it, was of an extravagant and reckless character. He pleaded, as to part of the consideration for the notes, that he did not receive it, and as to a further part, that the consideration was immoral. In dealing with the case the Court laid down the following propositions, not as rules of law, but as guides in considering the evidence in such a case: (1) That upon the above facts the ordinary presumption that a negotiable instrument has been executed for value received was so much weakened that the defendant's allegation that he had not received full consideration was sufficient to shift the burden of proof and to throw upon the money lenders (the plaintiffs) the obligation of satisfying the Court that they had paid the consideration in full. That is the practical effect of ill. (c) to s. 114 of the Evidence Act (I of 1872). (2) Where the plaintiff, in answer to such a defence, affirmed that he had paid the consideration in full, and was corroborated by his books and witnesses the onus of proof again shifted over upon the defendant. (3) The burden of proof thus thrown upon the defendant could only be met by a perfectly truthful and harmonious statement which the Court felt able to rely upon with confidence. In the absence of this the ordinary presumption laid down in s 118 of the Negotiable Instruments Act (XXVI of 1881) must prevail, viz., that until the contrary is proved the presumption should be made that every negotiable instrument was made for consideration. MORI GULABCHAND v MAHOMED MENDI IHARIA TOPAN

81. — Proof of consideration for a registered mortgage—Income tax returns—Evidence Act (I of 1872), ss 76 and 77—The defendant in a suit for money secured by registered mortgage to be paid by him to the plaintiff denied the consideration of which he had, before the registering officer, acknowledged the receipt. The original Court which dismissed the suit, would not have decided in favour of the defendant but for its having been shown on an inspection of copies, officially certified, of income tax returns made by the should not have been admitted in evidence, in reference to ss 76 and 77 of the Indian Evidence Act (I of 1872), and also that, assuming the false statement of income to have been made it still remained unproved by the defendant that the acknowledged consideration had not been paid. The judgment of the Appellate Court was affirmed by their Lordships, who concurred in the opinion that the returns if the plaintiff had wrongly omitted to make a full return of income, would not have had any weight in changing the onus which lay upon the defendant of showing that no consideration had passed in this mortgage. ALI KHAN BAHADUR v INDAR PERSHAD

98. ———— Non-receipt of full consideration—Suit on bond.—In a suit for money due on a bond between the representatives of the original parties to it, the defendant attempted to reduce the claim on the ground that the money had not been received in full, the bond having been given partly in respect of an old debt, and partly in respect of a credit, in account, upon which the debtor had not, in fact, drawn certain items. The Judicial Committee concurred with the High Court, which had reversed so much of the decree of the Court of first instance as disallowed these items; the latter Court not having correctly adjusted the burden of proof, and having acted as if the plaintiff had relied on his own books to prove the debt, besides having erred in weighing the evidence. *RAJESWARI KUAR v. 99. ———— Judge's duty to decide secundum allegata et probata.—The plaintiffs sued upon two bonds executed by the defendant in their father's favour, one for ₹200 and the other for ₹99-15 annas. The defendant in his written statement, as well as in his deposition, admitted execution of the bonds in question, but pleaded non-receipt of consideration. The Subordinate Judge held that the bond for ₹200 was not proved, but awarded the claim upon the other bond. On appeal, one of the issues raised by the Assistant Judge was—are the bonds in suit proved? He held that the plaintiffs had failed to prove execution of the bonds, and dismissed the claim in toto. Held, reversing the decision of the lower Court, that the defendant having admitted execution of the bonds in question, the Assistant Judge acted illegally in the exercise of his jurisdiction in raising the question of the execution. The first rule of adjudication is that a Judge shall decide secundum allegata et probata. The only question that could be tried in the present case was non-receipt of consideration. GORAKH BABAJI v. VITHAL NARAYAN . . . I. L. R., 11 Bom., 435

102. ———— Bond in favour of one undivided brother for the benefit of himself and others—Suit by promise alone—Payment to younger undivided brother—Discharge.—In a suit on a bond executed by the deceased father of defendants, in favour of the plaintiff, the defendants, while admitting the bond and the consideration for which it had been given, contended that, inasmuch as plaintiff had four undivided brothers and the deed had been executed in his name for the benefit of himself and his brothers, the latter should have been joined as plaintiffs, and that plaintiff could not maintain the suit alone. They also pleaded payment to plaintiff's undivided younger brother, which payment, they contended, was binding on the plaintiff. Held that plaintiff was entitled to sue for the family debt without joining his undivided brothers, the contract on which the suit was based being in plaintiff's sole name and not purporting to have been obtained on behalf of any others but himself. And that, as to the payment pleaded, if true, plaintiff was, as regards the promisor, the only person primâ facie entitled to payment; it therefore lay on the promisor to show that a payment to a third party was binding on the plaintiff, which had not been done. The contention that payment to any member of the family was by itself necessarily binding on the member who took the contract, could not be supported. ADAIKKALAM CHETTI v. MARIMUTHU . I. L. 103. ———— Bond in favour of one co-sharer—Payment of such bond made to another co-sharer when a discharge.—Where a debt due to one member of a joint family has been paid by the debtor to another member of the family, the question whether such payment operates as a discharge depends on the circumstances under which it was made. A and B were members of joint Hindu family. Both managed the joint property for the common benefit. Each used to recover debts due on bonds taken in the other's name. In 1890 defendant passed a bond to A. In 1892 he passed a mortgage bond to B, the consideration for which was stated to be the balance due on the former bond. Subsequently A sued defendant on the bond of 1890. Held that under the circumstances the mortgage-bond passed to B operated as a valid discharge of A's claim under the previous bond. *GURUSHAN TAPPA v. In support of the latter contention, they relied, inter alia, upon certain pymash documents, which contained the word ulavadai, the use of which term, they contended, established the alleged right of permanent occupancy. Held (1) that, where the occupier of land resists a suit for ejectment by setting up a claim of a right of permanent occupancy, the onus of establishing such a right lies on the defendant, inasmuch as by it he seeks to derogate from the ordinary incidents of property; and (2) that the right expressed by the term ulavadai (which means an act or right of ploughing or cultivating lands) cannot be assumed to be a permanent right. *RANGASAMI REDDI v. 1878, leaving a widow B. The year before his death his only son (Bala), a child of eight years old, had left his home and was never heard of again. A few days before his death, S adopted the plaintiff (his nephew) and executed a deed of adoption, which stated that he had no hope that his son Bala was alive, and that he had therefore adopted the plaintiff. The deed further declared the plaintiff to be the owner of all S's property with all the rights of a natural son, but provided that, in the event of the lost son returning, he should have half. In 1892 the plaintiff, as S's adopted son, brought this suit to recover some of S's property, which was in the hands of the defendants, who claimed it as S's heirs. They (inter alia) impeached the plaintiff's adoption. Held that, in order to recover the property as the adopted son of S, it lay on the plaintiff to prove a valid adoption. It was a condition precedent to prove that at the date of the adoption S was without a son. It was therefore for the plaintiff to prove that Bala was then dead. There was at that time no presumption that Bala was dead, and, there being no evidence on the point, it was impossible to say when he died, or consequently that the adoption was valid. Held, however, that plaintiff was entitled to succeed as donee under the deed of adoption. It was clearly S's intention to give the estate to the plaintiff as being his adopted son. But if the adoption was invalid, the gift had no effect. The onus here was on the defendants. It was for them to show that Bala was at that date alive and the adoption therefore invalid. That burden they had not discharged, and the plaintiff therefore was entitled to a decree. Per FARRAN, C.J.—Where a deed of gift or will confers an estate upon a named person, because he fills or by reason of his filling a certain character, he is entitled to recover the estate without affirmatively proving that he fills such character. The onus of proving that he does not fill the character, which is the reason of the gift, lies upon those who dispute his claim. The whole question is one of onus of proof. RANGO BALAJI v. MUDIYEPPA [I. L. R., 23 Bom., 296]

153. ——— Suit to enforce the mortgage against son's shares—Joint Hindu family—Mortgage by father—Legal necessity—Burden of proof.—As a general rule, a creditor endeavouring to enforce his claim under a hypothecation-bond given by a Hindu father against the estate of a joint Hindu family in respect of money lent or advanced to the father having only a limited interest, should, if the question is raised, prove either that the money was obtained by the father for a legal necessity, or that he made such reasonable inquiries as would satisfy a prudent man that the loan was contracted to pay off an antecedent debt, or for the other legal necessities of the family. There is a distinction between such cases as this and cases in which a decree has been obtained against the father and the property sold, or cases in which the sons come into Court to ask for relief against a sale effected by their father for an antecedent debt. Where a decree was obtained against the father and a sale effected, the presumption is that the decree was properly made. Where a son comes into Court to ask for relief against a sale effected by his father for an antecedent debt, it is for the son to make out a case for the relief asked for. In a suit against the members of a joint Hindu family upon a bond given by their father and in which family property was hypothecated no evidence was given on either side as to the circumstances in which the bond was given. There was no evidence to show that any inquiry had been made by the plaintiff as to the objects for which the bond was executed by the father. Held that the burden of proof was upon the plaintiff to show either that the money was obtained for a legal necessity, or that he had made reasonable inquiries and obtained such information as would satisfy a prudent man that the loan was contracted to pay off an antecedent debt or for the other legal necessities of the family, and that, no evidence having been given, the suit must be dismissed. *JAMNA v. The plaintiff, widow of the only son who survived his father, who was the owner of village lands and other property, had become, on her husband's death without issue, entitled, as the widow, to the estate which he had inherited. But she obtained possession of only half of it. The other half was in the recorded possession, when this suit was brought, of the widow of her late husband's younger brother, who died in his father's lifetime. The case which the latter widow, as defendant, was sought to make was that she had become entitled to a share in the estate as the result of a series of transactions, by way of family arrangement, in which the two widows, and their mother in law, widow of the deceased father, had taken part. These included a reference to arbitration, a release, and dakhli kharij in attle

This deed was to secure a debt of Rs10,000 stated to be to some small extent for an advance in cash, and advance to pay Government revenue, an advance for expenses of the marriage of L's daughter, and a very small balance in cash. It was not shown that the debts secured by either of these two loans were debts which for was it shown that the in fact, as well entered into with the consent of all the husband's kindred under circumstances which might raise a valid presumption that the debts secured by them were properly incurred. It was further not shown that the power of attorney under which L purported to act in executing the bond of 1877 on behalf of H, A, and I was ever properly explained to the professed executants or that they understood its import, nor was it shown that either of the bonds was duly explained to and comprehended by the professed executants other than L himself, in manner required by law in the case of documents executed by pardashin women, nor, though at the date of the execution of the second bond I had attained the age of majority, did it appear that he understood the bond with any clear knowledge of its contents or of the liability which in his lifetime to enforce ment of the two mortgages abovementioned, that the mortgages were not binding on the alleged executants or on the ancestral property at the date of suit in the hands of A. I's interest in the family property in suit could only be affected by the mortgage of the 2nd of April 1891 on proof that the debt was in fact one or was on reasonable inquiry by and statements made to the lenders of the money believed by them to be one in respect of which his mother A, as a Hindu daughter in possession, could mortgage or charge the family property beyond her own then vested interest in it, or on proof that he, as one of the reversioners by joining with his mother in executing the documents of mortgage, led the lenders of the money to believe that such a necessity existed for the loan as enabled the Hindu daughter to create a valid mortgage on the family property beyond the extent of her own life interest. The Hindu law which prevails in the N-W Provinces recognizes no power in a reversioner to sell or made by her or in consequence of an alleged execution by her of a general power of attorney, to be reasonably satisfied that the liability she was incurring and the nature of the transaction were explained to her; and more particularly is this the case if it is sought by reason of her having executed a document, to fix her and her property with a liability to pay a debt, which, if the document had not been executed by her or by an agent appointed by her with adequate power, could not have been enforced against her property. It is also necessary when money-lenders in this country seek to enforce against the property of a Hindu family a contract of mortgage made by a reversioner, who, although of age at the time, was then still of tender years and without experience of business; for the Court, when the question is raised, to be satisfied that the reversioner understood the nature of the transaction and the effect of the contract which he was entering into, or that the reversioner of the family property, in which the reversioner had an estate in expectancy only, was liable for the debt in respect of which the mortgage is sought to be enforced, and that no unfair advantage was taken of the reversioner's youth and inexperience. *ACHHAN KUAR v. 173 ———— Creditor, Obligation of—Proof of satisfaction of debt—Where a party, entitled to impeach an alienation by a widow of her husband's estate, sues to set aside such an alienation, and the defendant establishes not only that he had a charge on the estate in virtue of a mortgage deed executed by the widow, but that the debt to him was on account of advances made to her for purposes for which she would have been entitled to alienate the estate as against the next heir, it does not follow that because plaintiff had a right to demand this peculiar proof of the ordinary rule which requires the party who alleges payment to prove payment is to be imputed in his favour, or that the debt is to be presumed to be satisfied, unless the contrary is shown by the creditor, and if he alleges that the mortgage-deed was not bona fide, the burden lies on him to prove his allegation CAVALY VENCATA NARAYANA v COLLECTOR OF MASULIPATAN

175 ———— Suit for share of alienated property—Mortgage by one member of joint family—Suit for possession of property—In a suit by a Hindu widow to recover a share of property alleged to have been inherited from her husband (J), and which had been mortgaged by her husband's brother (B) and sold under a decree obtained on the mortgage the question was raised whether the money for which the property was mortgaged had been borrowed by B for his own private use or for the benefit of the family. Held that the onus was on the defendant to show that the plaintiff had derived any benefit from the money SUREMUTTI v LUKNER NARAIN DUTT 22 W. R., 171

176 ———— Alienation by Hindu father—Necessity—Specific performance suit for, against father—There is no legal presumption in the Madras Presidency that a sale by a Hindu father is valid until the contrary is shown. Where a suit is brought against the father of an undivided Hindu family having an infant son for the specific performance of a contract to sell land, presumably ancestral the Court, having thereby notice that the vendor's powers can be exercised without a breach of trust only where there exists a necessity sufficient in law to justify the sale and that the infant son is entitled to interdict the sale, is bound to require the plaintiff to give some proof of the necessity for the sale GRUBRAM SASTRIAL v GANAPATHIA PILLAI

[1 L. R., 5 Mad., 337

177 ———— Alienation by widow—Proof that money on mortgage was advanced for purpose justified by legal necessity—Evidence of sufficiency of husband's estate to maintain widow—A Hindu proprietor's heirs in possession after the death of his widow, who had mortgaged part of the inheritance were sued by the mortgagee's heir who represented him to enforce the mortgage as binding on the land. There was evidence that after the mortgage was executed, previous mortgages made by the widow were paid off with the borrowed money, but there was no evidence connecting any of those securities with a debt of the husband, or that the mortgage was made for a legitimate purpose. Held that although the suit was brought by the representative and not by the original mortgagee, the burden of proving the money to have been advanced to the widow for a purpose justified by legal necessity was on the plaintiff, and that it was incumbent on him to adduce sufficient evidence of the nature of the transaction. That general evidence to the effect that the husband died in debt and that the widow substituted new securities at reduced interest for former mortgages was not sufficient to exempt the plaintiff from having to prove the particulars of the transaction and its justification. That the burden of proving that the estate left by the husband was sufficient to maintain the widow was not thrown upon the defendants HUNOOMAN PERSHAD JANDY v MANJIRAO KOOVVEREE, 6 Moore's I. 178. — Purchase by son at sale for arrears of rent against father—Proof of bonâ fides of sale.—Where a son purchased a property sold for arrears of rent, on account of the default of his father, and both father and son were living together at the time of the purchase,—Held that the onus was on the son to prove that his purchase was bonâ fide. MUR SUHAYE MISSEER v. DEEN DYAL SINGH . . . . . 7 W. R., 275

179. — Alienation by manager of infant's estate—Presumption of bonâ fides—Obligation of purchaser to inquire—Necessity for charge.—Under the Hindu law, the right of a bonâ fide incumbrancer who has taken from a de facto manager a charge on lands created honestly, for the purpose of saving the estate, or for the benefit of the estate, is not (provided the circumstances would support the charge had it emanated from a de facto and de jure manager) affected by the want of union of the de facto with the de jure title. The question as to the onus of proof in such cases is one not capable of a general and inflexible answer, but the presumption proper to be made will vary with circumstances. Thus, a mortgagee, who is setting up a charge in his favour made by one whose title to alienate he knew to be limited, must prove the facts which embody the representations made to him of the alleged deeds of the estate and the motives influencing his immediate loan; but such proof must not be required from one not an original party, after a lapse of time and enjoyment and apparent acquiescence. Where, also, a charge is created by the substitution of a new security for an older one, and the consideration for the older one was an old precedent debt of an ancestor not previously questioned, the presumption will arise in favour of a consideration that binds the estate. The lender is bound to inquire into the necessity for the charge, and to satisfy himself that the manager is acting for the benefit of the estate. But if he does so inquire and acts honestly, the real existence of an alleged sufficient and reasonably credited necessity is not a condition precedent to the validity of his charge, and he is not bound to see to the application of the money. *HUNOONMAN PERSHAD PANDEY v. the purchase not only to show that, under the circumstances of the case, either the guardian had the power to sell or that the purchaser reasonably supposed he had such power, but, further, that the whole transaction, so far as regarded the purchaser's part in it, was bonâ fide. Following the principle laid down by the Court in the case of Kanailal Jowhari v. Kaminee Dabee, 1 B. L. R., O. C., 31 note, it was held that, when either the person who sells labours under disqualification, or the purchaser stands in a fiduciary relation to the owner of the property, the bonâ fides of the dealing cannot be presumed, but must be made out by the purchaser. *ROOP NARAIN SINGH v. 182. — Suit to set aside sale made by guardian—Act XL of 1858, s. 18—Fraud or collusion—Purchaser.—Where a plaintiff alleges fraud or illegality as a ground for setting aside a sale made under s. 18, the onus lies upon him to make out a prima facie case of fraud or illegality, and to show that the debt, which formed the consideration for the sale in such case, was one for which the minor was not responsible. Per PRINSEP, J.—A stranger purchasing from a guardian, acting under the authority granted under s. 18 of Act XL of 1858, will be entitled to every protection from the Courts, so long as it is not shown that he acted in a fraudulent or collusive manner, knowing that the debts, for the liquidation of which the purchase-money would be applied, were not debts lawfully binding on the minor. The burden of proof in such a case would lie heavily on the person seeking to set aside the alienation. But where the purchaser is himself the creditor, and therefore has the means of satisfying a Court as to the origin and nature of the debts and how they are binding on the minor, the burden of proof is shifted on the purchaser, when the plaintiff has established a prima facie case. *SIKHER CHUND v. 196. ——— Suit after successful intervention under s. 77, Act X of 1859.—Plaintiff's suit for rent against the raiyats of certain land alleged to belong to a mouzah (Baboolee) which they had bought at an auction sale having been dismissed in consequence of defendant's intervention, under s. 77, Act X of 1859, they brought an action against her to recover possession. The defence was that the land in dispute did not belong to plaintiffs' mouzah, but to defendant's mouzah, Gyutpore. Held that the plaintiffs were bound to prove their own case, and to show that the land belonged to their purchased estate (Baboolee). In this case, however, both parties had consented to have the case decided on the question whether mouzah Gyutpore was or was not in existence, and the defendant could not therefore make out a new case in special appeal. *MOONDUR BIBEK v. 204 Allegation of independent title—Suit to confirm title—In a suit by the lessee of the purchaser of the rights and interests of the first defendant to obtain possession of some portions of land alleged to fall within the share of the zamindari so purchased defendants contended that the plots which were the subject of suit, although falling within the ambit of the zamindari, did not in fact form a portion of it but were lakhs lands belonging to themselves by a title independent of the title to the zamindari. The evidence showed the principal defendant to have been in receipt of the rents and profits of the land in suit, as well as of his share of the zamindari. Held that the onus lay upon the defendants to show the alleged independent title, failing to do so, the prima facie title made out by the plaintiff ought to prevail. SIRUM DAN ALI v. MUTHUCORNATH DUTT 14 W. R., 226

205 Rival tenants—Resignation of tenancy—In a suit between two rival tenants claiming to hold under the same landlord, where one of them admitted the tenancy of the other, but pleaded resignation by him of his tenancy and a lease to himself, the onus of proof was held to rest upon him who made the allegation. KISHAY CHUNDER SHAHA v. 209 Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), ss 106, 108—Transferability of tenancy—Suit by zamindar to set aside a Court sale of his rayat's interest—A zamindari rayat mortgaged the land comprised in his holding and the mortgagee, having sued and obtained a decree on his mortgage, attached the mortgagor's interest in the land and purchased it at the Court sale held in execution of his decree. The zamindar, who had intervened unsuccessfully in execution, now moved to set aside the sale and to eject the decree-holder and the judgment debtor from the land. Neither party adduced evidence. Held that there was no presumption that the tenant was a tenant-at-will, nor was there a presumption that the tenancy was not transferable—such presumptions being contrary to ss 106 and 108 of the Transfer of Property Act respectively. The burden of proof therefore lay on the plaintiff and had not been discharged, and the suit must consequently be dismissed. APPA RAO v. SUBBAYYA I L R., 13 Mad., 60

225 ——— Right of occupancy—Permanent cultivators—Suit for ejectment—The defendant's ancestors were the only cultivating tenants of the lands of a certain temple from the year 1809 and in a suit brought by the temple trustees against one of the defendants in 1858 it was found that the occupancy of the defendants' ancestors dated back at least to 1803. In 1833 the defendant's ancestor was recognized by the Collector who then managed the temple as an hereditary rayat. In the patta account of 1827 defendant's ancestor was described as a cultivating arakudi ulavada; a term which does not necessarily imply a right of occupancy. Held in a suit by the trustee of the temple to eject the defendants after notice to quit that the burden of proving that a right of occupancy was not an incident of defendants' tenure lay on the plaintiff. KRISHNASANI PILLAI v. 226 ——— Right of occupancy—Permanent cultivator—Parawis—The defendant's ancestors or predecessors in title were the cultivating tenants of the lands of a certain temple from a date not later than 1827 in which year they were so described in the patta accounts. In 1830 they executed a muchalka to the Collector who then managed the temple whereby they agreed among other things to pay certain dues. They were described in the muchalka as parawis. In 1857 the plaintiff's predecessors took over the management of the temple from and executed a muchalka to the Collector whereby he agreed among other things not to eject the rayats as long as they paid kist. In 1882 the dues (which were payable separately) having fallen into arrear, the manager of the temple sued to eject the defendants. Held that the burden of proving the permanent character of the tenure set up by the defendants lay on them. Krishnasani v. Plaintiff, being a raiyat without a right of occupancy, but one who had got an amulnamah, sued for a pottah at the rate fixed by the amulnamah. Held that the amulnamah formed the basis of a special contract between the parties, and took their case out of the purview of the ss. 5 and 8 of the Rent Law; and that by the terms of the amulnamah the defendant was bound to give plaintiff a pottah on fair and equitable rates ("upajukta"), which were to depend on the rates which he himself obtained from Government. Held that the onus of proving that the rate which he claimed was fair and equitable was upon the plaintiff. KISHEN PERSHAD SINGH v. On the evidence in the case it was held that, though the case is a most obscure and of an unsatisfactory character, and that, although the plaintiff had given good reasons for holding that such part of the defendant's case as related to the missing receipts was not worthy of belief, yet that the defendant did give evidence of payment of the rent claimed, sufficient to throw back again on the plaintiff the onus of proving that the rent was still due. Plaintiff's evidence was silent on the crucial point of payment, her Dewan kept out of the way of examination, and no sufficient grounds had been assigned for reversing the decrees of the High Court. RAMOSWAR KOER v. —Presumption—Onus probandi—Limitation—Joint owners, Adverse possession between.—Under the former Limitation Act the cause of action, and under the present law the event from which limitation is declared to run, must have occurred within the prescribed period, and it lies on the plaintiff to show this. Accordingly, where the suit is for possession and the cause of action is dispossession, the plaintiff is bound to prove possession and dispossession within twelve years. Possession is not necessarily the same thing as actual user. When land has been shown to have been in a condition unfitting it for actual enjoyment in the usual modes, at such a time and under such circumstances that that state naturally would, and probably did, continue till within twelve years before suit, it may properly be presumed that it did so continue, and that the previous possession continued also until the contrary is proved. Such a presumption is in no sense a conclusive one. Its bearing upon each particular case must depend upon the circumstances of that case. Many acts which would be clearly adverse, and might amount to dispossession as between a stranger and the true owner of land, would, between joint owners, naturally bear a different construction. *MAHOMED ALI KHAN v. evidence of possession—Presumption of possession from title—Possession and actual user—Character of land in dispute—Mode of enjoyment.—It is only when the evidence of possession is strong on both sides and apparently equally balanced that the presumption that possession goes with title should prevail. The principle does not apply where the evidence of possession is equally unworthy of reliance on both sides. Dharm Singh v. Hurpershad Singh, I. L. R., 12 Calc., 38, explained. Possession, however, is not necessarily the same as actual user. When therefore the plaintiff has to prove possession of land in dispute within the statutory period of limitation, if there is anything special in the character of the land, for example, when it is permanently or temporarily incapable of actual enjoyment in any one of the customary modes, a presumption in favour of continuance of possession, though in no sense a conclusive one, may arise. *Mahomed Ali Khan v. Date of dispossession or discontinuance of possession—The claimants had shown that they formerly were proprietors of the land to which they alleged title, and from which they claimed to oust the defendants, but they had been dispossessed or their possession had been discontinued some years before this suit was brought by them and the land was occupied by the defendants who denied their title. That being so the burden of proof was on the claimants to prove that it possessed on at some time within the twelve years.

(XV of 1877) arts 143 and 144—In cases falling under art 142 of the Limitation Act the plaintiff must at the outset show possession within twelve years and can not rest merely on a proof of title, while in cases falling under art 144 the plaintiff may rest content with proof of title only in the first instance and the burden lies on the defendants to show that they have had a possession inconsistent with the title of the plaintiff for more than twelve years.

Act said that it was of such a nature that he or those under whom he claimed, had been in possession within twelve years before suit. Rao

Suit for possession—Limitation Act (XV of 1877), art 143—Evidence and proof of possession—A suit for the proprietary possession of land was defended on the ground of limitation resting on the defendant's possession, displacing the plaintiff's case; that her predecessor in title had possessed the land within twelve years before the suit. This defendant had a possession which was admitted to have extended back for seven years before the suit. The documentary evidence consisted of a series of documents such as were usually given to and received by the possessor of lands, and they extended throughout the period in dispute, going back far behind the twelve years which would bar. It was not necessary to consider whether the burthen of proof was shifted merely by the seven years' admitted possession, as the additional evidence raised the inference that the same possession had continued for more than twelve years. Held that the burthen of rebutting this inference had not been discharged by evidence given by the plaintiff, while the evidence for the defendant had amply sustained the burthen originally laid upon him to show his twelve years' possession. INNASIMUTU UDAYAN v. About the year 1830, a large tract of land was diluviated by the River Chutul within the mouzabs belonging respectively to the plaintiff and defendant and after reformation in 1837 a proceeding was taken by the plaintiff before the Magistrate under which he was ordered to be put in possession of a considerable tract of such newly-formed land, the Magistrate laying down the boundaries. After nearly twelve years (ie. in 1849), the defendant's father brought a civil suit to set aside the Magistrate's decision, and the ultimate finding was that the plaintiff had been in possession of the land described in the Magistrate's order from and since the date of that order. Held that that decree must be taken to have established that the plaintiff was in possession of the land described in the Magistrate's order, and had continued in such possession, the question in the present suit being whether the lands now claimed are identical with those so described. Held also that the onus of proving that issue lay upon the plaintiff, because the foundation of his suit was that, having been in possession, he was dispossessed as a consequence of certain measurements made by Government officers. Held further that plaintiff had failed to sustain the burden of proof. 300. ————— Right to alluvial land—Change in course of river—Boundaries.—Disputed settlement.—At the permanent settlement the River Gunduck divided mouzah Sohagpore (zillah Tirth ot) from the village of Dumri (zillah Sarun). In 1837 the river got into its southern channel, and a quantity of chur land to the north was resumed by Government and settled with the zamindars of Sohagpore. In 1846 it was again settled with the same zamindars, who remained in possession until 1848, when the river having returned to its northern channel the deara land was claimed by proprietors on the southern or Sarun side of the river: the consequence was an Act IV of 1840 suit which was decided in favour of the zamindars of Sohagpore. In 1856, on the expiry of the last temporary settlement, the question arose with whom Government should engage for the revenue, and it was finally decided by the Board of Revenue that a settlement should be made with the zamindars of Dumri, who accordingly obtained possession. The Board's decision proceeded on two principles,—viz., that a usage existed that the main channel of the Gunduck should be the boundary of the zamindari, and that therefore the interest of the zamindars of Sohagpore had been of a limited, temporary, and conditional character. These zamindars then brought a suit to impeach this settlement and to recover possession. After decision, appeal, and remand, it was finally decided by the High Court that the land in dispute was identical with that formerly settled with the maliks of Sohagpore, who (it was assumed) had a permanent proprietary interest therein. Held that the proper issues to be tried were: first, whether the land had been settled in 1837 with the maliks of Sohagpore as proprietors of alluviums which had gradually accreted to their estate, or upon what other grounds such settlement was made, the onus of proving gradual accretion being on the plaintiffs; and, secondly, whether there was at the permanent settlement, and has been since, a clear and definite usage such as supposed by the Board of Revenue, the burden of proving the affirmative of this being on the defendant. *RAJENDUR PERTAB SAHOO v. 305. Alluvion and*diluvion—Title—Limitation—Acts of ownership

—In a suit for declaration of title to, and recovery of possession of, alluvial lands which had been diluviated more than twelve years before the institution of the suit, the plaintiffs proved their title and possession up to the time of diluviation, and alleged that the lands had re-formed within twelve years, without alleging or proving possession during that period. The defendants, on the other hand, alleged that the re-formation had taken place more than twelve years before suit, and that they had acquired a title to the lands by adverse possession for that period. Held that in such a case the submergence of the lands after diluvion ought to be presumed until the contrary was shown, and that the onus of proving re-formation before twelve years and adverse possession was shifted to the defendants. Per Wilson, J.—As a general rule where a plaintiff claims land from which he alleges he has been dispossessed the burden is upon him to show possession and dispossession within twelve years. Proof of possession within twelve years does not necessarily mean proof of acts of ownership within that time. The nature of the proof of possession must depend on the nature of the case. There are many cases in which the party on whom the burden of proof in the first instance lies may shift the burden to the other side by proving facts giving rise to a presumption in his favour. In the case of lands gradually diluviated and gradually re-formed, if the diluviation has been more than twelve years before suit, the claimant, unless he can show possession since the re-formation, must at least show that he was in possession down to the date of the diluviation. Where the true owner is in possession at the time of diluviation, his possession is presumed to continue until the property has again become susceptible of actual visible possession. Proof of possession is presumptive proof of ownership,

because men generally own the property which they possess. In the present case the plaintiffs proved possession have been proved to be in a certain person

up to a certain point of time,—when there has been a diluvion, the burden of proving re-formation

is shifted to the defendants. In the present case

the plaintiffs proved possession up to the time of diluvion, and alleged that the lands had re-formed within twelve years, without alleging or proving possession during that period. The defendants alleged that the re-formation had taken place

more than twelve years before suit, and that they had acquired a title to the lands by adverse possession for that period. Held that in such a case the submergence of the lands after diluvion ought to be presumed until the contrary

was shown, and that the onus of proving re-formation before twelve years and adverse possession was shifted to the defendants. Per

in dispute were re-formation on the site of the

of the pottidar and the darpattidar were re-acquired by them in the years 1879, 1880 1883, and 1892,

the defence was that the lands were not re-formation,

but accretion to the defendant's village of C. Held that, as the plaintiff's title to and possession of the villages of, H and M, down to the time of their diluvion, was not denied and as it was found that the disputed plots of land were part of the said

villages, it was not incumbent on the plaintiffs to prove possession of the land in dispute previous to the diluvion on, but the onus lay on the defendants to prove adverse possession for more than twelve years

a village on the southern bank, who disputed with those of a village on the northern bank, the ownership of alluvial land formed by the Ganges. The current,

after having encroached upon the southern bank,

went away from that side of the river towards the northern, leaving the tract of alluvial land now in dispute. This appeared on its previous site to the south of the main stream. It was then carried away by diluvion, and again appeared after that. This land was claimed by the plaintiffs, not as part of their old land, but on the strength of their having possessed it for more than twelve years.

Held that the plaintiffs were entitled to the land. The evidence did not support their claim, the burden of proof being on them. It was shown that after the second recession of the river towards the north, and after the re-appearance of the alluvial land on the south of the river, the plaintiffs had not shown possession of the land in dispute for more than twelve years. The burden of proof was on the plaintiffs current, the land had been taken by the Government into their possession, and that the latter had made over the greater part of it to the defendants who had since held this part. 308. ————— Limitation Act (XV of 1877), sch. II, arts. 142, 144—Boundaries, Dispute as to—Ownership of land reclaimed from a bhil contested between proprietors of contiguous estates—Prior possession of land by one of two claimants—Presumption as to continuance of possession of land by original owner, limitation being pleaded by party in possession.—In suits relating to disputed boundaries where the decision of the lower Court as to the ownership involves questions of the correctness of surveys, maps, recorded description, and other such evidence, the appellant should do more than show points requiring explanation. He should be prepared to show in what respect the decision has been wrong in regard to the evidence, and what other course would be right. The question was as to the ownership of land reclaimed from a bhil within the confines of one or other of two adjoining revenue mehals, the one belonging to the plaintiff, the other to the defendants, and involved the identification of the land in suit with some that had been covered with water, but of which the plaintiff's possession, with title, had been affirmed in proceedings of the revenue survey in 1857. In consequence of the nature and condition of the land, there was no evidence of any act of possession done by either party during the first two years of the twelve immediately preceding the date of the institution of the suit, and during the last ten years the defendants had been in possession. The latter, having tried and failed to establish adverse possession in themselves, contended that, even if the plaintiff's possession had been shown to have existed in 1857, he could not succeed without his showing that his possession remained till later than the 9th April 1869, the suit having been filed on 9th April 1881, or unless he proved some act of dispossession by the defendants within that period. Held that the presumption was in favour of the plaintiff's possession, which had been with apparent title, having in fact continued over the two years in question, as to which continuance there was no evidence to the contrary. If the burden was on the plaintiff to show possession down to within twelve years of suit, it had been discharged. RAJKUMAR ROY v. GOBIND CHUNDER ROY

313. ————— Limitation—Suit on bond—Instalment-bond—Indorsement of payment of instalments.—Where a defendant sets up the defence of limitation, he must plead it and show that the claim is barred. If, when the plaintiff has proved his case, the facts show that the cause of action accrued at a date earlier than the period of limitation, and the plea of limitation has been set up by the defendant, the latter will be entitled to take advantage of the plaintiff's evidence that the claim is barred, and to have judgment given in his favour. The obligee of a bond, by which the obligor covenanted to pay the sum of Rs. 800 by annual instalments of Rs. 200 and in which it was also agreed that payments of the instalments should be indorsed on the bond, brought a suit against the obligor alleging default in payment, and claiming to recover the amount of the bond. bond showed on its face enforceable of the payments for which credit was given. The obligor alleged that no instalments were paid after the third year, that therefore the debt became due at an earlier date than that stated by the plaintiff and that the claim was barred by limitation. Held that inasmuch as the defendant adduced no evidence to show that the later instalments were not paid and inasmuch as the evidence produced by the plaintiff did not show that the debt accrued at a date earlier than the limitation period, the plea of limitation failed. RADHA PRASAD SINGH v. The partition was not proved and the suit was dismissed on the ground of limitation. On second appeal it was contended that, if the partition was held not to be proved, the family must be held to be joint, and as the possession of one member could not be adverse to another, the decree dismissing the suit on the ground of limitation was erroneous. Held that as the family was admittedly not joint the plaintiff was bound to remove the bar of limitation by showing some sort of possession by himself within twelve years before his suit could be entertained and, as he had not done so, his suit was properly dismissed. TOLSHI PERSHAD v. years' adverse possession by the defendant. In each case the plaintiff must plead his title, and if that title is in issue he must make it out by at least prima facie evidence before the defendant can be put to proof of his defence. Where the defence is twelve years' adverse possession the defendant must plead and make out the title he alleges and thus show that the title of the plaintiff which otherwise had been proved or admitted, was lost. In a suit for possession of land by redemption of mortgage, the very nature of which presupposes that the possession of the defendant or his predecessor was lawful, the plaintiff must in his plaint show the title upon which he relies, and therefore a title subsisting at the date of suit. Unless he gives prima facie evidence to show that his suit is within time, he fails to prove his title or subsisting right to the property. Philippe v. Philippe, L R, 4 Q B D, 127, Dawkins v. 322. — Evidence Act, I of 1872, s. 110.—The plaintiff sued to redeem certain land, alleging that it had been mortgaged by his father to the defendant in 1854-55. The defendant denied the mortgage, and alleged that he purchased it under a deed of sale from the plaintiff's father in 1849, and had ever since been in his possession as owner. The deed of conveyance was not forthcoming, nor was the alleged mortgage-deed. The Court of first instance rejected the plaintiff's claim on the ground that the mortgage was not proved. The lower Appellate Court reversed the decree of the Court of first instance. The defendant appealed. Held that the defendant's possession was prima facie evidence of a complete title, and that the plaintiff, who alleged that the defendant was merely a mortgagee, was bound to prove his own right as mortgagor, clearly and indefeasibly. Mere statements that the property had been mortgaged, which failed to establish any particular mortgage, did not shift the burden of proof, or require the mortgagee to show what were the terms of such mortgage, or his right to retain possession under it. *RAMCHANDRA APAJI v. The mortgage-money was payable on the 28th September 1806. If not paid, the property was to vest absolutely in the mortgagee without foreclosure. The defendant admitted that he had not foreclosed, but stated that Regulation XVII of 1806 was promulgated in Sarun on the 7th January 1807, and consequently that the money became due before the Regulation was promulgated. Held the onus was on the plaintiff to prove that the Regulation was promulgated before 28th September 1806. *SARITUNNISSA v. 326. — Profits.—In a suit for redemption, on the ground that the debt has been satisfied with interest, the onus is on the plaintiff. A mortgagee is not an assurer of the continuation of the same rate of profits as his mortgagor was able to raise. The defendants, admitting the proprietary title of the ancestor of the plaintiffs to the villages, alleged as to 10 biswas of each village that they were sold to their ancestors in 1842 by him for Rs. 1,250, and as to the other 10 biswas of each village, that they were subsequently mortgaged to their ancestors by him for Rs. 14,000, borrowed by him from them for the purpose of defending a suit arising out of the previous sale, which sum had not been satisfied from the usufruct. Held (STUART, C.J., dissenting) that the burden of proving the mortgage of the 10 biswas of each village of which the defendants alleged the sale lay on the plaintiffs. Per STUART, C.J., contra. *RATAN KUMAR v. R an heir of J sued the heirs of P to recover from them possession of J's aahams in the mortgaged property, on payment of a proportionate amount of the mortgage money paid by P. The plaintiff alleged that the mortgage to C had been made forty years before suit. The defendants contended that a much longer period had expired since the date of the mortgage that forty one years had elapsed since C transferred his rights as mortgagee that they had redeemed the property twenty one years ago and had been since its redemption in proprietary and adverse possession of the aahams in suit and that the suit was barred by limitation. Neither party was aware of the date of the mortgage and neither adduced any proof on the substance of that mortgage at the date of suit, but that assuming that notice was given to the defendants by the plaintiff to produce the mortgage deed and that they failed to do so, very slight evidence would have been sufficient to satisfy the obligation which lay on the plaintiff. Kishen Dutt Ram Pandey v Narendra Bahadur Singh L R, 3 I A, 85 referred to AURA BIBI v JAGAT NARAIN [I L R, 5 ALL, 295]

387. ————— Right to begin Adoption, Proof of—Proof of loss, and admission of secondary evidence, of a document alleged to have been executed—Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 65.—A suit for possession by right of inheritance was brought by a claimant, alleging himself to be the heir, against the alleged adopted son of the last male owner, denying that an adoption purporting to be made by the widow had been duly authorized by the deceased. The Court of first instance called upon the defendant to prove his title as a son by adoption, notwithstanding that the plaintiff was out of possession, and could not have succeeded, in the event of the defendant's failure to prove it, without first proving his own title as collateral heir by descent: thus in effect, proposing to make the establishment of the plaintiff's title depend upon the failure or success of the defendant in proving the adoption. The High Court pointed out the error of this proceeding, and the Judicial Committee affirmed its judgment, concurring also in its finding that the adoption had been proved. It was found also that the loss of the anumati-patra had been established, so that secondary evidence of it was receivable. *KALI KISHORE DUTT GUPTA MOZUMDAR v. 388. ————— Presumption of ownership—Possession—Suit for ejectment—Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 110.—It is usually for the plaintiff who seeks ejectment to prove his title. But where he proves himself to have peaceably enjoyed possession for a considerable time, the person who has recently dispossessed him has to meet the presumption of law that the plaintiff's possession indicates his ownership. In a suit for possession of immovable property and other reliefs, it was proved that the plaintiff and his predecessors in title had been in undisturbed possession for thirty or forty years previous to his dispossession by the defendant. The defendant alleged, but failed to prove, that the plaintiff had paid him rent as tenant-at-will of the premises. The lower Appellate Court, upon the finding that the plaintiff's possession was that of a licensee, modified the first Court's decree, which had allowed the claim in full. Held (by MAHMOOD, J.) with reference to s. 110 of the Evidence Act that, although in the first instance the burden of proving his title was on the plaintiff, it was shifted by his proving long undisturbed possession; that the defendant's failure to prove the alleged payment of rent went far to prove that the plaintiff's possession was adverse; and that the Court below, in acting upon the theory that such possession was that of a licensee, had wrongly set up for the defendant a defence which he had not set up for himself. *LACHHO v. The principle laid down by the Privy Council in Kishen Dutt Ram Panday v. Narendar Bahadoor Singh, L. R., 3 I. A., 85, applied. *Mahomed Noorul Hossein v. Hyder Buksh, W. consequence of defendant's negligence or misconduct—Jamabandi—Act XII of 1857 (N W P Rent Act), s 93 (h) 209—Act I of 1872 (Evidence Act), s 106.—In a suit under s 93 (h) of the N W P Rent Act (XII of 1851) by a recorded co-sharer against a lambardar for his recorded share of the profits of a mehal in which the plaintiff seeks to make the defendant liable under s 209, not only for the profits which the latter has actually collected but for those which through gross negligence or misconduct he has omitted to collect the burden of proving such negligence or misconduct rests in the first instance on the plaintiff. No general rule can be laid down as to the quantum of evidence which the plaintiff in such a case must give in order to shift the burden of proof on to the defendant. The mere production by the plaintiff of the jamabandi or rent roll is not sufficient to cast upon the defendant the necessity of proving that there was no negligence or misconduct in him. S 106 of the Evidence Act (I of 1872) does not apply to such a case. So held by the Full Bench, MAHMOOD J dissenting. Held by MAHMOOD J, contra that the production of the jamabandi by the plaintiff in a case where he claims his share of the profits according to the jamabandi and the lambardar-defendant pleads that the actual collections fell short of the jamabandi established a prima facie presumption in favour of the plaintiff so as to throw upon the defendant with reference to s 106 of the Evidence Act the necessity of proving circumstances which rendered it impossible for him to collect the profits according to the jamabandi. *MUHAMMAD INAYAT HUSAIN v. In a suit for resumption on the allegation that the defendants were in possession of a portion of the lands as invalid lakhiraj by withholding payment of the mâl rent thereof from after 1793, the defence was that the lands in dispute were valid rent-free lands existing as such from before 1790. Held that, on the grounds of the decision of the Privy Council in Harihar Mukopadhyaya v. Madab Chandra Babu, 8 B. L. free grant before permanent settlement.*—In the year 1862 the plaintiff brought a resumption suit against A in respect of the lands in dispute in this case, upon the ground that she was holding them by an invalid lakhiraj title, and obtained a decree. After some years the plaintiff brought the present suit against B, who derived her title through A; to have the rent assessed. B pleaded, by way of bar to the jurisdiction, that the lakhiraj grant, under which A claimed, was made previously to 1790. Held that the onus of proving this plea was upon B. HEERA LALL PORAMANIO v. mâl lands.—In a suit by a zamindar to resume land which has been held as lakhiraj, if the lakhirajdar claims under a grant of date prior to the 1st of December 1790, the onus is on him to prove it. If the lakhirajdar claims under a grant subsequent to that date, the zamindar is not entitled to a decree until he has shown in the first instance that the land claimed is part of his zamindari and at one time was mâl land. And in the latter case, the lakhirajdar is not put to proof of his title until the zamindar has established the fact of the land having once, at some time subsequent to 1st December 1790, been rent-paying land. *MAHOMED AKHIR v. 405. ———— Declaration of lakhiraj title—Assessment of rent.—In a suit instituted in 1877, A prayed for a declaration that he had a lakhiraj title to certain lands, the defendant stated that; the lands, for a declaration of a title to which A now sued, formed part of certain lands which had been the subject of resumption proceedings, which were terminated in 1863 by a decree declaring that the lands which were the subject of that suit, including the lands now claimed by A, were not lakhiraj. It being found as a fact that A had neither been a party to, nor been represented in, the resumption proceedings; that he had been in quiet and undisturbed possession of the lands which he now claimed for more than twelve years before the institution of his suit; and that proceedings had been taken by the defendant calculated to disturb such possession,—Held that, although the onus of proof lay on the plaintiff, it was not necessary for him to prove that the lands claimed by him to be held as lakhiraj had been held rent-free from before the date of the permanent settlement; but it was sufficient for him to prove that the defendant was, at the time of the institution of the suit, debarred by lapse of time from instituting a suit for the resumption or assessment of rent upon the land. *ABHOY CHURN PAL v. 444. ———— Act XI of 1859, s. 37—Incumbrance, Annulment of—Burden of proof—Tenure held since permanent settlement.—In a suit for ejectment by a purchaser at a revenue sale, the defence was that the defendants held the land as a subordinate talukh, which had been in existence and in their possession and that of their predecessors since the time of the permanent settlement. It was found as a fact that the tenure was in existence in the year 1798-99. The plaintiff's suit was dismissed, and he now contended that the facts found could not protect the tenure in the absence of proof that the tenure was in existence at the date of the permanent settlement. Held that, although in the first instance the burden of proof is upon the defendants, the fact that defendants were in possession for such a length of time was sufficient to discharge the onus and establish that the tenure was protected. That in a case like this no hard-and-fast rule can be laid down as to when the burden of proof shifts from one side to the other, and that each case must be governed by its merits. *NITYANUND ROY v. holder of the license is to keep a daily correct account showing the quantity of opium received and sold, and other details. Art. 18 sets out that on infringement of any of the conditions contained in the form or imposed by the Opium Act the license may be cancelled. The petitioner, a licensed vendor of opium, was convicted of having kept incorrect accounts in contravention of the rules made under s. 5 of the Opium Act, and having thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 9 of that Act. He was sentenced to pay a fine of Rs200, and in default of payment to undergo rigorous imprisonment for four months. Held that the conviction and sentence must be set aside, there being nothing in any of the rules made under s. 5 of the Act which would make the preparation of an incorrect account punishable under s. 9.

The power of arrest without warrant referred to in cl. (g) of s. 4 of the Criminal Procedure Code is an unqualified power, and not a conditional power, as in s. 24 of Act XIII of 1857, which only gives the right to a police officer to arrest without warrant in case the accused does not furnish the security required by that section. Where a police officer therefore, in respect of an offence under s. 9 of the Opium Act not coming under s. 14 of the Act, made a search in the house of the accused without an order of a Magistrate, Held that his action could not be justified, either under s. 24 of Act XIII of 1857 or under the Code of Criminal Procedure, and that he was liable in an action for damages for the illegal search. A gift of villages by a talukhdar to collateral relations, if effectively made in 1850, and whether absolute or only for the maintenance of the donees out of the rents and profits, was rendered, by the effect of the confiscation of 1858, inoperative after that event to establish an interest as against the talukhdar holding under a sanad comprising the villages. Where a claim was based upon the principle that the conduct of a sanad-holding talukhdar and of his predecessor had been sufficient to establish against him a liability to make good, out of his talukh, interests, as to which ground was supposed to have been given for his relations to claim,—Held that such a claim was not established merely by the claimants having been left in possession of villages, and having paid to the talukhdar only the proportion of the revenue assessed upon them, during the whole time of the troubles in Oudh, and afterwards. Held also that the question of the claimants having an under-proprietary right in such villages was entirely irrelevant to a claim for a declaration that they had proprietary right therein, on which latter title they sought to found a right to have their names entered in the settlement record; and held that, although there are cases in which the claimant of a proprietary right may be allowed to maintain on the same facts, that he is an under-proprietor, this claim was not one of them. *RAM SINGH v. nexation of the province, the kabuliat had been taken in the name of the plaintiff's brother as talukhdar, who afterwards had been settled with, at both the summary settlements. By primogeniture, whether lineal or by proximity of degree (of which latter kind there was no evidence as to its being the customary one) he was the heir. To him a sanad had been granted, and the talukhdari had been entered in list II under the Act of 1869. On the other hand, it was urged that the above was consistent with the existence of a trust for the benefit of the titular talukhdar's uncles, of whom the defendant was the survivor, they having assented to the recognition of a nominal title in their nephew. Held that in intention as well as in form the grant of the talukhdari had been made absolutely to the sanad-holding talukhdar. In regard to the state of things before annexation, it might have been questioned whether or not the property was being held benami at that time. But after the Oudh Estates' Act, 1869, had become law, the title shown by the plaintiff must prevail, and he must recover the estate, unless a trust for the defendant should have been established. There had been no consideration given, and there was nothing to create a trust. There had been no transfer, no estoppel, and no bar by time. In 1868 an award had been made by a body of talukhdars as arbitrators within s. 33 of the Act, between members of the family other than the present disputants. This as well as a wajib-ul-urz of one of the villages of the talukh was admissible as evidence of what was the custom in regard to its devolution. In 1879 the plaintiff had, on his brother's death, while admitting "the custom prevailing in my family of gaddinashini," joined in a petition that the defendant's name should be entered dakhil kharij in the revenue records. Held that there might be a withdrawal of any gratuitous admission, unless there should be some obligation not to withdraw it; that there was no such obligation here; and that there had been no proof of any title upon which the admission could rest. *MUHAMMAD IMAM ALI KHAN v. Will—Custom as to partition.—By the 8th paragraph of the Oudh proclamation of March 1858, it was declared that C L (at that time deceased), zamindar of Mourawan, and others, were thenceforward the sole hereditary proprietors of the lands which they held when Oudh came under British rule, and which form part of the subject of these suits. Summary settlements of the said lands were subsequently made with G S (one of the sons of C L) by the Government between the 1st April 1858 and the 10th October 1859; a talukhdari sanad was granted to him before the passing of Act I of 1869; and he entered into a kabuliati for the same. His name was not entered in the second schedule annexed to the Act, but C L's was. By a document dated 7th February 1860, relating to property in the district of Oonao, and by other documents similar in effect relating to property in other districts, G S directed as follows: "I have been requested by Government to submit an application on the subject of primogeniture, with a view that the talukh may not be split into pieces as I would wish. Now the custom that has been followed in my family for generations past is this: that the eldest member of the family continues to be the head, while the others remain obedient to him; but every one possesses a share in the talukh. Under the custom of the family, the other brothers are at liberty to have their shares separated, should they wish it. The head has no power under the old custom to alienate the estate without consulting every sharer. I therefore wish that the old custom of maintaining the share of each shareholder be preserved, in opposition to the one in accordance with which one member of the family is allowed to succeed." In suits for partition amongst the descendants of C L and of his brother, who together constituted a Hindu joint family governed by the Mitakshara law, all the property the subject of the suits having been found to be the joint property of the said family, it was contended on behalf of the appellants in the first appeal that all the estates included in the sanad to their father G S, and summary settlements, whether previously joint property of the family or not, became the separate self-acquired property of G S; that he was the sole malguzar thereof; and that he and his sons were the sole beneficial owners of it, and that he had no power to transfer it by will or by alienation inter vivos. Held that the sanad and summary settlements were a mere grant by the Government to one member of the family of property which belonged to the family jointly, and were not intended to enure to the sole benefit of the grantee, and did not affect the rights of the family. As regards such property granted to G S (if any) which was not previously part of the family estates, it was granted for services presumably rendered with the use of the joint family funds, and could not therefore be separate self-acquired property within the meaning of the Hindu law. Held also that, assuming any portion of such property to have been self-acquired by G S, he must, in consequence of Act I of 1869, be deemed to have acquired therein a permanent heritable and transferable right, and had power by will, or alienation inter vivos, to transfer the same. Held further that the document of the 7th

February 1860 and other similar documents, so far as they related to the property in Oudh, amounted to a will within the definition of Act I of 1869, s. 2. Taken in conjunction with other documents, and having regard to the acts of different members of the family under it, the same amounted to evidence of an alienation inter vivos which in G S's lifetime transferred the property to the family to be held as joint family property. Ss. 16-19 of Act I of 1869 have no retrospective effect. HURPURSHAD v. SHEO DYAL, RAM SAHOY v. SHEO DYAL, BALMOKUND v. SHEO DYAL, RAM SAHOY v. BALMOKUND

3. ——— Meaning of "intestate" as there used—Written but unregistered authority to adopt—Registration Act (III of 1877), s. 17.—The Oudh Estates Act, 1869, requires the registration of the writing by which an authority to adopt is exercised; but not the registration of the authority, which is required by the Act to be in writing. The Indian Registration Act (III of 1877), which does require authorities to adopt to be registered, expressly excepts authorities conferred by will. The word "intestate," in s. 13, sub-s. 1, of the Oudh Estates Act, 1869, means intestate as to the talukhdari estate; and the use of the word does not exclude from the exception in that sub-section a son adopted under an authority conferred by a talukhdar's unregistered will. A talukhdar by his will authorized his senior widow to select and adopt a minor male child of his family to be the owner of the entire riasat. This power having been exercised, the following objections to the adoption were disallowed: first, one founded on the will not having been registered, and, consequently, the authority not having been registered; secondly, one founded on the erroneous argument that the adopted son was not within the class excepted in s. 13, sub-s. 1, and therefore could not take under an unregistered will. BHAIYA RABIDAT SINGH v. The Judicial Commissioner, having called for the record under s. 622 of the Civil Procedure Code, set aside the decree, which had been affirmed on appeal. He was of opinion that the suit should not have been brought against the Deputy Commissioner in the above character, but would only lie against a manager appointed as Act XXV of 1858 directed or else against a guardian. Where the relation of talukhdar and tenant at a rent of land within a talukh has been shown to have existed at that date, and since the tenant cannot defeat the talukhdar's right of resumption on due notice, notwithstanding a lengthened duration of tenancy, he is entitled to an under-proprietary right, either on the ground that, by reason of this state of things having brought him within the meaning of paragraph 2 of the schedule to Act XXVI of 1866, or on the ground that time and undisturbed enjoyment have ripened his holding into a species of ownership. The issues between the parties raising only the question of some form of proprietary right, still, if the tenant had shown any right whatever to remain undisturbed by the talukhdar, such right would have been considered on this appeal and would have received effect. The allegation of a grant in perpetuity in 1826 at a rent to be varied according to the amount of revenue payable by the talukhdar, not having been proved, but the existence and origin of a tenancy having been shown at a rent, paid down to the commencement of the suit,—Held that length of enjoyment, coupled with such payment of rent, could give no greater force to the tenant's right than it originally possessed. ROHAN SINGH v. 2. ——— Execution of deed by pardanashin—Registration of deed—Evidence of execution—In cases of transactions by parda women mere registration does not go far to corroborate the proof of their validity unless a mutat on of names takes place which if done under a mooktearnama has not the same effect as against a parda woman as it has against a person capable of transacting his own business and acting for himself. Where the conveyance by a parda woman is impeached there ought to be clear evidence not of the mere signature by the party but that the secluded woman had the means of knowing what she was about. KUZUL HOSSEIN v AMJUD ALI KHAN 17 W R., 523

Held, in the same case, on appeal to the Privy Council, who affirmed the judgment of the High Court: A Court, when dealing with the disposition of her property by a parda woman, ought to be satisfied that the transaction was explained to her, and that she knew what she was doing; especially in a case where, without legal assistance, for no consideration, and without any equivalent, she has executed a document, written in a language she does not understand, which deprives her of all her property. In the case of a pardanashin woman who has no legal assistance, the ordinary presumption, that if a person of competent capacity signs a deed, he understands the instrument to which he has affixed his name, does not arise. ASHGAR ALI v. The deed was also executed in the absence of the person who was at that time the executant's chief adviser and the manager of her property. Lastly, it appeared that, as soon as the executant came to know what the true nature of the deed was, and that proceedings had been initiated in the Revenue Department for mutation of names, she took immediate measures to show her dissent from the provisions of the deed and her disapproval of what had been done thereunder.

There was nothing to show that the ladies had ever benefited in any way from the money advanced under the bond. Held that, even if the ladies behind the parda were in fact the two defendants, this evidence would not be enough to bind them, and that it was for the plaintiff, who sought to bring their property to sale on the strength of a transaction with them, to show that they were free agents in the matter, and, having a clear knowledge of what they were doing, accorded their consent to it. *Buzloor Raheem v. 20. ————— Sale of villages by a wife to her husband—Proof of execution of deed of sale.—The purchase-money had not been paid on what purported to be a deed of sale of villages by a Mahomedan wife to her husband for a price which, however, the deed acknowledged to have been paid. After her death, two of her relations, disputing the due execution of the sale-deed, sued the husband, who had obtained possession, claiming in the alternative either that they should obtain their shares in the property of the deceased, or, if the sale of the villages should be maintained, that they should receive their proportion of the price as due to the estate left by her. The two Courts below concurred in finding that the wife, a pardanashin, was capable of managing her own affairs, and that she had not received the price. The first Court inferred from the state of things that the wife had in a manner made a gift of the villages to the husband. The High Court reversed that judgment, and decided that, with regard to the probability of influence on the part of the husband, the absence of any independent advice for the wife and other circumstances, the transaction was without effect. The Judicial Committee found that there not being a case of undue influence exercised, either made by the plaint or raised by the issues, they found no evidence that the price stated was inadequate, or the sale an improvident one, or that the husband had been released from having to pay the price. From the findings on the evidence the pre-emption was that the wife intended to pass the property for some purpose, and that the suggestion of a gift being excluded, the deed operated as a sale according to what it purported to be. They did not throw any doubt on the sound doctrine, laid down in numerous cases, as to the obligations upon persons taking benefits from pardanashin ladies. 10. ——— Criminal Procedure Code, ss. 337, 339—Accomplice—Tender of pardon, Effect of—Subsequent trial of accomplice for connected offences.—A prisoner charged before a Magistrate at Benares with offences punishable under ss. 471, 472, and 474 of the Penal Code, made a confession to the Magistrate in respect of those offences. He was then sent in custody to Calcutta, and was there, together with other persons, charged before a Magistrate with offences punishable under ss. 467, 473, and 475. The conduct to which these charges related was closely connected and mixed up with that to which the charges first-mentioned had reference. Under s. 337 of the Criminal Procedure Code, the Magistrate at Calcutta tendered a pardon to the prisoner upon the condition specified in that section, and the prisoner accepted the pardon, and gave evidence for the prosecution. The Magistrate held that this evidence was not sufficiently corroborated, and accordingly discharged all the accused, but the pardon was not withdrawn, and there was nothing to show that the Magistrate was dissatisfied with the prisoner's statements or considered that he had not complied with the conditions on which the pardon was tendered. Subsequently the prisoner was committed by the Magistrate of Benares for trial before the Court of Session upon the charges under ss. 471, 472, and 474 of the Penal Code. He pleaded not guilty, but did not in terms plead the pardon as a bar to the trial, though he made some reference to the subject; and the Sessions Judge, having made a brief inquiry as to the proceedings at Calcutta, came to the conclusion that there was no sufficient proof of any conditional pardon, and convicted and sentenced the accused. Held that, by the terms of the conditional pardon granted to the accused by the Calcutta Magistrate, the conditions of which were satisfied as was shown by its never having been withdrawn, the accused was protected from trial at Benares in respect of the offences under ss. 471, 472, and 474, and was not liable to be proceeded against in respect of them, and that the trial and conviction were therefore illegal. Although s 337 of the Criminal Procedure Code does not in terms cover a case where a Magistrate holding a preliminary inquiry for committal against several persons tenders a conditional pardon to one of them examines him as a witness and subsequently discharges all the accused for want of a prima facie case against them, the words "every person accepting a tender under this section shall be examined as a witness in the case" mean that for all purposes (subject to failure to satisfy the conditions of the pardon as provided for by s 339) such a person ceases to be triable for the offence or offences under inquiry or (with reference to s 339) for any other offence of which he appears to have been guilty in connection with the same matter" while making "a full and true disclosure of the whole of the circumstances within his knowledge relative to the offences" directly under inquiry. The words last quoted refer to the importance when a pardon is tendered of encouraging the approver to give the fullest details so that points may be found in his evidence which may be capable of corroboration. The question of how far the pardon protects him and what portion of it should not protect him ought not to be treated in a narrow spirit. QUEEN EMPRESS v. GARGIA CHARAN I L R, 11 All, 70 parties concerned, where such intentions are clearly expressed, and are not repugnant to any general principle of English law. The Courts will not, in such a case, apply rules of English law which, though well established and binding on English Courts, are yet so special in their nature and origin as to be inapplicable to the different circumstances of this country. The members of a Parsi family, the heirs of one Framji Cowasji Banaji, deceased, entered into an agreement with one another, bearing date the 24th May 1851, by which they agreed that the remaining income, after paying the deceased's debts, of a certain estate which had belonged to the deceased, called the Poway estate—an estate situated in the Island of Salsette, and therefore in the mofussil of the Presidency of Bombay—should be apportioned "to the heirs mentioned in cl. 7 (of the agreement)"—i.e., among the various heirs of Framji Cowasji Banaji, deceased, the parties to the agreement—"but, after their death, their shares are to be enjoyed and received by their heirs and children from generation to generation for ever." It was contended that, Parsis being subject to English law, these words conferred an absolute estate in their respective shares upon the various parties to the agreement under the rule in Shelley's case. Held per BAYLEY, J., that the plain intention of the parties to the agreement, appearing on the face of the agreement, was that they themselves should take only a life-estate to the extent of their respective shares in the remaining income of the Poway estate; and that the rule in Shelley's case should not be applied so as to defeat that plain intention. Held on appeal (affirming the order of BAYLEY, J.) that, even assuming English law to be applicable, the English law so to be applied could not include the rule in Shelley's case, which is a law of property or tenure based on feudal considerations, and unsuited to the circumstances of India; that the rule of construction to be applied to the agreement must in any case be to give effect to the intention of the parties according to the plain meaning of the language; and that to construe the agreement as giving more than a life-interest to the parties thereto would be to defeat their obvious intention. *MITHIBAI v. 5. ———— The same agreement came before the Court for its construction in a suit brought by the parties interested for the administration of the estate of Framji Cowasji Banaji. In that suit it was contended, and was held by the Division Court, that the subsequent gift to the "heirs and children (of the signatories) from generation to generation for ever" was void as infringing the rule against perpetuities. On appeal,—Held that the settlement in favour of the heirs and children of each signatory was in law a valid settlement and not void as creating a perpetuity. In the absence of words in the context showing that they were intended to take less, the respective heirs and children of the signatories took an absolute estate. A gift to the heirs of A from generation to generation confers on them, when ascertained, the same estate as

7. — Husband and wife—Parsi Matrimonial Court—Act XV of 1865—Suit by wife for judicial separation—Alimony after decree dismissing wife's suit and pending appeal—Alimony pending petition for review of judgment—Practice in allotment of alimony—Discretion of Court—A wife sued her husband for judicial separation in the Parsi Matrimonial Court. Alimony was granted to her by an order dated 11th July 1891, which directed the defendant to pay alimony to her from the 15th April 1891, "until the final decree herein be passed." On the 18th July 1891 the suit was dismissed, and after that date the defendant ceased to pay alimony. The plaintiff obtained a rule for review of judgment, which was discharged on the 27th January 1892 and on the 18th March 1892 she filed an appeal against the decree dismissing the suit and against the order refusing a review. She now applied for an order directing the defendant to pay her all the arrears of alimony "pendente lite" from the date of filing the suit, or so much as had not been paid, and that he should pay her further alimony until the final disposal of the appeal. Held, (1) dismissing the application, that the words "final decree herein," contained in the order of the 11th July 1891, by which alimony was granted, meant the decree in the suit, and not in the appeal, (2) that the Parsi Matrimonial Court, constituted under Act XV of 1865 had no power to award alimony "pendente lite" after decree and pending appeal, (3) an unsuccessful wife is not entitled to claim alimony after final decree and pending appeal nor for the period during which she is seeking review of judgment. Quære—Whether the Court where a petition for review is pending has before it has a discretion to allow or continue alimony "pendente lite." The words "during the suit" in s. 33 of Act XV of 1865 include the period up to the making of a final and absolute decree. Filmer v. Filmer, I. L. R., 8 P. D., was living and by whom he had been adopted. Nineteen years afterwards the plaintiff filed this suit praying for a declaration that the pretended marriage was null and void, and did not create the status of husband and wife between the plaintiff and defendant. The defendant resisted the suit, and claimed to be the lawful wife of the plaintiff. The plaintiff and defendant never lived together as man and wife, nor was the marriage ever consummated. Held that under the circumstances the formal consent of the uncle and the tacit consent of the father were enough to satisfy the requirements of s. 8 of Act XI of 1865 which requires the previous consent of the father or guardian to the marriage. Held further that, such a suit not being in the category of suits referred to a special Court by Act XV of 1865, the jurisdiction to try it remained in the High Court, to which it had been given by s. 12 of the Letters Patent. Held also that the law to be applied was the English law (subject, however, to any well-established usage), that by the English law such a marriage would be an absolute and imperfect marriage capable of repudiation by either party after arriving at years of discretion, but capable also of being made a valid and binding marriage by the consent of the parties thereto after they had arrived at such age. Held further that the circumstances of the case showed that there had been such acquiescence in, and acceptance of, the marriage by the plaintiff after arriving at years of discretion as to render the marriage valid and binding on him, and incapable of subsequent repudiation. Consummation is the best proof of consent to a marriage, but is not the only proof. And semble that, although the practice of infant marriages is one which finds no warrant in their own religious system, the Parsis in Western India have in the course of centuries so generally adopted such practice from their Hindu neighbours as to give such marriages amongst themselves all the validity they possess amongst Hindus, making them independent of any question of subsequent consent or non-consent by the parties thereto. 11. — Parsi Succession Act (XXI of 1865), s. 5—“Widower,” Meaning of word—A widower on second marriage is still a widower relatively to deceased wife.—In s. 5 of the Parsi Succession Act (XXI of 1865) the word “widower” means a widower relatively to the deceased wife only, and without consideration of the fact or possibility of the widower re-marrying. D, a Parsi, died intestate on the 19th September 1885, leaving a widow (the defendant) and two daughters and the heirs of a pre-deceased daughter J him surviving. J had been the wife of the plaintiff, and had died thirty-four years before the date of this suit, leaving, as her heirs, her husband (the plaintiff) and one daughter, who was still living. After J’s death, the plaintiff married again, and his second wife was living at the date of this suit. Letters of administration to D’s estate were granted to his widow, the defendant. The plaintiff claimed a share in D’s estate, contending that he was the widower of J, one of the daughters of the intestate, and entitled as such under s. 5 of the Parsi Intestate Succession Act (XXI of 1865). Held that he was the widower of J within the meaning of the section, and as such was entitled to a share in D’s estate. She had never lived with the defendant as his wife. The Subordinate Judge held that the marriage was valid and binding, being of opinion that the custom of infant marriage among the Parsis was well established and recognized. On appeal the Judge confirmed the decree, holding that at all events in 1869, when the marriage took place, the custom was common and recognized as binding. On second appeal the High Court concurred with the opinion expressed in Peshotam v. Meherbai, I. L. R., 13 Bom., 302, that the Zoroastrian system did not contemplate marriage in infancy, but the lower Courts having found a custom had grown up among Parsis in India validating such marriages, and that the custom was in force in 1869, did not consider it open on second appeal to arrive at an independent finding as to whether the evidence established the existence of such a custom. Held that a Parsi suing to have a marriage declared void is “acting in the matter of marriage,” and therefore the Indian Majority Act (IX of 1875), which makes the age of eighteen the age of majority, does not apply to a question of limitation with regard to such suit. The age of majority in such a case is that prescribed by the Parsi Marriage and Divorce Act (XV of 1865), viz., twenty-one years. Held also that art. 120 of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877) was applicable to the above suit, and that the plaintiff having, for the purpose of bringing the suit, attained her majority at twenty-one, the suit was not barred. Act XV of 1865 contains no provision as to the age at which a Parsi marriage can be validly contracted, the matter being left to the general law which governs Parsis in that particular, just as the English Marriage Act (4 Geo. IV, c. 76) leaves it to be dealt with by the common law of England. BAI SHIRINBAI v. KHARSHEDJI NASARYANJI MASALAVALA

13. — Intestate succession among Parsis—Parsi Succession Act (XXI of 1865), s. 7, sch. II, cl. 2—Next-of-kin.—One Jerbai, a Parsi widow, died intestate and without issue, her father, mother, three brothers and two sisters having predeceased her. Two of her brothers and one sister had left children. Some of these children had also predeceased her, leaving children (grand-nephews and nieces of Jerbai). Two of this last mentioned class had also predeceased her, leaving children (great-grand-nephews and nieces of Jerbai). Held that Jerbai’s property should, in the first instance, be divided into three shares, i.e., one for each of the two predeceased brothers who left children, and one for the predeceased sister who left a child. Each brother’s share to be two-fifths and the sister’s one-fifth. These shares to be sub-divided among the descendants of the two brothers and the sister, respectively, no descendant being entitled to share concurrently with his or her ancestor, and, on each division and sub-division, each male taking double the share of each female standing in the same degree of propinquity. In art. 2 of the second schedule of the Parsi Succession Act (XXI of 1865) the gift to lineal descendants is substitutional in the sense that they take nothing if the head of their branch of the family is living, whereas, if he is dead, they stand in his place and take the share which he would have taken. In distributing an estate, therefore, “among brothers and sisters and the lineal of the plaintiff, the suit may proceed and be decided. PROSUNNO COOMAR ROY CHOWDHRY v. GOOROO CHURN SEIN. GOOROO CHURN SEIN v. OOLJUMONEE CHOWDHRAIN . . . . . 3 W. R., 159

14. ————— Right of suit—

Suit for declaration of title to, and for possession of, immoveable property—Disclaimer of real owner.—In a suit for a declaration of the plaintiff's right by purchase to, and for possession of, certain immoveable property, it was found on the evidence that the plaintiff was merely a benamidar for one of the defendants, and had no right to the property. That defendant in his evidence disclaimed any title to the property. Held that the plaintiff had no right to sue, being a mere benamidar, and neither the disclaimer of the real owner, nor the fact that he was a party to the suit, was sufficient to enable the plaintiff to maintain the suit when instituted, or to entitle him to have the real owner added as a co-plaintiff. Prosunno Coomarr Roy Chowdhry v. Gooroo Churn Sein, 3 W. R., 159, followed. HARI GOBIND ADHIKARI v. AKHOY KUMAR MOZUMDAR . . . . . I. L. R., 16 Calc., 364

15. ————— Suit for land sold in execution of decree—Actual purchaser.—In a suit for possession of land sold in execution of a decree by a person who claimed to have bought the right, title, and interest of the judgment-debtor in the land, but who, in fact, was not the real purchaser,—Held the suit must be dismissed because of the non-joinder as plaintiff of the real purchaser. KALLY PROSONNO BOSE v. DINONATH MULLICK

16. ————— Benami purchase—Suit for possession Real purchaser.—A suit for possession of property, which has been purchased benami, cannot be maintained in the name of the nominal purchaser; the real purchaser should be made a plaintiff in the suit. FUZELUN BEEBEE v. OMDAH BEEBEE factory, entered into an agreement, which (inter alia) provided that they should charge a uniform rate of Rs. 8-0 per pilla for ginning cotton; that of this sum, Rs. 2-8-0 should be treated as the actual cost of ginning; and that the remaining Rs. 2 should be carried to a common fund, to be divided each year between the parties to the agreement in proportion to the number of ginning machines which each of them possessed. The agreement was to be in force for four years. The other parties had carried out the agreement, but the defendant, although he had carried the Rs. 2 to a separate account, refused to pay the plaintiff his share of the amount. He also refused to pay the other two parties their shares. The accounts had been duly made up, showing the sums which the defendant under the agreement had to pay both to the plaintiff and the two other parties to the agreement. The plaintiff sued the defendant for his share. The defendant contended that the plaintiff ought to have made the other parties to the agreement parties to the suit. Held that the other parties to the agreement were not necessary parties to the suit. The accounts had been made up and were admittedly correct, and they showed that the defendant had nothing to receive from any of the parties to the agreement, but that he was indebted in a definite sum to the plaintiff. HARIBHAI MANEKJI v. 37. ————— Lease—Suit by one of several joint lessors for his share of rent.—One of several joint lessors of certain land sued the lessee for his share of the rent payable under the lease to all the lessors, making the other lessors defendants. Held that the suit was not maintainable, and the making of the other lessors defendants did not cure the defect in the suit. MANOHAR DAS v. MANZUR ALI. I. L. R., 5 All., 40

38. ————— Suit for ejectment—Landlord and tenant—Possession, suit for, by one of several proprietors.—The owners of a 13-anna share of a julkar sued to eject a lessee on his refusal to pay an enhanced rent. Held that he could not be ejected by a suit brought by one only of several proprietors. A lease granted by all the proprietors cannot be varied or terminated at the suit of one. BOLLYE SATEE v. AKRAM ALLY

39. ————— Suit for possession—Lessors.—Plaintiff sued to recover possession of certain land said to have been included in a talukh pottah given him by the zamindars, alleging that defendants were obstructing his possession. For the defence it was averred that these lands fell within a 9-anna share which belonged to one D, and that by process of sale they became the right of other parties under whom defendants held as lessees. Held that it was unnecessary to make the lessors on either side parties in the case. NAGUR CHAND v. He left a widow, B, and a minor son, M. At his death he made a will bequeathing his property to his son, and appointing certain executors to manage the property during the son's minority. The son died in 1877, leaving a minor widow, N. In 1879 one of the executors obtained probate of L's will from the High Court. In 1884 a suit was filed, on behalf of the minor N, against her mother-in-law, B, to recover possession of the property covered by the will of L. One of the defences to the suit was that the property in dispute had vested in the executor, who had obtained probate of the will, and that, as the defendant held the estate under the executor, the suit was not maintainable without impleading the executor. Held that the executor was not a necessary party to the suit. S. 179 of the Indian Succession Act (X of 1865) as incorporated into the Hindu Wills Act (XXI of 1870) did not apply so far as it related to property outside Bombay. The property in dispute was situated in the Surat district. It was joint ancestral property. On the father's death, it vested in the son by survivorship, and on the son's death, it vested in the son's widow, the plaintiff in the present suit. Under the provisions, therefore, of the Probate and Administration Act (V of 1881), s. 4 (if that Act can be held to operate at all in the mofussil before a notification is issued under s. 2), the estate could not vest in the executor, as it had passed by survivorship to another person long before the Act came into operation. BAI HARKOR v. sale for arrears of revenue—Secretary of State for India—Res judicata—A Collector had sold an estate, purporting to act under Act VI of 1859, for supposed arrears of revenue. There was however, only an erroneous debit in the Collectorate books against the estate, in excess of the revenue actually assessed upon it, chargeable against it, and due from it. In a suit brought to set aside the sale in the Courts below, the Government had been made co-defendants, but were not respondents on this appeal, and the objection was taken on the argument of this appeal and by previous petition that they should be made parties, respondents. Held that it was a mistaken view that a decree annulling the sale in this suit would be res judicata in any future question or proceeding, as between the Government and the unsuccessful purchaser. The Secretary of State for India, therefore, was not a necessary respondent. His position was correctly explained in Bal Mookond Lal v Jirjudhan Roy, I L R, 9 Calc, 271 in the judgment of MITTER J. 85. ————— Contract made by member of joint family in individual capacity—Right to sue alone.—The firm of S & Co., the partners of which were W S and F E, took a contract from Government on 12th November 1877 to construct a barrel-hoase at the Gunpowder Manufactory at Kirkee; and on the 28th November 1877 the plaintiff agreed to advance money "up to Rs 15,000" for the purpose of enabling the firm to carry out the contract. Under the agreement, the plaintiff was to receive all sums to become due from the Government on the contractors' bills, and to pay the balance to the firm after repaying himself all advances with interest. On the same day the firm executed a power-of-attorney to the plaintiff, authorizing him to receive from the Government Engineer all such sums to become due to the firm under the contract, which power-of-attorney was deposited by plaintiff in the office of the Executive Engineer at Poona. In March or April 1878 W S left for England, up to which time Rs 4,900 had been advanced by the plaintiff, and a balance of Rs 14,942-5-10 still remained due to him after giving credit for the sums received on the bills passed by the Executive Engineer. On 24th July 1878 the plaintiff entered into a fresh agreement with F E similar to the former one, to make further advances to the firm up to Rs 16,000 in addition to Rs 15,000 on the same terms as those mentioned in the previous agreement; and by means of these advances the contract was completed at the end of 1879. In 1878 the defendant obtained a decree against W S and attached the right, title, and interest of W S in a sum of Rs 5,034-11-9 in the hands of the Executive Engineer, which was then due to the firm on the contract. The plaintiff, who alleged that Rs 13,700-1-11 were due to him from the firm, applied to have the attachment removed, which application was refused on 30th September 1879, and the sum attached was paid to the defendant. The plaintiff sued the defendant to recover from him Rs 5,034-11-9. Held that, although the plaintiff might be a member of an undivided Hindu family, still, as the contract was entered into with the plaintiff in his individual capacity, and as there was nothing on the face of the contract to show that the plaintiff was acting on behalf of the family, the plaintiff was entitled to sue alone. *JAGABHAI LALLUBHAI v. The defendant objected that the separated uncle and cousins of the plaintiff should be made co-plaintiffs in the suit. These relations of the plaintiff were not joint members of the plaintiff's family at the time of the mortgage, nor did they claim any interest in the equity of redemption. Held that the plaintiff's uncle and cousins were not necessary parties. In the absence of evidence to the contrary, it must be presumed that the mortgage was made by the plaintiff's father in his individual capacity. If the defendant had shown that, at the date of the mortgage, the plaintiff's father and uncles were undivided, it might have been presumed that the mortgage was on their behalf as well as on his own. But this the defendant had failed to do. several mortgagors—Adverse possession—Limitation.—The plaintiff sought to recover his father's share in two portions of family property, one of which had been mortgaged by the plaintiff's father and the father of the defendant No. 1 jointly; the other had been mortgaged by the plaintiff's father jointly with the father of defendant No. 1 and the husband of defendant No. 2. The first was redeemed by the father of defendant No. 1 alone in 1868; the second was redeemed by the defendant No. 1 more than twelve years before the suit. The parties were Mahomedans, and the plaintiff had a brother and three sisters, only one of whom (defendant No. 2) was a party to the suit. Defendant No. 1 contended that the suit was defective for want of parties, and that it was time-barred. The Subordinate Judge awarded the plaintiff's claim. The Assistant Judge on appeal held that the plaintiff's brothers and sisters were necessary parties, but that it was too late to join them, the suit with regard to them having become barred by limitation. He therefore dismissed the suit. On second appeal,—Held by the High Court that all persons interested in a property, which it is sought to redeem or recover on payment of a charge, are necessary parties, as otherwise the possessor may be exposed to many suits upon the same cause of action. Held also that the plaintiff's brother and sisters ought to have been joined as co-plaintiffs, the defendant No. 1's possession after redemption not being adverse to them. If it was adverse at all, it was adverse to the whole of the plaintiff's branch of the family, so as to bar the right of the group altogether. 147. ——— Suit for partition and to set aside order disallowing objection to attachment—Purchaser or mortgagee of a co-parcener's share.—In a partition suit all persons interested in the property to be divided must be brought before the Court. A purchaser or mortgagee of a co-parcener's share in the joint property is a proper, and even necessary, party to a suit for partition. A, B, and C were members of a joint Hindu family. In execution of a decree against B, a portion of the family property was attached. Thereupon A intervened and objected to the attachment so far as his own share was concerned. The objection was disallowed, and the property was brought to sale and purchased by D. A then filed a suit (1) to set aside the order in the miscellaneous proceedings disallowing his objection to the attachment; and (2) for a partition of the whole family property. In this suit he impleaded not only his co-sharers B and C, but also D, the auction-purchaser, and E, a mortgagee of B's share in the joint property. The Subordinate Judge, holding that the suit was bad for misjoinder of parties as well as of causes of action, returned the plaint for amendment by striking out the prayer for partition. On appeal, this order was confirmed by the District Judge. On A's application to the High Court under s. 622 of the Code of Civil Procedure, Held that the suit was not bad either for misjoinder of parties or for misjoinder of causes of action. Treating the suit as one for partition, the auction purchaser D and the mortgagee E were proper, and even necessary, parties. In 1893 the plaintiff, without joining the other members of his family, sued the defendant for damages for breach of the contract of service. Held (1) that the suit was not maintainable in the absence from the record of the other partners in the business; (2) that, under the circumstances, the name of the plaintiff in the cause-title could not be taken as designating his partners also; 3) that by reason of the fact that the amendment might deprive the defendants of the defence of limitation and of the other circumstances in the case, the plaintiff should not be allowed on appeal to amend the plaint by bringing his partners on to the record. *ALAGAPPA CHETTI v. the disclaimer in the present suit would not estop No. 2 from enforcing these terms in a subsequent suit against No. 3. Where under a contract between A and B an exclusive occupation of immovable property is given to A, he is the proper plaintiff in a suit for possession brought under s. 9 of the Specific Relief Act (1 of 1877). If B desires to sue immediately on the possessory right, he should sue in A's name, though for an injury to the reversion on him (B) may properly sue in his own name. The intention of the Specific Relief Act (1 of 1877) s. 9, is not to be frustrated by any private arrangement under which the ejector has acted or by which he may consent to hold on behalf of some other person. As between him and that person, his possession may be that of an agent, but the former holder he is the dispossession. Possession derived from him cannot be superior to his, and (the right of suit being given in general terms) is equally subject as his to the result of proceedings taken within the prescribed six months. A person who has been ejected from his property in suing to recover it under s. 9 of the Specific Relief Act (1 of 1877), may sue the actual ejector, or the person under whose orders or by whose authority the actual ejector has acted, or he may sue both, but the wrongdoer who has taken possession is the one from whom primarily it is to be reclaimed. If a third party desires to maintain the expulsion as an act done on his behalf, it is for him to come forward and avow it. He may claim to be admitted as a defendant, but if by the alleged party for the protection of the agent. The co-sharer made a deposition, in which he alleged that he was entitled to the rent not only as a co sharer, but also as the appointed agent of the plaintiff. The Court thereupon made him a party to the suit under s. 148 of the Rent Act, and passed a joint decree against him and the tenants for rent. Held that the Court was justified in making him a party under s. 148 of the Rent Act, but was not competent to pass a decree for rent against him. A party, who is brought in under s. 148 of the Rent Act, cannot be made subject to the decree for rent so as to allow execution to be taken out against him, whether his bona fide receipt and enjoyment of the rent is proved or not. The only person against whom such a decree can be passed is the tenant. Madho Prasad v. Ambar, 1. L. R., 5 All., 503, referred to. Per EDGE, C.J.—Semble—That the intention of the Legislature in allowing a third person who claims under s. 148 of the Rent Act to be made a party to the suit may possibly have been that, by bringing him in, he may be bound by a declaration in the suit that he had, in fact, received the rent, so as to prevent him in the civil suit from denying the fact that he had received it. In a suit by a landholder for recovery of rent in which a third person alleged to have received such rent is made a party under s. 148 of the N.-W. P. Rent Act (XII of 1881), the question of title to receive the rent cannot be determined between the plaintiff and such person, but can only be litigated and determined in a subsequent suit in the Civil Court. The only question between the plaintiff and the person so made a party which can be determined in the Rent Court under s. 148 is the actual receipt and enjoyment of the rent. *GOBIND RAM v. Whilst this suit was pending, certain parties intervened and asked to be made parties under s. 73, Code of Civil Procedure, on the ground that plaintiff's vendors were not entitled to the full share claimed, as they themselves had purchased a portion thereof. Held that the Court exercised a wise and proper discretion in allowing the intervenors to be made parties, for a decree in plaintiffs' favour, though not legally binding on them, would nevertheless have caused them great difficulty in all matters of rent. *SALIGRAM SINGH v. The plaintiffs, having become divided from their brother, now brought suits in 1894 against B and the mortgagors for a declaration of their rights to the mortgages and for possession of the documents and for rent of the land which had been collected by B. It appeared that there had been no denial of the plaintiff's rights before 1889, that no rent had been collected for several years before suit, the mortgagors who had remained in possession as lessees after the execution of the mortgages having refused to attorn to B. Held that the suits were not bad for the non-joinder of the plaintiffs' brother. MAHABALA BHATTA v. 1883 the shevaks issued rules prohibiting people from entering the Nij Mandir and Saja Mandir, which were particularly sacred chambers in the temple, except on payment of certain fees. Every visitor was required to purchase a ticket of admission to the interior parts of the temple. The plaintiffs thereupon sued for a declaration of their right of free access to the Nij Mandir and Saja Mandir at all times and on all occasions when the temple was open for purposes of public worship. They alleged that the new rules framed by the shevaks constituted an infringement of their immemorial rights of going into the said mandirs without any let or hindrance, of worshipping the idol there for themselves and their patrons and of receiving whatever their patrons gave them. They therefore sought for a perpetual injunction restraining the shevaks from interfering with their rights. The plaintiffs were 203 in number. Thirteen of them obtained leave to bring the suit on behalf of themselves and the rest under s. 31 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882). The defendants contended inter alia that the plaintiffs had each a separate cause of action, that they had no right to sue jointly, that they were not entitled to a declaratory decree under s. 43 of the Specific Relief Act, and that the plaintiffs, never having been obstructed in the exercise of their rights, had no cause of action. Held that the suit was rightly constituted under s. 30 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The rules made by the shevaks in 1883 interfered with the immemorial rights of the gora, and gave a common cause of action to all the plaintiffs. They were therefore entitled to sue jointly. Held also that the plaintiffs were entitled to a declaratory decree under s. 43 of the Specific Relief Act (I of 1877), as their title to free access with their patrons to the sacred shrines and to receive presents from their patrons unfettered by the rules of 1883 was denied by those rules. Held also that the plaintiffs were entitled to further relief by way of perpetual injunction under s. 61 of 1877, as the defendants had threatened to invade their enjoyment of property, and the intrusion was such that pecuniary compensation would not afford adequate relief. Held also that the shevaks had no authority to issue the rules of the 12th October 1843 or to levy fees from worshippers in respect of any public religious services held in the temple. KALIDAS JETRAM v. plaintiffs alleged that they and the 42 others named in the schedule were in the habit of worshipping the idol or of contributing to the worship and expenses of it, but it was clearly established by the evidence that any Hindu who chose was at liberty to give puja or render service and worship, and that others than the plaintiffs and the 42 persons named in fact did so, and that the plaintiffs and the persons named were therefore not the only persons interested in the suit. The plaintiffs applied for and obtained leave to institute the suit under the provisions of s. 30 of the Code. Notice had not been given to the other worshippers, nor had leave of the Court been obtained prior to the institution of the suit. Held that the suit was maintainable notwithstanding that the Advocate-General had not been joined as a party; that s. 30 of the Code of Civil Procedure being permissive and not prohibitive and dealing with procedure only, and not affecting substantive rights, the omission to state in the plaint that the suit was instituted on behalf of other worshippers having similar rights to sue as the plaintiffs was not fatal to the maintainability of the suit; that the Court was competent, with a view of adjudicating completely and definitively on the matter in dispute, to require an amendment of the plaint, and that the suit need not necessarily be dismissed; that the omission to apply for leave under s. 30 of the Code of Civil Procedure is not in itself ground for dismissing a suit, but, on objection being taken, the suit should not be allowed to proceed except on the terms of the plaint being amended and the requisite leave being obtained; and that the granting of leave under s. 30 is not a condition precedent, and may take place after the institution of the suit. Jan Ali v. No time was fixed for payment of the money, so that it became payable on the date of the bathchitta. The suit was instituted on the 19th July 1880, and came on for hearing on the 26th July, when an objection was taken that all the parties who ought to sue were not on the record. On the application of the original plaintiffs, the names of the father and the third son were then added, and the plaintiffs were described as surviving partners of the deceased son. At the time the additional plaintiffs were made parties, the suit was, as regards them, barred by limitation. Held that the additional plaintiffs were rightly made parties to the suit, notwithstanding that the suit was, as far as they were concerned, barred. In actions of contract it is the right of the defendant, if he takes the objection in proper time, to insist upon all the persons with whom he contracted being joined as plaintiffs; and if, after the objection has been raised, the plaintiff proceeds with the suit without taking steps to add the person or persons whose non-joinder has been objected to, and the Court finds that the objection is well founded, the suit must be dismissed. Held that, inasmuch as the original plaintiffs could only enforce their claim in conjunction with the added plaintiffs, and the added plaintiffs were barred by s. 22 of Act XV of 1877, the claim of the original plaintiffs was also barred. Boydonth Bag v. Grish Chunder Roy, I. L. R., 3 Calc., 26, dissented from. There is no equity, but often much injustice, in allowing one joint contractor out of many to sue a defendant, notwithstanding an objection duly made by the latter; and the Court has no right to allow one contractor to recover under such circumstances, though he may, no doubt, afterwards adjust the sum which he recovers with his co-contractors. *RAM-SHEBUX v. 256. — Non-joinder of parties—Application to join necessary parties refused by Court of first instance—Application granted by Court of Appeal—Order to add parties operating nunc pro tunc—Delay the act of the Court—Limitation.—The plaintiffs, as sharers in certain rent alleged to be due by the defendants, sued to recover their share. The defendants contended that all the co-sharers were necessary parties. At the hearing on the 21st January 1889 the plaintiffs' co-sharers applied to be made co-plaintiffs and to be allowed to adopt what the plaintiffs had done in the suit. The application was rejected, and the suit was dismissed for want of parties. On appeal, the District Court in July 1890 holding that the lower Court ought to have joined the co-sharers, passed an order making them co-plaintiffs, and then confirmed the lower Court's decree on the ground that at the time (3rd July 1890) the co-sharers were made plaintiffs the suit was barred by limitation. On appeal to the High Court,—Held, remanding the case, that the order of the lower Appeal Court of the 3rd July 1890, allowing the co-sharers' application, which had been made on the 21st January 1889, but had been refused by the Court of first instance, should be treated as operating nunc pro tunc, and that the co-sharers should be regarded as having been made parties to the suit when their application was made. The delay was attributable to the act of the Court, and the plaintiffs should not suffer from it. RAMKRISHNA MOHESHWAR v. RAMADAI

257. — Non-joinder of parties—Suit in name of a firm by its manager—Addition of name of other partner as co-plaintiff—Misdescription of plaintiff—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s 27—Limitation Act (XV of 1877), s 22—This suit was brought to recover a debt due to the firm of K S. The plaintiff was described as "the firm of K S by its manager S N." The defendants objected that one M was a partner in the firm and should be a party to the suit; he was joined as a co-plaintiff on the 27th January 1888. The defendants then contended that the suit was time-barred under s. 22 of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877). Held that the case was one of misdescription and not of non-joinder, for the action was brought in the name of the firm by its manager,

The order of the words in the vernacular plaint showed that S, the manager, did not sue in his own name. The defendants were entitled to have the name of the other partner disclosed but it being found as a fact that S was entitled to sue for the firm, the addition of M's name on the record came within the provisions of s 27 of the Civil Procedure Code. *HASTURCHAND BAHIRAY DAS v. 258. — Suit by one partner on joint cause of action—Consent of other partners to suit proceeding—Refusal to amend plaint in appeal—A suit was instituted by one only of the partners of a firm in respect of a cause of action which had accrued to all jointly. Notwithstanding that objection to the non-joinder of the other partners was duly taken the plaintiff entered him self with putting in a petition on behalf of the other partners intimating their willingness that the suit should proceed in the sole name of the plaintiff instead of applying to the Court to add the other partners as plaintiff. On appeal the High Court admitted the objection, and refused, under the circumstances, to add the other partners as plaintiffs. GULAR CHAND v. BALRAM DAS I L R, 1 All, 453

A suit was brought by R, the benamidar, to enforce the bond; J, the real mortgagee, made over the debt on a date previous to the suit, but executed the formal deed of assignment on a date subsequent thereto. The assignees were then added as plaintiffs to the suit. Held that a benamidar may sue, and, distinguishing the case of Chunder Coomar Roy v. Gocool Chunder Bhutacharjee, *I. L. 265. ————— Suit to cancel under-tenures—Act XI of 1859, s. 37.—On the 13th January 1871 A and B purchased an estate sold for arrears of Government revenue. The original proprietors asserted their right to collect the rents of a portion of the property by virtue of holding two shikmi talukhs and a howla tenure. This right was affirmed by the High Court in April 1875. B had previously sold his interest to C. On the 29th May 1876 A created a patni of his eight annas in favour of D and E, and on the 4th July 1876 C purchased all the rights of the original proprietors. On the 18th January 1877 A sued under Act XI of 1859, s. 37, to cancel or vary the tenures, making the original proprietors C and various tenants, defendants. C objected that A had no right of suit or cause of action, as he had parted with all his rights to D and E; and that, as his entire interest in the estate was only 8 annas, he could not sue to cancel a part only of the sub-tenures. D and E then applied to be added as parties, and were made plaintiffs. Held that A had no cause of action, as he had previously parted with all his rights as zamindar, to cancel these tenures in favour of D and E; nor could D and E

The minor, on coming of age, applied to have his name substituted on the record. The High Court, under s 73, Act VIII of 1859, ordered that his name should be added as plaintiff, and that the suit should be proceeded with. The last part of the prayer was withdrawn. The mortgages were executed to secure a decree-debt, the decree having been passed ex parte against the late karnavan of the tarwad. No fraud was alleged, but the lower Courts found that the karnavan had been guilty of fraud in allowing the decree to be passed ex parte. 278 — Likelihood of being affected by result of suit—Civil Procedure Code, 1852, s 73—Joining unnecessary issues—S 73 of the Civil Procedure Code enables the Court to bring in as parties to the suit any person whose rights appear to be involved and who may be affected by the result of the suit. It does not enable parties who are not liable to be affected by the result to come in and raise all other new issues which do not properly arise. Where the parties however, all acquiesce in the irregularity, and the suit went to trial on the issues raised by the added defendant the High Court did not think it necessary to quash the proceedings. PADMALOCHAN BEN v JAL CHAND GUPTA [I B L R., S. co-sharers with the defendants on the record in the property in dispute. The application was granted; the added defendants were found to be possessed of the share which they claimed, and on the proofs which they adduced the plaintiff's claim was dismissed. The plaintiff's claim as against the original defendants, who made no opposition, was decreed. In special appeal, on the ground that they should not have been made defendants, and that the plaintiff was not bound to prove his case against anybody else but the person against whom he had brought the suit, — Held that s. 73, Act VIII of 1859, leaves to the Courts of original jurisdiction a discretion in such cases; that the section is not limited entirely to cases where the suit as framed cannot proceed; that the words "persons who may be likely to be affected by the result" do not mean persons on whom the result would be legally binding. KALIPRASHAD SING v. On appeal, — Held that a co-heir is entitled to follow property of the deceased into the hands of any person who has misappropriated it, and such right is not taken away by the certificate. Therefore, any person who, with the consent of the holder of the certificate, has improperly possessed himself of property belonging to the deceased, and misappropriated it, may be joined as a co-defendant. In their written statement the defendants alleged that A had obtained the decree in question by fraud. Shortly before the present suit, V had mortgaged the house to H for Rs. 3,000. About three weeks after the suit had been filed, H advanced a further sum of Rs. 5,000 to V on the same security, and on the same day (12th December 1881) entered into an agreement with V, by which he agreed to buy the house for Rs. 45,000, the sale to be completed immediately after the decision of the present suit. The agreement provided that V should defend the suit; but, if the result of the suit should be to establish the plaintiff's right to seize the house in execution, then that H should be at liberty to cancel the contract of sale. Subsequently V wrote to H declaring his intention of abandoning his defence. H thereupon applied to be made a defendant to the suit, in order to protect the house from the plaintiff. Held that H was entitled to be made a party under ss. 32 and 372 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882). AHMEDBOY HUMBHOY v. This decree was confirmed on appeal, and K made liable for the costs of those defendants in respect of whom his claim had been dismissed. Meantime B, an old judgment-creditor of K's father, took out execution against K, and applied for sale of K's rights in the estate, which were accordingly sold, the purchaser being K himself. Subsequently one of M's daughters, a successful defendant in the suit brought by K, took out execution of her decree for

The sale was opposed, under s. 246, Civil Procedure Code, 1859, by K, a son of B, whose claim was summarily rejected, and K's rights were bought by one A. K then brought a suit within one year to set aside the sale, and to have his own title declared. The suit was against the purchaser and against the representatives of the zur-i-peshgidars; but on the petition of L, one of M's heirs, her name was added to the list of defendants. The first Court gave K a decree, but the lower Appellate Court found that his claim was barred by limitation against L, on the ground of non-possession within twelve years, and in respect of the zur-i-peshgidar because K's decree had lapsed by delay in execution. Held that L was interested in the result of the suit, and the lower Courts committed no error in law in admitting her to be a defendant under s. 73, Civil Procedure Code, 1859. RAM SURUN SINGH v. The High Court held that the property ordered to be sold was not the property included in the mortgage on which the decree for sale was made, and was not property which could be sold under that decree. In the meantime, the sale had taken place. Thereupon the owner of the property, which the High Court had held on appeal was not saleable brought a suit and made the decree-holders and auction purchaser parties to it, and claimed as against them his property. Held that it was not competent to the Court, acting under s 32 of the Code of Civil Procedure, to introduce into this suit as a defendant a person who claimed the property in suit by a title quite distinct from that under which any of the parties to the suit claimed. KALIAN BAI v RAM KATAY

Held that, though both defendants Nos 2 and 3 preferred separate appeals from the original decree, they only made the plaintiff respondent, and defendant No. 3 omitted to make the appellant (defendant No 2) a party to his appeal, but the relief prayed for in each appeal was that the original decree might be set aside so far as it was in plaintiff's favour and against each appellant.

Two others, in their written statement, pleaded that the purchase had been made in fraud of their rights, and claimed to be still entitled to their shares in the mitta on the ground that the purchaser must be held to have purchased for their benefit (Indian Trusts Act, 1882, s. 90). They further claimed that should the sale be set aside so far as the plaintiff's interests were concerned, the sale of their interests also should be held to be null and void. Before the suit came on for hearing, the District Judge suo motu ordered that these two defendants should be made plaintiffs in the suit under s. 32 of the Code of Civil Procedure. At the date when this order was made the claim of these defendants, had they sued to set aside

Thereupon A, claiming as the adopted son, and B, as the daughter of the deceased, made separate applications under s. 365 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1852) to be placed on the record. The subordinate Judge ordered both claimants to be entered on the record as legal representatives of the deceased plaintiff and proceeded with the suit. At the hearing, he found that A's adoption was proved, and that B was not the legal heir of the deceased. He therefore passed a decree for redemption in A's favour. Against this decree B appealed, making A alone the respondent in the appeal. The Appellate Court held that B, and not A, was the heir of the deceased. It therefore passed a decree in B's favour and against A. On second appeal to the High Court,—Held that the Subordinate Judge could not, under s. 367 of the Code of Civil Procedure, admit on the record both the rival claimants as legal representatives of the deceased plaintiff, or adjudicate by his decree between their rival claims. Held also that the Appellate Court ought not to have allowed one plaintiff to appeal against the other, or to have decided the rights of different plaintiffs inter se. *VITHU v. On receipt of the agreement, the Subordinate Judge issued notices to the parties to show cause why the agreement should not be filed, and was, on the day of hearing, informed that the agreement could not be filed owing to plaintiff's death. The agreement was then returned to the conciliator, who entered therein the name of the deceased plaintiff's heir and forwarded it to the Subordinate Judge. A question having thereupon arisen as to whether the conciliator could enter on the record the name of the heir of the deceased plaintiff,—Held that, although there is no provision in the Dekkan Agriculturists' Relief Act empowering a conciliator to enter the name of the heir of a party, and Government have not apparently under s. 49 (a) of the Act made any rules regulating the procedure before conciliators in this respect, yet when a Subordinate Judge is seized of a conciliation agreement, there is a proceeding before him under the Act. In the meantime, in a suit instituted by the beneficiaries against the trustees, a decree had been passed on the 14th April 1898, declaring that the beneficiaries were entitled to possession of the trust estate from the 31st April and directing the trustees to make over possession to them. This decree further directed that proper conveyances should be executed by the trustees when required. On the 5th July 1898, the beneficiaries applied for substitution of their names in the place of the trustees in the appeal filed on the 18th April. Held that, though the trustees were directed to execute proper conveyances when required, yet, having regard to the direction as to delivery of possession, the decree of the 5th April must be taken to have divested the property out of the trustees and vested it in the beneficiaries. The trustees therefore had not any estate left in them on the 18th April sufficient to justify their being appellants. Where therefore a respondent dies during the pendency of an appeal, it is for the appellant to take the initiative, and he is at liberty to select one or more persons to defend the appeal; and no person other than the person so selected has a right to force himself into the proceedings and to claim to have his name entered as representative of the deceased respondent against the appellant's consent. Persons so introduced on the record may or may not be the real representatives of the deceased respondent; but the merits of their claim to be such, on the ground of any right or status, such as that of adoption, is immaterial to the determination of the appeal. LAKSHMIBAI v. s. 365 to apply to such a case, the Court had no power to make K a respondent jointly with H, but should have taken one or the other of the courses specified in s. 367, so as to determine who was the legal representative of the deceased plaintiff; and that the course adopted by the Court was an exceedingly inconvenient one, which ought not to have been taken, even if the Court had power under the Code to take it. The "questions involved in the suit," referred to in the second paragraph of s. 32 of the Civil Procedure Code, are questions between the plaintiff and the defendant, and not questions which may arise between co-defendants or co-plaintiffs inter se. The section does not apply to questions which are not involved in the suit, but crop up incidentally during the pendency of an appeal, such as the question whether one person or another is the legal representative of a deceased plaintiff-respondent. *HAR NARAIN SINGH v. Pending the appeal, the plaintiff died childless, and, on her application, his widow was substituted for him as respondent. Subsequently the defendants-appellants applied to the High Court to have the deceased's father brought upon the record as respondent, alleging that he, and not the widow, was the deceased's legal representative and solely entitled to be placed on the record as such. The father made no objection to the proposed substitution. It was common ground that either the father alone or the widow alone was the deceased plaintiff-respondent's true legal representative. Held by the Full Bench (MAHMOOD, J., dissenting) that, having regard to the words "as nearly as may be" and "as far as may be" in s. 582 of the Civil Procedure Code, ss. 365, 366, and 367 might be applied, at all events analogically, to the case, so as to enable the real legal representative of the deceased plaintiff-respondent to be ascertained and brought upon the record; that the latter portion of s. 582 did not limit the earlier words of the section so as to make s. 368 the only provision applicable to the case; that a Court of record must have an inherent power to ascertain whether or not it has before it the proper parties to an appeal if the question be substantially raised; and that therefore the Court could and should, either before or at the hearing of the appeal, ascertain and determine, for the purposes of the prosecution of the appeal, the preliminary question whether the father or the widow was the legal representative of the deceased, and should act accordingly. Held also by the Full Bench (MAHMOOD, J., dissenting) that s. 32 of the Code did not apply to the case, and that, if it did apply, it would be the duty of the Court to decide whether the father or the widow was the legal representative of the deceased plaintiff-respondent. Held by MAHMOOD, J., contra, that the effect of s. 582 read with s. 587 was to place the defendants-appellants in the position of plaintiffs and the deceased respondent in that of a defendant for the purposes of array of parties; that consequently the provisions of ss. 363, 364, 365, 366, and 367 had no application; that, applying s. 368, the Court was bound to implead the person named by the defendants-appellants as a respondent to the appeal; that, applying s. 32, the widow occupied a position which gave her a sufficient prima facie status to be impleaded as respondent; and that, as there existed no authority in the Court allowing the Court to hold an enquiry whether the father or the widow was the true legal representative of the deceased plaintiff-respondent, the Court should bring both upon the record as respondents and proceed to decide the appeal after hearing both. *Narain Dass v. 9. ———— Beng. Reg. XIX of 1814, s. 30—Power of Collector—Jurisdiction of Civil Court.—It is not correct to say that, under s. 30 of Regulation XIX of 1814, the Collector is not at liberty to make any partition where the owners have already partitioned the lands amongst themselves. The true meaning of the section is that the Collector must be guided by the nature of the estate in applying the rules contained in the preceding sections of the Regulation; and that, where estates are not held in common tenancy, only a portion of those rules will apply. If the parties have divided the lands without agreeing as to the shares of the Government revenue to be paid by them, respectively, all the Collector has to do, when a partition has been applied for, is to make an assignment of the revenue in proportion to the interest of each share-holder. If they have divided the lands and arranged amongst themselves as to the portion of the Government revenue which each is to pay, it is open to the Collector to accept or reject that arrangement. The Civil Court has nothing to do with the matter. AJODHIA LALL v. GUMANI LALL

Held that the patnidars were properly made parties to the suits in order to try the question of the right to receive the rent as between the plaintiffs and the patnidars. *Kashee Ram Dass v. 31. ——— Partition between owners of separate shares in permanently-settled estate—Effect of, as against Government.—In the year 1226 F. (1819) a fourteen-anna eight-gunda share of a certain mouzah was permanently settled. The remaining one-anna twelve-gunda share was permanently settled in 1861. This share was sold for arrears of Government revenue in 1873, and purchased by the plaintiff, who subsequently applied to the Collector for partition under the Batwarra Act. The Collector refused to partition, upon the ground that the Act was not applicable to the partition of a mouzah held jointly by the proprietors of two separate estates. The plaintiff then brought the present suit, to which he made the Collector a party, to obtain a declaration that he was entitled to have his share separated from the fourteen-anna eight-gunda share by metes and bounds, and also for a decree directing a partition of the whole mouzah into two parts. Held that, so far as the plaintiff on the one hand and the owners of the fourteen-anna eight-gunda share on the other were concerned, the mouzah could be partitioned, but that such partition would not be binding upon the Government unless by consent. AJOODHYA PERSAD v. Civil Procedure Code, 1882,

■ 205—Revenue paying estate—Bengal Act VIII of 1876, Part II, and s. 4, cl. (8) and (9)—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 205—In 1851 an estate was brought under butwarra under the provisions of Regulation XIX of 1814. At such butwarra a portion of the estate being covered with water and unfit for cultivation was not divided but shared to the Collector to furnish the same under the provisions of Bengal Act VIII of 1876 but that officer refused to do so on the ground that the land "did not bear an assessed revenue and was not shown in the towar." In a suit brought under the above circumstances to compel the Collector to make the partition and in the alternative to have it made by the Civil Court—Held that though the reason given by the Collector for refusing was an erroneous one, he was not bound to make the partition under the provisions of Bengal Act VIII of 1876 as the land in suit was not liable for the payment of one and the same demand of land revenue, and was therefore not a joint undivided estate within the terms of s. 4 cl. (9) of that Act. Held also that the word "estate," as used in s. 205 of the Civil Procedure Code, must not be construed in the same limited and defective sense in which it is used in Act VIII of 1876 but must be taken to be there used in its ordinary significance and that consequently the plaintiff was entitled to a decree for partition under the provisions of that section. Chundernath Dandy v. The plaintiff sued J and the purchasers under J's decree to recover his mortgage debt by a sale of the property mortgaged to him. Held that J's decree not being for partition of the family property or for the separate possession of a share, was not one contemplated by s. 205 of the

Suit for partition by person in possession making a false claim—B a childless Hindu and a Brahmin adopted 1 his sister's son and subsequently apprehended that the adoption was invalid executed a will by which he left his estate to A. After B's death A obtained possession and remained in possession of the estate till his death which occurred before he had attained majority. After this joint possession of the estate was obtained by P and 5 two widows of B who set up a right of inheritance from A as being in the position of mothers to him in consequence of his adoption by their deceased husband. 57. Suit for larger share than that allotted by Collector—Beng. Reg. XIX of 1814, ss. 1 and 20, cl. 2.—S. 20. Regulation XIX of 1814, which says, "the determination of the Board of Revenue or Board of Commissioners on the paper of partition shall be final," refers to those questions only which can be legally determined by the revenue authorities, and will not prevent a regular suit being instituted to establish a right and title to the land, which a party has lost by a butwarra, notwithstanding that the plaintiff may have failed to make his objection before the Collector within fifteen days as required by cl. 2, s. 4, Regulation XIX of 1814. There is nothing in the butwarra law or in any other Regulation to prevent the Civil Court from entertaining a suit for a declaration of the plaintiff's right to a larger share than that recorded in his name in the paper of partition. Where a butwarra had been made, and the plaintiff had had a specific share allotted to him, but which share was less than his proper share in the estate, and the plaintiff brought his suit against the co-sharers generally, without specifying in whose share the quantity he had lost was included.—Held the Court could, in such suit, declare the plaintiff's title to the same, treating him as a shareholder to that extent only in the pattah in which it may have been included. *SPENCER v. not joined in the application for partition. So far as ss 111, 112, 113, 114 and 115 are concerned, a Civil Court is the Court which has jurisdiction to adjudicate upon questions of title or proprietary right either in an original suit or in cases in which the Assistant Collector or Collector does not proceed to inquire into the merits of an objection raising such a question under s 113, or on appeal in those cases in which the Assistant Collector or Collector does decide upon such questions raised by an objection made under s 112. under a prior agreement in lieu of certain lands originally held by him which fell into B's putti. The Collector left the parties to settle the matter between themselves and A brought a suit against B for his claim in the Civil Court. Held that in a case of this kind the only principle that can be adopted is that the Court should ascertain the relative value of the lands originally made over by the defendant to the entire lands of the defendant, and that it should assign out of the present share of the defendant lands bearing the same relative value to the whole that the former lands bore. This to be done without interference with the proceedings of the Collector under the butwarra law and the plaintiff (if successful) to be brought in as a co-sharer to a limited extent in the land assigned by the defendant. OOMA DUTT CHOWDHRY v HIRMOHAMMAD CHOWDHRY 22 W R., 453

In 1874 the shares of K and P were sold in execution of decrees against them, and in 1877 the remaining shares were sold, and finally the house became the property of the plaintiff and one A in equal moieties. The plaintiff sued A for partition and obtained a decree, but pending execution A conveyed his moiety back again to K and F. The brothers had continued to occupy the house notwithstanding the changes in ownership. F now applied under s. 4 of the Partition Act (IV of 1893) to be allowed to buy the plaintiff's moiety. Held that he was not entitled to the advantage given by the section. It is ownership, not occupation, that gives the right. After the sales in 1877, the house no longer belonged to an undivided family. F and his brothers were then either tenants in the house or trespassers. The question was whether the dwelling-house at the time the shares therein, which had not been sold to A, were transferred to the plaintiff belonged to an undivided family. When the plaintiff purchased his moiety, he and A became the owners in common of the house, and as between them s. 4 of the Partition Act had no operation. The subsequent purchase of A's interest by R and F did not confer upon them any rights which A did not possess. It was in their hands re-acquired ancestral property, but not property belonging to an undivided family within the meaning of s. 4. VAMAN VISHNU GOKHALE v. VASUDEV MORBHAT KALE and other sharers on partition.—Where the owner of an undivided share in a joint and undivided estate mortgages his undivided share, he cannot by so doing affect the interests of the other sharers, and the persons who take the security, i.e., the mortgagees, take it subject to the right of those sharers to enforce a partition and thereby convert what is an undivided share of the whole into a defined portion held in severalty. Where such a partition is effected under the provisions of Regulation XIX of 1814 before the mortgagees have completed their title by foreclosure and the consequential decree for possession, the mortgagees of the undivided share of one co-sharer who has no priority of contract with the other co-sharers would have no recourse against the lands allotted to such co-sharers, but must pursue their remedy against the lands allotted to the mortgagor, and, as against him, would have a charge on the whole of such lands. *BYJNATH LALL v. The defence was that the principle of an implied grant of easement upon severance of the tenement should not be applied to the case, but that the rights of the parties should be determined solely with reference to the decree made in the partition suit. Held that the principles of justice, equity, and good conscience should be applied to the case, and that the plaintiff was entitled to the right claimed, even in the absence of any express provision in the decree reserving such right. Quare—Whether the principle of an implied grant of easement in severance of tenements would apply in the case where the partition was effected by a decree of the Court in a contested suit and not by a consent of parties. *KADAMBINI DEBI v. For purposes of convenience, each was in possession of a certain portion, but there was no formal partition. The particular land in question in this suit (plot Nos. 1 and 2 of Survey No. 174) was a part of the land in possession of B. During the pendency of the partition suit, the defendants, the two remaining co-sharers, granted a lease of a particular plot of land included in the undivided estate to the present defendant. By the decree for partition the plot of land under the lease was allotted to the plaintiff who brought the present suit to recover possession of the piece of land on the ground that he was not bound by the lease. Held that s. 52 of the Transfer of Property Act does not apply to cases where the shares of the parties and their rights to those shares are not disputed. The mode in which the lands should be allotted between the ascertained sharers does not affect the right to any specific property. Held also that the tenant, not having been a party to the partition suit, was not bound by the decree, and the plaintiff was only entitled to khas possession of the one-third share of the plot leased out by his co-sharers. KHAN ALI v. An Amin was ordered to carry out the partition, and, in taking steps to do so, stated the principle upon which he proposed to distribute the common land. An objection was then for the first time raised by two of the co-sharers in the Court of the Assistant Collector to the inclusion of a particular piece of land in the partition, on the ground that it appertained exclusively to their share. This objection was disallowed by the Assistant Collector, and, on appeal, by the District Judge. Held that, at the stage of the proceedings when objections were taken, it was too late to determine questions of title under s. 113 of the Act ; that accordingly the Assistant Collector could not be said to have done so ; that the objections could therefore only be regarded in the light of objections to the mode in which it was proposed to make the partition, and that consequently there was no appeal from the order of the Assistant Collector to the District Judge or from the District Judge to the High Court. TOTA RAM v. This application was struck off, and a second application was made on the 23rd July 1888. The arbitrator then declined to act, and the application was struck off. 1. WHAT CONSTITUTES PARTNERSHIP.*1. ———— Participation in profits—

Application of English law.—M M & Co., merchants in London, carrying on business with W N W & Co., merchants in Calcutta, sought to make the defendant liable as a partner in the latter firm, under a particular memorandum of agreement between the members of the firm of W N W & Co. and the defendant. Held that such agreement did not constitute the Rajah a partner in or with the said firm. Participation in profits does not constitute a partnership. The question is, not whether the person sought to be made liable participated in the profits, but whether the trade has been carried on by persons acting on his behalf. There is no rule of law which imposes partnership liability upon a man who advances to others money for the purpose of carrying on their business, and in return secures to himself a share of the profits which may arise from the employment in the business of the money so advanced by him. PRATAN CHUNDRA SINGH v. MOLLOW, MARCH & Co.

On appeal to the Privy Council,—Held, although a right to participate in the profits of trade is a strong test of partnership, and there may be cases where, from such participation alone, it may, as a presumption, not of law, but of fact, be inferred, yet whether that relation does or does not exist must depend on the real intention and contract of the parties. To constitute a partnership, the parties must have agreed to carry on business and to share profits in some way in common; but where a contract is entered into between partners and a third person for the protection of that person as a creditor, whereby it is agreed that he shall receive in consideration of advances commission on the net profits of the partnership business, and large powers of control over the business are given to him, but no power to direct transactions, the Court, if satisfied that the contract was one of loan and security, will not interpret it as constituting a partnership. In applying the English law of partnership to cases in India, the usages of trade and habits of business of the people of India, so far as they may be peculiar and differ from those in England, ought to be borne in mind. MOLLOW, MARCH & Co. v. COURT OF WARDS . . . . . 10 B. L. R., 312; 18 W. R., 384 not be discovered, the bonus and any sum paid as rent would be refunded. Held that this was a partnership arrangement, and the payment of the money which went by the name of rent was not as by a tenant to a landlord, but as consideration-money for land forming a portion of the capital. *SREEMUNJUREE DOSSEE v. ss. 239, 240—Loan of money.—Held, on the construction of the agreement in this case, that such agreement did not create a "partnership" between the parties thereto, as defined in s. 239 of Act IX of 1872, but was an agreement of the kind mentioned in s. 240 of that Act. *BHAGGU LALL v. 5. ———— Account.

There is no analogy in respect of the manager being liable to account between a joint Hindu family and a partnership. Where it was arranged amongst the members of a joint Hindu family that the accounts of a banking business carried on by them should be kept, on the understanding that the profits, when realized, should be divided amongst the individual members in certain proportions, and that the expenses of each member should be credited and charged in the name of each member,—Held that this was in the nature of a partnership, and an account was decreed. RANGANMANI DAS v. KASINATH DUTT

6. ———— Ancestral business—Account.

An ancestral trade may descend like other inheritable property upon the members of a Hindu undivided family. The partnership so created or surviving has many, but not all, of the elements existing in an ordinary partnership. For example, the death of one of the partners does not dissolve the partnership; nor, as a rule, can one of the partners, when severing his connection with the business, ask for an account of past profits and losses. *SAMALBHAI NATHUBHAI v. of partner to nominate a successor—General devise not an exercise of power: Effect of default in exercising power of nomination—Good-will—Valuable asset.—T, J, and S, being large shareholders in the Great Eastern Spinning and Weaving Mills Limited, entered into an agreement in October 1873 to cause the said company to be wound up and to form a new company to take over its assets and liabilities, and to cause themselves to be appointed agents of the new company under the firm of V J & Co, and under that name to act as agents of the new company, subject to the terms of the agreement. The agreement provided that the firm of V J & Co should take the agency of the new company for a period of thirty years, that of the profits to be derived by the said firm out of the agency V should receive 39 cents, J 31 cents, and S 30 cents; that in case of a vacancy in the firm of V J & Co, caused by the death or retirement of any of the partners, the nominee of the dying or retiring partner should be admitted into partnership and should receive the share of such partner, and should exercise all his authority. In pursuance of this agreement, the Great Eastern Spinning and Weaving Mills, Limited, was wound up and a new company called "The New Great Eastern Spinning and Weaving Company, Limited" was formed and registered. Both the memorandum and articles of association of the said new company contained clauses providing that the firm of V J & Co, or whatever member or members that firm for the time consist of, should be agents of the company so long as the said firm should carry on business in Bombay, or until they should resign. The firm of V J & Co, having been constituted under the said agreement, became the agents of the said company, and continued to act as such down to the date of the present suit. No other business was done by the firm and the three partners divided the profits realized by the firm out of the agency business in the shares specified in the agreement as above mentioned. T died in 1874 leaving a will whereby, in exercise of the right vested in him by the agreement, he nominated a partner to succeed him.

became a partner and received 39 cents of the profits. In November 1875 J assigned his interest in the profits and the latter 40 cents. In November 1882 H died, leaving a will whereby he appointed his wife B his executrix, and left all his property to her for life, and after her death to his son. The will did not refer to the firm or nominate any successor in the partnership. In the present suit B as executrix claimed to be entitled to 61 cents or shares in the firm of V J & Co, up to the date of the testator's death, and to a like share in the profits earned subsequently to his death, or to be earned by the firm so long as it continued to carry on the said agency business of the company. The defendant admitted the right of the plaintiff to the share claimed in the profits earned prior to the testator's death, but resisted her claim to any portion of the subsequent profits. Held (1), on the authority of Beames v. Beames, Jr 11 Eq. 120, that the testator's will did not operate as an exercise of the power of nominating a successor in the firm so as to make the estate of the testator a partner in the firm.

employed in the business it must have been intended that in default of nomination of a successor by a retiring or deceased partner, the agency should be carried on by the continuing or surviving partners in the name of the firm, and that the interest of the testator in the firm upon his death therefore survived to the defendant. Held also that, although the plaintiff was entitled to an account up to the date of the testator's death, she was not entitled to a share of the good-will as an asset of the firm. The good-will of a firm is attached to the name and in the present case, by the partnership agreement itself the name was to be used by the surviving partners or partner for their own benefit. That arrangement took away all value from the good-will if indeed it was consistent with its being an asset at all. BACHCHAI v. BHARAT JADWAI I L R, 8 Bom, 536

2 RIGHTS AND LIABILITIES OF PARTNERS

8. —Construction of deed of partnership—Agreement to give managing partner commission—Dissolution of partnership—Loss of commission on dissolution—By an agreement, made on the 10th of January 1857, between A N and several other persons it was agreed that they should form a co-partnership for the purpose of erecting a mill for the manufacture of yarn. The capital of the partnership was fixed at Rs 100,000, divided into 100 shares of Rs 1,000 each. By the 4th clause of the agreement it was provided that, in return for the trouble A N had been at in establishing the factory "whatever cotton had to be purchased for the factory A N was to purchase, and whatever yarn should be made in the factory A N was to sell, and if whatever he should sell on account of the factory he was to receive from the co-partnership his commission at the rate of 6 per cent during his lifetime," and it was also provided that, though the purchases and sales by the co-partnership should not be made through A N, "yet upon the whole amount of the sales the co-partnership was to pay 6 per cent to A N during his lifetime." The factory was built, and its machinery procured and set up by A N, and both financially and otherwise the factory was wholly managed by him. Shortly after it commenced to work, it was found that the co-partnership had expended all its capital and was heavily involved in debt—incurred by A N without the sanction of his co-partners.—And that the factory was working at a loss; and at the suit of some of them, but against the consent of K N and a minority of the co-partners, the co-partnership was ordered to be dissolved. K N then claimed to be entitled to compensation for the loss of the commission he should have earned upon the sale of the yarn of the factory during his lifetime. Held that he was not so entitled; that as between his co-partners and K N there was no obligation on the former to subscribe more capital after the original capital of the co-partnership had been exhausted; and that there was no implied covenant on the part of co-partnership to continue to work the factory in order that K N should be in a position to earn his commission during his lifetime. Distinction between right to compensation for loss of fixed wages and right to compensation for loss of commission pointed out. When a partnership is wound up by the Court, all questions arising between the partners out of the partnership transactions should be disposed of in the winding-up suit. LALBHAI VALLABHDHAI v. 10. ——— Payments made by partners—Presumption—Dissolution of partnership.—Payments made by the different partners of a firm are presumed to have been made out of the funds of the firm where the contrary is not proved by any satisfactory evidence; and when a firm consisting of two members is dissolved by the death of one partner, the presumption is that the deceased was entitled to a moiety of the existing assets. KESHAV GOPAL GUNDE v. 11. ——— Dormant partner, Liability of—Bond executed by one of several partners—Right of creditor.—The doctrine that a dormant partner, when discovered, is liable for every debt incurred for the partnership by the active partner, is not absolute in the Courts in England, and is not to be followed by the Courts of this country, unless found in particular cases to be consonant with justice, equity, and good conscience. Where money was lent on a bond to a "malik and mukhtear" of a factory on his personal credit and the security of the entire factory, and it was afterwards discovered that other parties had a share in the factory, it was held that the lender was not entitled to go beyond his contract and recover from those other parties personally. NUNDEPUT MAHATAN v. In order to take a case out of these principles of the general law, it must be shown that the holder of the bill knew at the time he received it that the trans-

The purchases were made as for the firm, and were delivered on the partnership premises by the plaintiff. Subsequently, the goods were taken to C's house, and, together with certain private property belonging to C, were sold by auction, and the whole proceeds of the sale were paid by C to a bank in Calcutta to the partnership account with that bank, and were eventually remitted to B in England as from the partnership funds, and applied in payment of certain bills of the firm then due. upon all goods "belonging to" them in their godowns for balances that might be due by them. Some time after the date of the agreement, while there was a balance due, the defendants' firm took in a new partner. Held that the words "belonging to" included all goods in the possession of the new firm that came to them in the way of business. Held also that the new firm, not having given notice to the contrary, must be taken to have engaged the plaintiff as partner upon the terms expressed in the agreement with the old firm, and to have taken over the balance due at the time when the new firm was constituted as a debt due by the new firm. BALDEO DAS AGARWALLA v. 19 ——— Power of partner to borrow money—Winding up—Account—Suit for dissolution—Power of partner to mortgage partnership land—T, B, H, and W, the owners of a certain estate in equal shares, in 1863 entered into a partnership for "the cultivation of tea and other products" upon such estate. In 1864 H, F, and I joined the firm. In 1870 H died, and in 1871 T purchased the shares of F and I, and in 1873 of R. In 1876 T gave the Delhi and London Bank a mortgage on such estate as security for the repayment of money which he had borrowed from the Bank ostensibly for the purposes of the estate. The Bank obtained a decree against him personally for the money, in execution of which his rights and interests in the estate were put up for sale on the 20th June 1877 and were purchased by the Bank, which obtained possession of the estate in August 1877. In August 1879 H and W's executor sued I and the Bank, claiming a declaration that they were or had been partners with T in the estate, that if the partnership should be held to be subsisting, it might be dissolved or that if it had ceased to exist the date of its termination might be fixed and that in either event a liquidator might be appointed to take an account, and after realizing assets and discharging liabilities, might be ordered to pay them each one-

28. Suit against co-partners for money deposited and profits—Necessity for taking accounts.—In a suit against co-partners in a joint firm to recover money deposited as plaintiff's share, and to have accounts rendered of the profits, before any order can be made to the effect that the plaintiff is entitled to be paid by any one of his partners or out of the assets of the firm the actual money advanced, the whole accounts of the firm ought to be taken, and the ultimate liability of each of the partners ascertained. KALEE CHURN SAHOO v. 29. Suit for contribution among partners—Transactions by some only of partners—Obligation to ask for account of partnership dealings.—Four members of a partnership consisting of seven persons borrowed certain sums on account of the partnership for which they gave their joint and several promissory notes on which decrees were afterwards obtained against them. In a suit for contribution brought by one of the four members against the others, as having paid more than his share under the joint decrees,—Held that the giving of the promissory notes was not a partnership transaction so as to debar the plaintiff from a suit for contribution without asking for an account of the partnership dealings. DOYAL JAIRAJ v. 30. Partnership business—Money borrowed by agreement by one partner and paid into partnership business—Decree against one partner—Suit for contribution by him against other partners—Adjustment of account whether necessary.—In a partnership business entered into between the plaintiff and the defendants, it was agreed that each member, together with the gomasthas of the business, should be at liberty to borrow money upon his individual credit and to pay into the firm the money so borrowed to carry on the business. The plaintiff conjointly with defendants 4 and 6, in accordance with that agreement, borrowed several defendant R ₹10,000 in 1878, and for the remaining ₹10,000 gave a promissory note payable in July or August 1881. The plaintiff took out letters of administration to his father H J, and brought this suit on 16th July 1880, claiming a moiety of the ₹10,000 already paid by the defendant W to the first defendant R, and praying that he might be declared entitled to a moiety of the remaining sum of ₹10,000 payable by the defendant W, and that the same might be paid over to him. The defendant R alleged that he had assigned the claim against the firm of N K & Co., to the defendant W, and had received the consideration for such assignment in February 1873, and contended that if the plaintiff had ever any claim to any portion of the said money (which he denied), such claim was barred by limitation. He also alleged that he had carried on the suit No. 461 of 1869 without any assistance from the plaintiff's father H J, or from the plaintiff, who, although applied to, refused to assist him, and he submitted that under no circumstances was the plaintiff entitled to any of the moneys claimed by him without giving credit to the defendant for his (plaintiff's) share of the expense of prosecuting the said suit, and for the amount of proper remuneration to the defendant for the time and labour bestowed by him in the said suit. He also claimed that the partnership accounts of the firm of Hormusji and Rustomji should be taken, and alleged that on such accounts being taken a large sum would be found due to him from the partnership. The second defendant W paid into Court the ₹10,000 due on the promissory note above mentioned, and was dismissed from the suit. At the hearing the Judge found that, of the other moiety of the consideration for the assignment of February 1873, a sum of ₹1,000 was paid by the defendant W to the defendant R on January 23, 1878, and a sum of ₹6,000 on September 13, 1879. Held that the suit was not barred by limitation in respect of the said sums of ₹1,000, ₹6,000, and ₹10,000, and that the plaintiff was entitled to recover a half share of these sums from the defendant R, deducting all sums expended by the defendant in the prosecution of the suit No. 461 of 1869, no allowance, however, being made to him as remuneration for conducting the suit. Held also that the defendant might deduct the amount (if any) which might be found due to him on taking the partnership accounts, although a separate suit for such account would be barred by limitation. *MERWANJI HORMUSJI v. tory authority to the contrary. The effect of s. 45 of the Contract Act (IX of 1872) is to extend the English law applicable to trading partnerships to all cases of partnership. There is nothing either in that section nor in s. 26 of the Civil Procedure Code, read with it, to show that the representatives of a deceased partner must be joined in an action for a partnership-debt brought by the surviving partner, though it may be that they might be joined in such an action. *GOBIND PRASAD v. 37. — Suit by assignee of executors of deceased partner—Suit for declaration of right to share of partnerships and for an account.—R, prior to his death, was a partner with defendants in the firm of N C & Co. He died on 8th November 1884. On the 9th November 1885, his executors passed a release to the defendants, which recited that R's share in the firm and future business had ceased on his death; that the surviving partners had requested the executors to settle the account of their testator with the firm, and that, after examining the books and taking accounts, etc., a balance of ₹8,395-11-0 was found due, on payment whereof the executors released the defendants from all claims in respect of the share and interest of R. On the 7th April 1887, the executors assigned over to the plaintiff a one-anna share in the said firm, and the plaintiff, as assignee, brought the suit for a declaration of his right to the share and for an account. He alleged that there had been no accurate examination of the books at the time of the release; that the amount really due to the testator's estate by the firm had not been ascertained; and that it had been agreed on by the partners, at the time of the release, that in addition to the sum therein mentioned, the executors, as representing the testator's estate, should receive a one-anna share in the partnership. Held on the evidence that it had not been proved that all the partners consented to the alleged new partnership, and that on this ground alone the plaintiff could not succeed in his suit. *COWASJI RUTTONJI LIMBOOWALLA v. 41. Suits by different partners for specific sums of money on adjustment of accounts—Accounts adjusted by Amin appointed in previous suits—Contract Act, s. 253—Plaint, Amendment of, under s. 53, Civil Procedure Code, 1882. After dissolution of a certain partnership two separate suits were brought in 1889 by different partners for specific sums of money due to them and in the alternative, for such other amount as might be found due on an adjustment of accounts. Objections were raised against these suits on the grounds, inter alia, (1) that the suits were barred by the provisions of s. 5 of the Indian Contract Act; (2) that separate suits for the same matter were not maintainable; (3) that the suits would not lie in the Munsif's Court; and (4) that accounts having been already adjusted there was no cause of action. The Munsif overruled the first three objections, and held, as regards the fourth, that the adjustment pleaded had been ratified by the plaintiffs; he appointed an Amin, who examined the accounts and ascertained the respective claims of the partners and the plaintiffs in those suits obtained decrees on the basis of the Amin's adjustment of account. The present suits were brought in 1891 by certain other partners, who were defendants in the suits of 1889, on the allegation that the partnership account had been already adjusted by the Amin appointed in the suits of 1889 and that the debts and dues of all parties had been determined by the Court. The plaintiffs prayed for recovery of the amount due to them under the Amin's adjustment and in the alternative, for such other relief as might be deemed proper by the Court to grant them against any of the defendants. Held by NORRIS and BAKER JJ (RAMFIRE, J. dissenting), that the suits were correctly framed, and that such defects as there were in the plaint, viz., an incorrect statement as to the date of all the partners having been determined in the former suit, and the omission of an alternative prayer for an account were no bar to the maintenance of the present actions. *Taylor v. 2. ——— Suit for infringement of patent—Act XV of 1859, s. 25—Substantial difference in machinery—Injunction—Damages and account of profits.—The fact that a machine has been several times improved since the original patent was obtained is no argument against its being a useful invention within s. 25, Act XV of 1859. Cannington v. Nuttal, L. R., 5 H. L., 205, followed as to the test of "novelty" in an invention. In deciding whether a machine, patented as an entire invention, is an imitation and piracy of another machine previously patented as an entire invention, the question is,—Is the later patented machine substantially the same as the earlier one? The fact of considerable differences existing in the several parts of the two machines will not prevent the latter machine from being, as a whole, a copy of the earlier one; even where an exclusive privilege might have been acquired had the alterations in the later machine been claimed as improvements on the earlier one. Clark v. Adie, 2 App. Cas., 315, followed. Where a patent has been obtained for a machine which the patentee subsequently somewhat improves, a subsequent specification claiming the improved machine as a novel combination is bad, though the improvement might be claimed and protected as such. Where a new arrangement of the parts of a machine is claimed as an improvement, the arrangement must be clearly described in the specification. The mere substitution of one mechanical equivalent for another already in use will not protect it. Where a case of infringement of a patent has been made out, an injunction will follow as a matter of course. A plaintiff cannot pray for an account of profits and for damages. He must elect between the two remedies. If the plaintiff elects to take an account of the profits, such accounts will only be carried back to the period of one year before the filing of the plaint, in accordance with Act IX of 1871, art. 11. KINMOND v. In his plaint, after describing his inventions, he alleged generally that the defendant had made and used them at a certain place without his license. Held that, as required by s. 34 of Act XV of 1859, the plaintiff should have delivered with his plaint particulars of the breaches complained of; that the general allegation as to infringement contained in the plaint did not amount to such particulars; and that under these circumstances the plaintiff came into Court with a case which could not be tried. PETMAN v. BULL . I. L. R., 5 All., 371

In the same case, on appeal to the Privy Council,—Held the sole object of Act XV of 1859, s. 34, corresponding with s. 41 of the English Patent Law Amendment Act, 1852, is to give the defendant fair notice of the case which he has to meet, and it is quite immaterial whether the requisite information be given in the plaint itself or in a separate paper. Talbot v. La Roche, 15 C. B., 310, and Needham v. Oxley, 1 H. & M., 248, approved. Particulars of breaches must be distinguished from particulars of objections for want of novelty. In the latter case the particular instances may not be within the knowledge of the patentee and must be specified: in the former the defendant must know whether and in what respect he has been guilty of infringement. Where three patents of the plaintiff all related to one article,—a kiln for burning bricks,—and the second and third in date were for improvements upon the invention specified in the first, and the plaintiff alleged a particular kiln constructed and used by the defendant, and in his plaint not only referred to his patents, but indicated in the case of each of them the infringements of which he complained,—Held, reversing the decision of the High Court, that this was a sufficient compliance with the Act. LEDGARD v. The petition contained a statement of the claim and such particulars as are required in a plaint, and a prayer that, as part of the immoveable property claimed was situated in the Punjab, the Subordinate Judge would seek the necessary sanction to give him jurisdiction. The Subordinate Judge, considering that the suit should be instituted in the Delhi district, rejected the application. On 3rd March the plaintiff presented the petition to the Deputy Commissioner of Delhi, and was admitted by that officer to sue as a pauper. The Deputy Commissioner having applied for sanction to try the suit, the High Court, North-Western Provinces, and the Chief Court of the Punjab considered it advisable that the suit should be tried at Meerut; and on 10th June 1873 the Deputy Commissioner returned the petition for presentation in the proper Court in the North-Western Provinces. On 19th July the plaintiff presented it to the Subordinate Judge of Meerut, who received and registered it as a plaint. On 10th November the defendants filed written statements, wherein they urged that the plaintiff ought not to be allowed to sue in forma pauperis until he had proved his pauperism in the

The Court, with reference to the provisions of s. 411 of the Civil Procedure Code, directed that the plaintiff should pay Rs1,196 as the amount of Court-fees which would have been paid by him if he had not been permitted to sue as a pauper. The Collector having applied under s. 411 to recover this amount by attachment of the Rs1,439 payable to the plaintiff, the defendant objected that (i) certain costs payable to her by the plaintiff under the same decree, and (ii) a sum of money payable to her by the plaintiff under a decree which he had obtained in a cross-suit in the same Court, should be set off against the Rs1,439 payable by her to him, with reference to ss. 246 and 247 of the Code, and that thus nothing would remain due by her which the Government could recover. No application for execution was made by the plaintiff for his Rs1,439 or by the defendant for her costs. On appeal from an order allowing the Collector's application, it was contended that the 'subject-matter of the suit' in s. 411 of the Code meant the sum which the successful pauper-plaintiff is entitled to get as a result of his success in the suit; but that in the suit and the cross-suit taken together, the plaintiff ultimately stood to lose a small sum, the defendant being the holder of the larger sum awarded altogether. Held that the contention had no force, as execution had not been taken out by the plaintiff or the defendant or both, and it could not be said that the Government had been trying to execute the plaintiff's decree, or was a representative of the plaintiff as holder of the decretal order in his favour for Rs1,439, so as to bring into operation the special rules of ss. 246 and 247 of the Code between him and the defendant. Held also that the plaintiff was one who, in the sense of s. 411, had succeeded in respect of part of the "subject-matter" of his suit, and on that part therefore a first charge was by law reserved and secured to the Government, which was justified in recovering it in these proceedings from the defendant, who was ordered by the decree to pay it in the same way as costs are ordinarily recoverable under the Code. Held that the decrees in the suit and the cross-suit not having reached a stage in which the provisions of ss. 246 and 247 of the Code would come into play, no questions of set-off and consequent reduction or other modification of the "subject-matter" of the suit decreed against the defendant as payable by her to the plaintiff had arisen or could be entertained. *JANKI v. 6. sale in execution of decree—Suit to recover.—Certificate property which had been mortgaged to the plaintiff by a bond executed by J D on 25th February 1867 was sold to him in execution of a decree passed upon that bond on 3rd September 1868. Before such sale, but after the above mortgage, the property was attached by the first defendant, in execution of a decree of 1865 (i.e., J D's equity of redemption sold). The sale was set aside for irregularity, but the attachment remaining, the first defendant resumed proceedings in execution and got an order for sale, when the plaintiff released it from liability to such sale by paying into Court the money due, which he had a right to recover. Held that the first defendant in the property, and was therefore entitled to keep the money which saved the sale. *GOSSAIN MUNRAJ POOREE v. More than four years later, he brought a further suit against S to recover the interest due under the same bond. Meanwhile plaintiffs also lent money to S under a bond by which the same property was pledged, and also recovered a decree in execution of which the property was sold. P then proceeded to attach the same property in execution of his second decree, when plaintiffs objected under Act VIII of 1859, s. 246, but ineffectually; and after that, to protect the property which they had purchased, they paid a sum of money into Court which was subsequently taken out by P. They now sued to recover that money. Held that, under the circumstances, the payment of the money into Court was not a voluntary payment, and the plaintiffs were entitled to recover it. *MUTHOORA MOHUN ROY CHOWDHRY v. Payment by purchaser into the Post Office within time—Money not received by the Court until after expiration of time allowed by section—Civil Procedure Code (1882), s. 307.—A purchaser at an execution sale was bound under s. 307 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882) to pay the balance of the purchase-money into Court on the 19th June 1896. On the 17th June he paid in the amount to the Post Office at Yellapur, and obtained a money order which he sent to the Nazir of the Court. The Nazir did not receive the money until the 22nd June. Held that the payment was not in time. The Post Office is not the agent of the Court, and the purchaser was bound to see that the money reached the Court in time to satisfy the requirements of s. 307. RAMCHANDRA KRISHNAPA v. BELXA I. L. 11. Order in execution that defendant pay money into Court—Appeal by plaintiff against order—Payment into Court by defendant—Refusal of plaintiff pending appeal to take money out of Court—Attachment of the money so paid in by another creditor of defendant and payment to him—Subsequent application by plaintiff in execution for payment—Effect of his previous refusal.—In execution of a decree against the defendant obtained by the plaintiff, an order was made, directing the defendant (inter alia) to pay into Court the sum of Rs 140-8-0. Both parties appealed against this order, but pending the appeals the defendant paid the amount into Court. The plaintiff, however, refused to take it, on the ground that he had appealed against the order under which it was paid in; and the Court subsequently passed an order that the money should be returned to the defendant. But before this could be done, the money was attached by a third person, in execution of his decree against the defendant, and a few days afterwards the money was paid over to him. Shortly afterwards the appeal against the order directing the defendant to pay Rs 140-8-0 to the plaintiff was heard and the order was confirmed. Thereupon the plaintiffs applied in execution (inter alia) for payment of the sum of Rs 140-8-0. The defendant contended that he had already paid it. The Subordinate Judge directed the defendant to pay this sum into Court within one month. The defendant appealed to the District Court, who confirmed the order of the Subordinate Judge. The defendant then appealed to the High Court. Held that the orders of the lower Courts should be reversed. When the defendant paid the Rs 140-8-0 into Court in execution of the decree, the Court held the money on account of the plaintiff, and the plaintiff, who had not obtained a stay of execution, could not refuse to take it, because an appeal was pending. The Court did not justify the Subordinate Judge in treating the money as the defendant's and in ordering it to be paid to another judgment-creditor of the defendant without his having in any way expressed his assent to the money being so treated. *LAKSHMAN DADAJI v. s. 81 and s. 323—Act likely to cause harm, done without a criminal intent and to prevent other harm—Causing hurt.—The accused was a sepoy in a native infantry regiment. On the occasion of a fire in the city of Ahmednagar, he and the rest of his company turned out to assist in extinguishing it. He with other sepoys was stationed by their officer with orders to keep clear a space in front of the burning house, and not to allow any one not in uniform to intrude on that space. The police under the city chief constable were also engaged at the fire, and on some one of them coming round from the rear, they were warned off by the sentries. A fracas between the soldiers and the police took place, and the chief constable was kicked by the accused. For this he was charged before the Magistrate, and fined for voluntarily causing hurt under s. 323 of the Penal Code. In evidence it appeared that the police attempted to force the military guard, which had been posted as above stated, and it was further proved that the chief constable was not in uniform, and that the accused did not know who he was. It was not alleged that the kick was unnecessarily violent. Held that the conviction was bad. The Magistrate having found that the chief constable was not in uniform, and that the accused did not know who he was, the kick was justifiable as given in good faith for the purpose of preventing much greater harm under s. 81 of the Indian Penal Code, and as a means of acting up to the military order. *QUEEN-EMPRESS v. 1. ————— Capacity for doing wrong—Malice.—In construing s. 83 of the Penal Code, the capacity of doing that which is wrong is not so much to be measured by years as by the strength of the offender's understanding and judgment. The circumstances of a case may disclose such a degree of malice as to justify the application of the maxim malitia supplet aetatem. QUEEN v. AIMONA

[I. W. R., Cr., 43]

2. ————— Capacity of understanding to commit offence.—An objection that the accused is of such an age as not to have attained sufficient maturity of understanding to judge of the nature and consequences of his conduct is not one of a preliminary character, but rather a matter of defence to be considered with the other issues arising in the case. Where the accused is over seven years of age and under twelve, the incapacity to commit an offence only arises where the child has not attained sufficient maturity, etc.: such non-attainment would have apparently to be specially pleaded and proved. The "consequences of his conduct" mentioned in s. 83, Penal Code, are not the penal consequences to the offender, but the natural consequences which flow from a voluntary act. *QUEEN v. sense as signifying political alienation or discontent, that is to say, a feeling of disloyalty to the existing Government which tends to a disposition not to obey, but to resist and subvert the Government. Per RANADE, J.—“Disaffection” is not a mere absence or negation of love or good-will, but a positive feeling of aversion which is akin to disloyalty, a defiant insubordination of authority, or when it is not defiant, it secretly seeks to alienate the people and weaken the bond of allegiance and prepossesses the minds of the people with avowed or secret animosity to Government,—a feeling which tends to bring the Government into hatred or contempt by imputing base and corrupt motives to it, and makes them indisposed to obey or support the laws of the realm, and which promotes discontent and public disorder. *QUEEN-EMPRESS v. 4. ——— Exciting disaffection—Meaning of the term “disaffection” explained.—Any one who, by any of the means referred to in s. 124A of the Penal Code, excites, or attempts to excite, feelings of hatred, dislike, ill-will, enmity, or hostility towards the Government established by law in British India, excites or attempts to excite, as the case may be, feelings of “disaffection” as that term is used in s. 124A. Such feelings are necessarily inconsistent with and incompatible with a disposition to render obedience to the lawful authority of Government and to support that Government against unlawful attempts to subvert or resist it. The term “disaffection” may be taken as synonymous with “disloyalty.” The ordinary meaning of the term “disaffection” as used in s. 124A is not varied by the explanation appended to that section. When a person is charged with having committed the offence punishable under s. 124A of the Penal Code, his intention may be inferred from one particular speech, article, or letter, or from that speech, article, or letter considered in conjunction with what such person has said, written, or published on another or other occasions. Where it is ascertained that the intention of such person was to excite feelings of disaffection to the Government established by law in British India, it is immaterial whether or not the words spoken, written, or published could have the effect of exciting such feelings of disaffection, and it is immaterial whether the words were true or were false, and, except on the question of punishment, or in a case in which the speaker, writer, or publisher is charged with having excited such feelings of disaffection, it is immaterial whether or not the words did in fact excite such feelings of disaffection. *Queen-Empress v. The accused were prosecuted and convicted under ss 117 and 153 of the Penal Code (XLV of 1860) on the ground that the lines quoted above, specially the words "Fight again," were a direct instigation to the Ghatiks and Kamatis to renew the disturbances. Held that the meaning of the passages complained of was to be gathered from the whole poem. The general spirit of the poem was clearly in favour of peace and reconciliation. It consisted from beginning to end of a lamentation over the riots and the destruction and death they had caused, and of repeated counsel to peace and harmony between Hindus and Mahomedans. And there was nothing to indicate that the author's intention was to instigate the Hindus or provoke the Mahomedans to renew the disturbances. The words "Fight again" were no doubt objectionable but it would not be a proper construction of the words to allow them to override the whole context of the work. MATTER OF THE PETITION OF GOLAM AHMED KAZI
[1 L R, 14 Calc, 314]

2 ——— Giving false information to a public servant—Under s 182 of the Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), the giving of false information to a public servant is penal when either of two be to the injury or annoyance of any third person. A personated B at an examination called the Vernacular Sixth Standard Examination. A passed the examination, and obtained a certificate from the educational authorities in B's name. B thereupon applied to the Assistant Collector to have his for employment in the Revenue Department. On receipt of this application, the Assistant Collector

3. ———— Criminal Procedure Code.

ss. 342, 328, 540.—Examination on affirmation of one preferring a criminal appeal—Verification of petition of appeal.—In a petition of appeal from a conviction, the appellant falsely stated that the convicting Magistrate declined to summon his witnesses. The Magistrate to whom the appeal was preferred called upon the appellant to verify the allegations in the petition of appeal on solemn affirmation, and he did so. Held that the appellant had not committed an offence under s. 181 or 182 of the Penal Code. QUEEN-EMPRESS v. SUBDAYYA

[I. L. R., 13 Mad., 451]

4. ———— Giving false information

to public servant—Definition of offence provided for in s. 182 explained.—In order to constitute the offence defined in s. 182 of the Penal Code, it is not necessary that the public servant to whom false information is given should be induced to do anything or to omit to do anything in consequence of such information. The gist of the offence is not what action may or may not be taken by the public servant to whom false information is given; but the intention or knowledge (to be inferred from his conduct) of the person supplying such information. In the matter of the petition of Gulam Ahmed Kazi, I. L. R., 14 Cal., 314, dissented from. QUEEN-EMPRESS v. BUDH SEN

[I. L. R., 13 All., 351]

5. ———— False information to a public servant—False complaints to police.—Where as the result of a police investigation it appears that a complaint made to the police of the commission of an offence punishable under the Penal Code is false, it is not necessary that the complainant should be given any further opportunity of establishing the truth of his allegation before his prosecution under s. 128 of the Penal Code is ordered. QUEEN-EMPRESS v. RAGHU TIWARI

[I. L. R., 15 All., 336]

6. ———— and s. 189—Right of person

against whom information has been falsely given to institute criminal prosecution—Consent of public servant.—A person against whom information has been falsely given with a view to his injury has a right to bring a civil action for damages, with or without the consent of the public servant against whom the offence was committed; but he cannot bring a criminal charge under s. 189, or any other section of Ch. X of the Penal Code, without the permission of such public servant; the law looking upon the conduct of the person who gives the false information as an offence, not against the individual charged, but against the public servant to whom the false information was given. To constitute an offence under s. 182 of the Penal Code, the information given must be information which the informer knew

7. ———— Statements made by prisoner

for his defence.—Statements made by a prisoner for the purposes of his defence cannot be held to be "information given to a public servant" within the meaning of s. 182 of the Penal Code. QUEEN v. DANIA KHAN

2 N. W., 128

8. ———— Giving false information

to public servant.—S. 182 of the Penal Code does not apply where the public servant misinformed is only competent to pass and passes on the information, and the power to be exercised by him cannot tend to any direct or immediate prejudice of the person against whom the information is levelled. QUEEN v. PERIANNAN

I. L. R., 4 Mad., 241

9. ———— Furnishing false information

Cheating.—A person attempted to obtain his recruitment in the police of a district by giving certain information which he knew to be false to the District Superintendent of Police. Held that such person had not thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 177 or s. 182 of the Penal Code, or the offence of attempting to "cheat" within the meaning of s. 415 of that Code. EMPRESS v. DWARKA PRASAD

I. L. R., 6 All., 97

10. ———— Giving false "information"

to a public servant.—M falsely informed the Collector of a district that certain zamindars had usurped possession of certain land belonging to Government, with the intent "to give trouble to such zamindars and waste the time of the public authorities." Held that, inasmuch as such information was no more than an expression of a private person's belief that the Collector might, if he chose, sustain a civil suit with success against such zamindars, and as, had the Collector agreed with the informant, the result would not have been that he would have used his lawful power as a Collector or as a Magistrate to the injury or annoyance of such zamindars, or that he would have done anything he ought not to have done, M had not committed an offence under s. 182 of the Penal Code. EMPRESS v. MADHO

[I. L. R., 4 All., 498]

11. ———— Public servant—Forest

Act (VII of 1878).—Under s. 172 of the Forest Act (VII of 1878), a forest officer is a public servant within the meaning of the Penal Code. Any information given to him with the intent mentioned in s. 182 of the Penal Code is punishable under that section whether that information is volunteered by the informant, or is given in answer to questions put to him by that officer. QUEEN-EMPRESS v. RAMJI SAJABARAO

10 ————— and 211—Prosecution under s. 192—Complaint—Rejection with reference to police report—K made a report at a police station accusing R of a certain offence. The police having reported to the Magistrate having jurisdiction in the matter that in their opinion the offence was not established the Magistrate ordered the case to be "shelved." K then preferred a complaint to the Magistrate again accusing R of the offence. The Magistrate rejected the complaint with reference to the police report. Subsequently R, with the sanction of the police authorities instituted criminal proceedings against K, under s. 182 of the Penal Code in respect of the report which he had made at the police station and K was convicted under that section. Held that K's conviction under s. 182 of the Penal Code was illegal as the Magistrate had no power to entertain a complaint under that section at the instance of R the application of s. 182 and the institution of prosecutions under it being limited to the public servant against whom the offence has been committed or to his official superior as mentioned in s. 467 of Act X of 1872 and it not being intended that those provisions should be enforced at the instance of private persons. Moreover if K's complaint was false his offence was against R and not against the public servant to whom the complaint was made, and fell within s. 211 of the Penal Code EMPRESS v. 7. ———— Voluntarily obstructing a public servant in discharge of his duties—Mamlatdar's decree—Execution by a surveyor under Collector's orders—Public function—Right of private defence.—In a suit filed in a Mamlatdar's Court under Bombay Act III of 1876, the plaintiff obtained a decree against the accused for possession of a certain piece of land. When the Mamlatdar proceeded to execute the decree, he found that there was no land corresponding to the boundaries set forth in the plaint, and that the parties were joint owners and in joint occupation of the land in dispute. Finding himself unable to execute the decree, the Mamlatdar referred the matter to the Collector for advice. The Collector, on looking into the papers of the case, ordered a surveyor to execute the decree by dividing the land in dispute and putting the decree-holder in possession of his share. The surveyor, in attempting to execute the decree, was obstructed by the accused, who was thereupon tried and convicted of the offence of voluntarily obstructing a public servant in the discharge of his public functions, under s. 186 of the Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860). Held, reversing the conviction, that, as the Collector had no legal authority to issue the order to the surveyor in execution of the Mamlatdar's decree, the surveyor acting under that order was not discharging a public function, and the act of the accused was not an offence against s. 186 of the Penal Code. Held, further, that the Collector's order was so entirely ultra vires as to leave no room for the operation of either the first or the second clause of s. 99 of the Penal Code. *QUEEN-EMPRESS v. The commissioner went to the house, but the defendant shut the doors and would not admit him. A crowd collected, and the commissioner felt it would be unsafe to proceed to carry out the order by force, and was unable to do so otherwise. The defendant was prosecuted and sentenced under Penal Code, s. 186. Held that the facts disclosed no offence under that section. The use of the word "voluntarily" in that section seems to contemplate some overt act of obstruction, and not that mere passive conduct should be penal. QUEEN-EMPRESS v. SOMMANNA

The mere fact of a public servant or railway servant believing he was acting in the discharge of his duties or public functions is not sufficient to make resistance or obstruction to him amount to an offence. IN THE MATTER OF THE PETITION OF BARODA KANTO PRAMANICK

Held the Nazir had authority thus to delegate the execution of the warrant to the peon. The words "to be executed" in s 251 of the Code of Civil Procedure would seem to imply that it was not intended that the "proper officer" should himself execute all warrants sent to him. And there is nothing in the Code which indicates in any way that warrants being either warrants of arrest or of attachment or for distress and sale, are to be executed by the "proper officer," in any manner different from the service of summonses. The Court-fees Act (VII of 1870) distinctly contemplates that the peons are to be employed not only for the service of summonses notices or orders, but also for the execution of other processes such as warrants of arrest, or of attachment and distress. It is not sufficient that the disappearance of evidence was likely to have the effect of screening the offender. QUEEN v. TOOLSHEE RAI

[5 N. W., 186

9. ————— Giving false information of offence.—Prisoner was charged, under s. 201 of the Penal Code, "for that he, knowing or having reason to believe that an offence punishable with death had been committed, with the intention of screening the offender from legal punishment, gave information respecting the offence which he knew or believed to be false." Held that the proper order of proof on the part of the prosecution in the case was to prove (1) that A N was murdered; (2) that the prisoner gave information respecting the offence; (3) that such information was false and known by him to be so; (4) that he then knew of the commission of the murder; and (5) that his intention was to screen the murderer. Held also that it was essential to the completeness of the case for the prosecution to show, not only that the information was given, but also that it was false, and known to be so by the prisoner. Further enquiry directed under s. 422, Criminal Procedure Code, 1861. QUEEN v. SUBBRAMANYA PILLAI . . . 3 Mad., 251

10. ————— Causing disappearance of evidence of crime—Proof of commission of crime.—A conviction on a charge of causing the disappearance of evidence of an offence which amounted to culpable homicide not amounting to murder may be good, though there be no proof of who committed the culpable homicide. QUEEN v. MUDDUN MOHUN BOSE

[7 W. R., Cr., 22

11. ————— Causing disappearance of evidence of an offence.—Held that it is necessary, in order to justify a conviction under s. 201 of the Penal Code, that an offence for which some person has been convicted, or is criminally responsible, should have been committed. EMPRESS OF INDIA v. ABDUL KADIR . . . I. L. R., 3 All., 279

12. ————— Causing disappearance of evidence of an offence—Omitting to report a sudden, unnatural, or suspicious death.—Before an accused can be convicted of an offence under s. 201 of the Penal Code, it must be proved that an offence, the evidence of which he is charged with causing to disappear, has actually been committed, and also that the accused knew or had information sufficient to lead him to believe that the offence had been committed.

Causing disappearance of evidence of offence — Prisoner was present at a murder without being aware that such an act was to be committed. 15 ——— Causing disappearance of evidence of supposed murder — Want of proof of commission of offence — S 201 of the Penal Code applies merely to the person who screens the principal or actual offender, and not the principal or actual offender himself. The accused were charged with murder and also with causing the disappearance of the corpse of the deceased with the intention of screening the murderer from punishment under s 201 of the Penal Code. Evidence for the prosecution pointed conclusively to one or other of them being the actual murderer, but it was impossible upon the evidence to say which of them caused the murder.

of the Penal Code. It was contended that the case did not fall within that section, as the satisfaction, not having been certified to the Court, could not be recognized by the Court executing the decree, and that consequently no offence had been committed. Held that the words "after it has been satisfied," used in s. 210 of the Penal Code, indicate only the fact of the satisfaction of the decree. The fact that the satisfaction is of such a nature that the Court executing the decree could not recognize it, does not prevent the decree-holder from being properly convicted of an offence under that section. *MADHUB CHUNDER MOZUMDAR v. The arrest was sent to a certain thana to be executed. It was there after being copied to a book kept for that purpose at the thana made over to a particular constable for execution. When the constable to whom the warrant had been made over had left the thana it was discovered that D was in a village other than that in which he had been supposed to be. Thereupon the officer temporarily in charge of the thana made a copy from the book at the thana endorsed on the back the names of one V and some other constables, and having signed the endorsement sent V and the others out with this paper to arrest D. V and his companions arrested D but as they were returning with him in custody some of D's friends aided by D himself attacked them rescued D and caused hurt to the police. Held that the police officers could

11. — Buying or selling minor for the purpose of prostitution, &c.—Certain persons, falsely representing that a minor girl of a low caste was a member of a higher caste, induced a member of such higher caste to take her in marriage, and to pay money for her in the full belief that such representation was true. Held per STRAIGHT, C.J., that such persons could not be convicted on the facts of offences under ss. 372 and 373 of the Penal Code. Per OLIPHANT, J., and STRADON, J., that if such girl was disposed of for the purpose of marriage, it could not be said, because the marriage might be invalid under Hindu law, that such persons acted with the intention that she should be employed or used for the purposes of prostitution or for any unlawful and immoral purpose, or that they knew it to be likely that she would be employed or used for such purpose, and consequently they could not be convicted of an offence under these sections. Per PEARSON, J., and SPANKIN, J., that such girl having been disposed of for the purpose of marriage, although the marriage might be objectionable under Hindu law, it did not appear that it was wholly invalid, and therefore such intent or knowledge could not certainly be presumed, and such persons could not be convicted of offences under these sections. *EMPEROR OF INDIA v. 12. — and s. 373—Obtaining a minor for prostitution—Dancing-girl caste—Adoption.—A woman, being a member of the dancing-girl caste, obtained possession of a minor girl and employed her for the purpose of prostitution; she subsequently obtained in adoption another minor girl from her parents, who belonged to the same caste. She and the parents of the second girl were charged together under ss. 372, 373 of the Penal Code. The charges related to both girls. Held that ss. 372, 373 of the Penal Code may be applicable in a case where the minor concerned is a member of the dancing-girl caste. Per MUTTUSAMI AYYAR, J.—It would be no offence if the intention was that the girl should be brought up as a daughter, and that, when she attains her age, she should be allowed to select either to marry or follow the profession of her prostitute mother. *QUEEN-EMPEROR v. The District Magistrate of Sholapur convicted accused No. 1 of an offence under s. 372 and accused No. 2 of abetment of the offence under ss. 372 and 108A of the Indian Penal Code, and sentenced them each to six months' rigorous imprisonment. Held that there was no offence committed in British India, and therefore the accused No. 2 was not guilty of abetment, and s. 108A of the Penal Code had no application to the present case. More intention not followed by any act cannot constitute any offence, and an indirect preparation which does not amount to an act which amounts to a commencement of the offence does not constitute either a principal offence or an attempt or abetment of the same. The intention of either of the accused while they were staying at Sholapur did not constitute any offence, and their removal with the girl to Tuljapur did not by itself constitute an abetment. *QUEEN-EMPEROR v. 2. — Obtaining possession of minor for purposes of prostitution—Offence defined by above section explained.—To constitute the offence provided for by s. 373 of the Penal Code, it is necessary, first, that a minor under sixteen years of age shall be lough, hired, or otherwise obtained possession of, and, secondly, that the minor shall be lough, hired, or otherwise obtained possession of, with the intent that the same minor, while still under the age of sixteen years, will be employed for the purposes of prostitution, or with the knowledge that it is likely that the said minor, while still under the age of sixteen years, will be employed or used for an unlawful and immoral purpose. The offence is complete so soon as the obtaining possession, with the requisite intention or knowledge, of the minor is accomplished, though the minor may not enter upon prostitution until years after she has attained maturity, or may never enter upon such a profession at all. *Deputy Legal Remembrancer v. (Onus of proving guilty intention in case of sale of minor for purpose of prostitution—Evidence Act (I of 1872), s 106—In order to constitute an offence under s 373 of the Penal Code, it is not necessary that the intention or knowledge of likelihood as to the employment of the minor for purposes of prostitution should be with reference to employment either immediate or at some definite and not very remote future period, but an offence under the section is complete as soon as a girl is purchased with the guilty intention or knowledge of likelihood that she will, while still a minor under the age of sixteen years, be employed for that purpose, although the point of time for such employment may be remote by reason of her physical incapacity for the purpose. H, the father of two girls twins about a year old, sold one of them to K, a prostitute, for Rs 9, and within ten days of such sale also sold her the other for Rs 14. K was shown to have previously purchased another child whom she had brought up from her infancy, and who was then living with her and leading the life of a prostitute. Both H and K made confessions as to the guilty knowledge and intention with which the sale of the two children was made. K's confession was made within two hours after her arrest, and immediately thereafter she was committed to bajat for seven days. On the seventh day, on being brought up for trial before the Deputy Magistrate, she retracted her confession and assigned an innocent reason for her purchase of the girl. H and K were tried jointly, H being charged with an offence under s 372, viz, selling the girls for the purpose of prostitution, and K with an offence under s 373, viz, buying for the same purpose. Neither was charged with abetting the other. The two confessions were used as evidence, and there was other evidence tending to prove the intention and guilty knowledge. The Deputy Magistrate convicted each of the offence with which they were charged. On appeal the Sessions Judge acquitted K on the ground that the offence under s 373 could not be committed unless the intention was that the minor was to be used for the purpose of prostitution at some definite future time, and that it would be carrying the law too far to hold that the intention had reference to a period some twelve or fourteen years after

I. s. 475—Possession of papers bearing counterfeit mark or device—Charge under s. 475, how to be framed—Misdirection—Evidence.—During the course of a police investigation into a complaint of theft, the house of the accused was searched and a bundle of papers, about 35 in number, were found, which were alleged to be forgeries or preparations for forgeries. The accused was thereupon committed to the Court of Session on a charge under s. 475 of the Penal Code. A few days before the trial of the accused, the police searched the house of one S, who was a witness for the defence, and there discovered a batch of suspicious papers which were produced at the trial, and put in as evidence against the accused. The accused was convicted of the offence under s. 475 of the Penal Code and sentenced to transportation for life. Held, reversing the conviction and sentence, that the suspicious papers found in S's house were not admissible in evidence against the accused. Held, further, that the Judge's direction to the jury regarding those papers, that they established a connection between the accused and many of the witnesses belonging to the same faction, and that they showed the extent to which the practice of forgery had gone in the village, and that in this way they were relevant to the question of guilty knowledge and intention, was a misdirection which prejudiced the accused. 1. ———— Enticing or taking away wife temporarily living alone—Enticing or taking away, with a criminal intent, a wife living in her husband's house, or in a house hired by him for her occupation and at his expense, during his temporary absence, is punishable under s 493 of the Penal Code, provided the seducer knew, or had reason to know, that she was the wife of the man from whose house he took her. MUTTY KHAN v MUNGLOO

[5 W. R., Cr, 50]

2. ———— Enticing away married woman—Presumption of marriage—Onus probandi—In a charge under s 493 of the Penal Code, the proof that the woman and a man other than the accused were living together is sufficient to throw the burthen of proof on the accused that they were not man and wife. QUEEN v WAZIRA

3. ———— Enticing away wife—Proof of marriage—S and G having been convicted of enticing away the wife of the complainant, the conviction was quashed on appeal, on the ground that or otherwise impugn it. Held that the marriage was sufficiently proved. Empress v Pilambur Singh, I. L. R. 5 Calc., 586, discussed. QUEEN v SUBBARATHAN

4. ———— Alyasantana law—Marriage—Custom—In the absence of very clear evidence of custom, which, if well founded, must be a matter of general notoriety, the cohabitation of a man and a woman under the Alyasantana system cannot be considered marriage so as to render punishable, under s 493 of the Penal Code, a person who entices away the woman with the intent specified in that section. KORAOA v. 8. ———— Enticing away married woman—Finding in words of section—A finding exactly in the words of s 493 of the Penal Code that the prisoner took or enticed away a married woman from her husband, or some person having the care of her on his behalf, with intent that she should have illicit intercourse with some person, or concealed or detained such woman with a like in-

9. ———— Detaining with criminal intent married woman—The words "such woman" in s 493 of the Penal Code do not mean such a woman as has been so enticed as mentioned in that section, but mean such woman whom the accused knows or has reason to believe to be the wife of any other man, the detention of such a woman with the particular intent defined in the section is one of the offences made punishable under that section. QUEEN v EMPRESS v NADAR

of the public does not constitute an offence under s. 505, but it is necessary that the fear or alarm should be caused in such circumstances as to render it likely that a person may be induced to commit an offence against the State or against the public tranquillity. Account cannot be taken in a case of this kind of a vague possibility that the state of mind which is caused by alarm may easily induce a person to commit an offence against the public tranquillity. This would depend on the circumstances of a particular case. The accused, a duffadar of a tea estate in Darjeeling, who had recently returned from Nepal, circulated a report among the garden coolies that a war was impending between the British Government and Nepal, that Nepalese soldiers were stationed on the frontier, and that the coolies would be killed by the British. The effect of the report was that about 150 coolies immediately ran away. Held that the accused could not be taken to have intended more than the probable result of the report he circulated, the result which, in fact, did take place. option of resuming the collection of the toda garas hak formerly levied, resorting only to legal proceedings to enforce their claims, or of receiving from the Government allowances of an equivalent amount, the collections in the latter case being discontinued on all hands. The ancestors of the adoptive father of the plaintiff formerly levied toda garas hak; and after 1862 the Government in respect thereof made payments, under the resolution, to three brothers, of whom one was the plaintiff's father; the latter receiving a one-third share, which on his death in 1865 was no longer paid. Held that a suit against the Government for payment of this third share with arrears fell under the Pensions Act (XXIII of 1871), s. 4, which prohibits cognizance, save as in the Act provided, "of any suit relating to any pension or grant of money or land revenue conferred or made by the British or any former Government, whatever may have been the consideration for such pension or grant, or whatever may have been the nature of the payment, claim, or right for which such pension or grant may have been substituted." Held that there was no reason, either in the language of the Act itself or in any antecedent legislation, for construing these words as applicable only to rights in the nature of pensions. MAHARAJA MOHANSINGHJI JEYSINGHJI v. The attachment continued down to 1875, when the last holder of the villages died, and the Government having resumed the villages, the attachment was raised. The plaintiffs now sued to have their right declared to satisfy their decree from the revenues of the villages. Held that the former suit was not a suit in respect of a pension or grant of money of land revenue, and that an attachment placed in pursuance of an ordinary money-decree before the date of the Pensions Act (XXIII of 1871) could not be treated as a suit in respect of a pension, grant of money, or land revenue instituted before such date, so as to exclude the operation of the Act under s. 1. SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA IN COUNCIL v. 8. ————— Gratuitous pension—Suit for share of annual grant made by Government.—One S, a servant of the Delhi Emperor, having been killed in Burdwan while fighting for his master, the Emperor built a tomb over his remains, and made a grant of land (five mouzahs) to his family for the purpose of maintaining it in the manner usual amongst Mahomedans. This grant was subsequently confirmed to a descendant of S and his heirs. Some years later the land came into the possession of the Raja of Burdwan, who paid to the grantees a certain sum of money annually. When the perpetual settlement was made, the British Government continued the payment on account of the Raja, in whose zamindari four of the five mouzahs were incorporated. Owing to disputes in the family, a reference was made to Government, who reduced the money payment and appointed a mutwalli for the tomb. One of the descendants of S then sued the Government and the mutwalli for a share of this annual payment. Held that the grant to S's family was not a gratuitous pension or allowance, and that the money payment by the zamindar of Burdwan was rent justly due to them for the use and occupation of their land, and that the fact of the payment being continued by Government did not alter its nature.

He contended that the revenue derived by the Government for tappan, trees in the villages aforesaid was a tax within the contemplation of the grant. Held that the Court had no jurisdiction to entertain the suit under the Pensions Act (XXIII of 1871). The tax in question was a money tax and as so on as it was imposed, the grant, if it entitled the inamdar to the tax, operated as a grant of the money to be derived from the tax, and was therefore within the spirit, if not the letter, of the Pensions Act, the object of which was to reserve to the Government the determination of all questions affecting grants of money, the bestowal of which was an act of grace or State policy on the part of the ruling power. JANARDHAN BHASKAR v. 20. ————— Meaning of the word "pension"—Suit for a cash allowance payable by an inamdar—Necessity of Collector's certificate.—Plaintiff sued, as the trustee of a devasthan, to recover the amount of a cash allowance attached to the worship of certain idols in the village of Ankli. The plaintiff alleged that the defendant, who was the inamdar of the village, received its revenues subject to the payment of the allowance in question, and that he had wrongfully appropriated the latter for the three years preceding suit. Held that the allowance in question was "a grant of money" within the meaning of s. 4 of the Pensions Act (XXIII of 1871), and that the suit would not lie in the absence of the Collector's certificate, though Government was not a party to the suit. VYANKAJI v. 23. ————— Cash allowance allowed to worship of idol—Personal grant.—A plaintiff claimed to be a co-trustee of certain dargas and entitled to a share in the management and in the profits thereof, which consisted of a certain cash allowance from Government. He sued the defendants for an account and for the recovery of his share. Held that the suit, so far as it related to the cash allowance from Government, required a certificate under s. 4 of the Pensions Act (XXIII of 1871). A cash allowance attached to the worship of an idol is a grant of money within the meaning of s. 4 of the Pensions Act, 1871. The Pensions Act applies to religious endowments as well as to personal grants. Vyankaji v. Sarjarao Apajirao, I. L. R., 16 Bom., 537, concurred in. NIYA VALI ULLA v. BAYA SAHEB SANTI MIYA [I. 24. ————— Suit relating to in a m land granted before the time of the British Government—Confirmation of inam.—Early in the eighteenth century two villages were granted by the zamindars of Sivaganga and Guntamanaikanur to the last of the Naik rulers of Madura for the maintenance of the rank and dignity of his family which was now represented by the plaintiffs and defendants Nos. 1 to 23. The property was long managed by the representative, for the time being, of the senior line. In 1844 one of the junior members instituted a suit for partition, which terminated in a decree declaring the corpus of the property to be indivisible and the annual produce to be divisible in certain shares. Subsequently in 1857 a compromise was entered into, by which the parties agreed to vary the distribution of the sharers, but they agreed that the management of the estate, indivisible and inalienable, should continue to be vested in the eldest line subject to certain supervision on the part of the other members. The compromise was long acted upon by the family; but in 1892 the representative of the senior line died, leaving only his widow and infant sons. The widow, as guardian of the elder son, then entered on the management, and, being gosha, delegated it to a stranger. The plaintiffs, representing a junior line, now sued for the removal of these persons from management and the appointment of another manager, alleging both that they had no right to the managership and that they had been guilty of mismanagement.

The Zamorin, by his will, bequeathed to the plaintiff the malikana due to him from the Government which might be in arrears at the time of his death. The malikana was a political pension of Rs. 6,000 a month, payable quarterly. The Zamorin died on the 6th of August 1892. The plaintiff, having obtained a certificate under Pensions Act, s. 6, now sued the new Zamorin to recover the proportionate amount of the pension for the current quarter up to the time of the Zamorin's death. Held that the plaintiff was not entitled to recover the amount sued for. SRIDEVI v. 7. ——— Taking plaint off the file — Indefiniteness — Omission to show suit not barred — A plaint which merely stated that the cause of action arose previous to 21st August 1869 and which did not show that the suit was not barred by limitation, was ordered to be taken off the file.

26 — Suit to set aside deed of sale—Civil Procedure Code, s 80—Inconsistent causes of action—Inconsistency in pleading the suit—In a suit for cancellation of a sale-deed by the person whose name appeared on it as executant, it was alleged in the plaintiff that it was a forgery, and that, if it was not a forgery, its execution had been obtained by fraud and that it was moreover, void for want of consideration. Held that the gist of the plaintiff's charge against the defendant being that she had never executed a sale deed in his favour, and that the document set up by him was a forgery. It was not competent to the plaintiff to combine with this charge as an alternative the wholly inconsistent charge that if she did execute the document, no consideration was received by her or that fraud had been practised upon her.

s. 53—Amendment of plaint—Limitation Act (XV of 1877), s. 22.—In a suit to recover a debt to a company which had gone into liquidation, the plaintiff was described in the plaint as “The Official Liquidator, Himalaya Bank, Limited, in liquidation,” and the plaint was signed and verified in the same terms. On objection taken by the defendant, the plaint was allowed to be amended, but after the period of limitation prescribed for the suit had expired, so as to read “The Himalaya Bank, Limited, in liquidation, plaintiff.” Held by the Full Bench that the plaint as originally filed was in substantial compliance with the provisions of Act VI of 1882; and that, even if it might be considered that the amendment made was necessary, such amendment did not introduce a new plaintiff into the suit so as to let in the operation of s. 22 of Act XV of 1877: *Ghulam Muhammad v. 127 ——— Amendment of plaint—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 54—Multifarious suit—Malabar law—Stanom.—A suit was brought by the junior members of a tarwad which consisted of three stanoms and three tavarics against the karnavan and others including certain persons to whom he had alienated some tarwad property. The plaint as originally framed prayed (1) for the removal of the karnavan, (2) for a declaration that defendants Nos 2 to 8, the senior anandavans had forfeited their right of succession to him, (3) for the appointment of the plaintiff in his place, (4) for a declaration that his alienations were invalid as against the tarwad, and (5) for possession of the property alienated. Subsequently the plaint was amended by the order of the Court by striking out items 3 and 5 of the prayer, and finally the plaintiffs further amended the plaint and said only for a declaration that the alienations in question were invalid. The lower Court passed the declaratory decree prayed for. Held that the lower Court was wrong in allowing the plaint to be amended after the first hearing because the case on which the decree was passed was essentially different from that disclosed in the plaint; and that the appeal must be allowed accordingly. MANOJAN v KRISHNAN I L R., 11 Mad., 108

Act III of 1865, s. 1—Deceit—Unilateral mistake.*—On the 21st of January 1883 the plaintiff contracted to purchase from the defendant the right to receive dividend on 50 shares of the Empress Mill at R37 per share, the plaintiff being under an impression that the dividend was to be declared on some subsequent day. The plaintiff deposited R100 with the defendant as part payment of the purchase-money. Subsequently it was ascertained that the dividend had been already declared on 17th January 1883 (i.e., four days before the contract) at R25. The plaintiff thereupon sued the defendant to have the contract declared cancelled, and sought to recover the deposit of R100, with interest. The Judge of the Court of Small Causes at Broach, being of opinion that the contract was in its nature a sutta or wagering contract, rejected the plaintiff's claim. The plaintiff applied to the High Court, under its extraordinary jurisdiction, to set aside the lower Court's decision. Held that, in the first instance, the plaint, as framed, not disclosing any cause of action, ought to have been returned for amendment. It should either have alleged a mistake common to both parties to the contract, or should have contained an allegation of fraud, on the defendant's part, inducing the plaintiff to enter into the agreement. The mere circumstance that the contract was "caused by one of the parties to it being under a mistake as to a matter of fact" would not, under s. 22 of the Contract Act (IX of 1872), have made the contract voidable. The High Court reversed the lower Court's decision in order that the plaintiff might be given an opportunity to amend his plaint so as to show that his action was one for deceit. *DAYABHAI TRIBHOVANDAS v. The lower Court held that the right to sue did not accrue until the property had been demanded and refused; that the plaint contained no allegation of such demand and refusal; that the plaint could not be amended by the insertion of such an allegation after answer filed; and that therefore the suit could not be maintained. Held, reversing the decree, that even if the present case were one in which the provision as to demand could have any application at all, still the suit ought not to have been dismissed on that technical ground, when the defendant by his answer traversed the whole of the allegations in the plaint and pleaded the statute of limitation. *MANIKYA ROW LAKSHMAYYAH v. The Munsif allowed the plaintiff to amend the plaint by stating that he abandoned his claim to execute the decree against the land for more than Rs. 2,500. 146. ——— Charges of fraud—General allegations of fraud—Amendment of plaint on appeal—Objection taken for first time on appeal.—Where a plaintiff seeks relief on the ground of fraud, and the plaint contains general allegations, but no specific instances of the alleged fraud, it ought to be immediately, on presentation, rejected or returned for amendment, as it does not disclose a cause of action. The plaintiff sued to recover damages caused by the defendant's fraud during his management of the plaintiff's estate from 1870 to 1884. The plaint disclosed no specific instances of the fraud imputed to the defendant. The Court of first instance, without going into evidence, rejected the plaintiff's claim on the preliminary ground that the plaintiff had no right to sue during the lifetime of his adoptive mother. In second appeal, the respondent objected that the plaint was defective. The plaintiff's pleader asked for leave to amend it by specifying certain instances of the alleged fraud. Held that the amendment could not then be allowed, and the suit must fail. *KRISHNAJI v. of the Bank. The plaint described the defendant as "Mrs. Sarah G. Barlow, of Mussoorie," and stated that she was executrix of the deceased B. It began thus: "George Henry Webb, Manager of the above-named plaintiff's business, states as follows," and proceeded to state that the deceased was, at the time of his death, "indebted to the plaintiff," and to set forth the cause of action in detail. It was signed and verified thus: "For the B Bank, Limited, G. H. Webb, Manager." The Court of first instance returned the plaint for amendment under s. 53 of the Civil Procedure Code, because the suit should not have been brought in the form in which it was brought, but in the form referred to in s. 213 and No. 105 of Sch. IV of the Code. Held, with reference to this ground, that the plaintiff was at liberty to bring a suit for money against any person administering to or representing the estate; and if such suit should be found with reference to the facts in evidence not maintainable, it should be dismissed; but there was no authority for returning a plaint for amendment, when it was found that the suit was not maintainable in the form in which it was brought, in order to amend it so as to convert the suit into one of a different character. *MUSSOORIE BANK v. The other raiyats of the village in whom the same right vested were originally joined as plaintiffs, but the plaint was amended under s. 53 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and their names were struck off the record. A proved no special damage. Held (1) that the fact that the other raiyats of the village had similar rights did not make A's right a public right in the sense that no action could be brought upon it unless special damage was proved; (2) that the right claimed vested in A severally as well as jointly with the other raiyats, and the amendment of the plaint was not contrary to the provisions of s. 31 or 53 of the Code of Civil Procedure. *VENKATACHALA v. 150 ————— Joint family—Mortgage by a father—Decree against father on mortgage giving possession with interest and costs—Son's liability to satisfy the decree as to interest and costs—The plaintiff's father mortgaged certain ancestral property for a limited term. A suit was brought on the mortgage against the father, and a decree was passed directing the mortgaged property to be handed over to the mortgagee for a certain time, and awarding payment of interest and costs by the father. In execution of this decree, the mortgagee sought to recover the costs by sale of the property in question. Thereupon the plaintiffs sued for a declaration that the property was not liable to be sold in execution of the decree against the father on the ground that the debts contracted by the father were for immoral purposes, and that therefore the estate could not be bound by the decree at all. The Court of first instance found that the debts had not been incurred for any immoral purpose, and dismissed the suit. At the hearing of the appeal to the High Court it was alleged that the plaintiffs had separated from their father before the mortgage decree was passed against him, and an application was made on their behalf that the plaint in this case should be amended by inserting an allegation to that effect. Held that the amendment could not be allowed. Such an amendment would entirely alter the points of contention between the parties. In suing in the form adopted by the plaintiffs they doubtless intended to take the chance of getting a greater advantage than they would have obtained if they had sued merely as separated sons. They sought to liberate the property altogether from liability on the ground that the debt was immoral, and that the estate could not therefore be bound by the decree at all. That being so and the plaintiffs having omitted to allege partition, they could not now ask the Court to put their suit on a new footing.

The plaintiffs contended on appeal that the suit should not have been dismissed, but that they were entitled to a decree for use and occupation. Held that a decree for use and occupation of the land by the defendants could not be granted in the case, as that would amount to an amendment raising issues of an entirely different character from those on which the trial was held in the Courts below as a suit for rent, and necessitating a trial upon fresh evidence. causes of action—Same parties suing in different capacities—Civil Procedure Code, 1877, ss. 26 and 31.—By the Memorandum and Articles of Association of the New Dhurumsey Poonjabhoy Spinning and Weaving Company, the plaintiffs' firm of M F & Co. were appointed agents of the company for twenty-five years, and it was provided that they should have the general control and management of the company. Cl. 98 of the articles provided that the said firm, as such agents, should have full power and authority (inter alia) to appoint and employ, in or for the purposes of the transaction and management of the affairs and business of the company, such solicitors as they should think proper. An agreement, dated 26th August 1874, was also entered into between the company and the partners in the firm of M F & Co., their executors, administrators, and assigns, for the time being constituting the partnership firm of M F & Co., whereby it was agreed that the said firm should be agents to the company for twenty-five years to buy and sell, etc., and particularly to exercise all the powers contained in cl. 18 of the Articles of Association. Messrs. C & B were duly appointed solicitors to the company, and acted as such for a considerable time. M, one of the members of the said firm of M F & Co., died in the middle of March 1876. The plaintiffs complained that G, one of the shareholders in the company, became desirous of ousting the plaintiffs from the position of agents of the company, and of becoming the managing director of the company; that in July 1881 he procured his own election and that of certain nominees of his as directors of the company; and on the 8th August 1881 procured the passing of a resolution at a Board meeting to the effect that, as *Messrs. L, be appointed solicitors of the company. The plaintiffs alleged that the only object of passing the said resolution was to facilitate the design of G, of ousting the plaintiffs from their agency, and getting the management of the company for himself; that Messrs. H C & L had been for a long time the solicitors of G, and had been advising him in his designs upon the company and upon the plaintiffs, and they contended that the resolution was a breach of the contract between the company and the plaintiffs and a violation of the Articles of Association of the company. The plaintiffs sued G and two other directors of the company and the company itself, and prayed for an injunction against the defendants to restrain them from committing any breach of the agreement of 26th August 1874 and in particular from carrying into effect the resolution appointing Messrs. H C & L as solicitors for the company, and to restrain them from doing anything inconsistent with the Memorandum and Articles of Association. The defendants contended that the contract of the 26th August 1874 had been determined by the death of M, and that the powers conferred on the agents by cl. 98 of the Articles were, subject to the general powers of management, vested in the directors by the Articles, and that the case was not one in which an injunction could be granted. Counsel on behalf of the plaintiffs sought to obtain the injunction on the ground that the resolution of the 8th August 1881 appointing Messrs. H C & L solicitors of the company, was contrary to the Memorandum of Association, and therefore ultra vires; and, in order that this point might be pressed against the defendants, it was proposed that the plaint should be amended by alleging a cause of action in two of the plaintiffs as shareholders as well as a cause of action in all the plaintiffs as parties contracting with the company. Held that, under the provisions of ss. 26 and 31 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877), the amendment could not be allowed. The plaintiffs, as shareholders and contractors, had not the same cause of action, by which words were meant not only the act complained of, but also the right violated by that act. The rights of the plaintiffs as contractors, alleged to be violated by the resolution, were rights given to them by their agreement; but the rights of the plaintiffs as shareholders were rights secured to them by the Articles of Association. *NUSSERWANJI v. Magistrate's order. The Assistant Judge who tried the suit dismissed it, holding that it did not lie against the defendant. On appeal, the High Court, following the decision in Nilkanthapa Malkapa v. Magistrate of Solapur, I. L. R., 6 Bom., 670, reversed the decree of the Assistant Judge, and remanded the case, in order that the plaintiff might amend his suit by striking out the name of the first class Magistrate as defendant, and substituting in that capacity the Secretary of State for India in Council, and directing the lower Court to determine the suit upon its merits after the above amendment and due service of process. BALARAM CHATRUKLAL v. 169. ——— Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 53—Amendment of plaint on appeal—Substitution of legal representative for deceased defendant—Limitation Act, s. 22.—A suit was brought to recover arrears of rent. The persons whose names were entered on the record as defendants were, in fact, dead when the suit was instituted. The suit was dismissed. The plaintiffs appealed and sought leave to amend the plaint by substituting for the names of the dead men those of their legal representatives, as against whom the suit would then have been barred by limitation. Held that the amendment should not be allowed. MALLIKARJUNA v. PULLAYYA

170. ——— Substitution of parties as defendants.—In an application to amend a plaint by substitution of the name of a firm for the Official Assignee as defendants, it was shown that the firm had been adjudicated insolvents, and one of them had obtained his permanent discharge; that the cause of action arose prior to the insolvency; and that no written statements had been filed. The application was granted, the costs to be paid by the plaintiff. DELHI AND LONDON BANK v. MILLER

171. ——— Amendment by striking out name of defendant—Suit for damages for wrongful acts of Government servant—Distinct averments against each party.—The plaintiff had purchased at a Government auction a license to vend spirituous liquors, paid the first instalment of the purchase-money, and demanded a license, but did not receive it until six days later. Meantime he opened a shop and sold "tari" for three days, when the sale was stopped by the Extra Assistant Commissioner, notwithstanding the plaintiff represented that he was a license-holder. The present suit was brought against the Government represented by the Deputy Commissioner for damages on account of wrongful acts of the Extra Assistant Commissioner, who was made second defendant. The Judge, holding that where a servant does a wrongful act maliciously he is personally liable and the master is free, left it to the plaintiff to say against whom he would proceed. The plaintiff elected to proceed against Government and obtained a decree for a part of his claim. In the lower Appellate Court the Judges were divided in opinion, the Recorder holding that the first Court was justified in allowing the plaintiff to abandon his suit against the second defendant, to whom malice had been imputed, and that the suit was still maintainable against the Government; and the Judicial Commissioner, considering it irregular to allow this action, inasmuch as the claims for damages on account of the illegal and malicious acts of the second defendant and for damages for non-issue of license by the first defendant were inconsistent with each other. Held by the High Court that the view of the Recorder was correct. Nevertheless, the plaintiff ought not to have been put to the option of abandoning his suit against one or other defendant, but the suit should have been tried out. Held, too, that the allegations against the two defendants were distinct, but not inconsistent, and that the Judicial Commissioner had taken too strict a view of the plaint. VITHBELINGUM v. GOVERNMENT. 21 W. R., 199

172. ——— Suit brought under wrong Act—Suit erroneously brought under Rent Act.—Where a suit had been erroneously brought under Bengal Act VIII of 1859, s. 30, and the plaintiff applied to have it amended in that respect, whereupon the Munsif dismissed the suit, the case was returned by the High Court with directions to allow the plaintiff to amend the plaint on payment of the costs. IN THE MATTER OF THE PETITION OF GOBIND CHUNDER GHOSE. 202. ——— Ground for rejection—Undervaluation of suit—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 31.—In a suit in a Munsif's Court it was found, after issues had been fixed and some evidence recorded, that the claim had been undervalued, and that the proper valuation would carry it beyond the jurisdiction of the Munsif. The plaint was accordingly returned, and additional stamps having been filed, the case was tried by the Principal Sudder Ameen. The Judge on appeal held that the plaint had been illegally returned by the Munsif, and that the act of the Principal Sudder Ameen in proceeding to try the case was illegal. He accordingly dismissed the suit. Held that the Munsif was right, under s. 31, Act VIII of 1859, in not dismissing the suit, but rejecting the plaint; and that, when the same plaint was filed with the proper amount of stamp duty in the Court of the Principal Sudder Ameen, that Court had jurisdiction to try the case. RAM GUTTY v. The Subordinate Judge was of opinion that the claim was for recovery of money, and should have been valued at Rs. 1,000. He therefore called on the plaintiffs to make up the stamp to that required on this valuation; and the plaintiffs refusing, he dismissed their suit under s. 54 (b) of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882). Held that in any case the Subordinate Judge was wrong. If the suit was really one for an account, the plaintiffs were entitled to value the relief they sought approximately, as they had done; if it were not one for an account, but for recovery of money, still the Subordinate Judge had no power himself to value the relief sought, but

In a plaint claiming damage for an unsuccessful criminal prosecution of the plaintiff by the first defendant, and sanctioned by the second defendant as a Subordinate Judge, the plaintiff (though stating in the plaint that the second defendant "maliciously and without authority" sanctioned the prosecution, and that the Magistrate before whom it was brought held that there was no cause whatever for the charge) did not allege in the plaint that the first defendant prosecuted him (plaintiff) maliciously and without any reasonable or probable cause, or that the prosecution was sanctioned by the second defendant without reasonable or probable cause. Held that the plaint was properly rejected; and that there was no good ground for allowing the plaint to be amended, the plaintiff having delayed the filing of it until the last day but one allowed by the law of limitation. GIRDHARLAL DAYALDAS v. 7. Plea of guilty—Murder—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 302—Confession—Procedure.—The accused, who was a habitual ganja-smoker, was charged with the murder of his wife and infant son. In his confession he stated that he had killed his wife, because she quarrelled with him and objected to go to another village where he proposed a change of house on account of their poverty. He adhered to this statement when placed for trial before the Court of Session. The Sessions Judge treated this statement as a plea of guilty on the charge of murder, convicted the accused, and sentenced him to death, subject to confirmation by the High Court. Held (per JARDINE and CANDY, JJ.) that the accused's statement did not amount to a plea of guilty on the charge of murdering his wife. He alleged a sudden provocation: he ought therefore to have been put on his trial, in order that the Court might ascertain whether the provocation was grave and sudden enough to prevent the offence from amounting to murder. QUEEN-EMPRESS v. SAKHARAM . I. L. R., 14 Bom., 564

8. ———— Pleaders and their clients, their rights and obligations inter se—Bom. Reg. II of 1827—Confidential communications made in the course of professional employment.—The rules prevailing in England with regard to the rights and obligations of solicitors in relation to their clients apply, with slight difference, to pleaders practising in India. The principles deducible from the English cases are as follows: 1. A party to a judicial proceeding is entitled to such professional assistance as he thinks will best suit him. 2. A pleader is free to place his services at the disposal of any such party upon such terms as he may think most advantageous to himself consistently with the honour of his profession and the due administration of justice. 3. A pleader who receives any confidential information from his client in the course of his professional employment is not at liberty to carry that information into the service of his antagonist, or any one who in that very litigation or in any subsequent litigation may be opposed to the client furnishing the information. 4. Under Regulation II of 1827, pleaders receive certain fees, in return for which they are not at liberty to act against those retaining them, whether they are retained by one client singly or by two or more clients jointly. A pleader who has acted for several persons will not be restrained from afterwards acting for some of them only as against the others, unless it be shown that he is possessed of knowledge arising from his previous employment which might be prejudicial to his other clients. As a general rule, the Court will require a very strong case to be made out before it will interfere by way of injunction, restraining a pleader from appearing for a client, and there must be clear affidavits made to show that special knowledge was acquired by the pleader during his employment by the former client. In case of his possessing such knowledge, he will not be allowed to throw up the conduct of the case and transfer his services. He will never be allowed to discharge himself from the conduct of the case if the case raises even a probability of prejudice to his former employers. K, a pleader, was at first retained by P and N jointly to defend a suit on their behalf. At a later stage of the case, P and N quarrelled. Thereupon K applied to the Court for leave to withdraw from the conduct of the case, on the ground that he could not attend to the interests of both P and N. The Court allowed him to withdraw. A few days afterwards K appeared in Court, and filed a vakalatnama, or warrant or attorney, signed by N, and claimed to conduct the case on behalf of N alone. P objected to this, but the Court disallowed this objection. Thereupon P made an application to the High Court for an injunction restraining K from acting on behalf of N alone. Held that, as it was not made out that K was in possession of any confidential information either from P or from P and N together, such as would give him an unfair advantage when acting on behalf of N, the Court would not interfere or restrain K from serving N alone. Held, further, that a pleader in such circumstances should take the direction of the Court as to which of two or more clients he is to serve, and as to the disposal of the fees he has received from them jointly. PALLONJI MERWANJI v. II of 1827, s. 54.—On the day fixed for the hearing of a suit, neither the plaintiff nor his pleader was present; the defendant, not having been served, was also absent. Plaintiff's pleader, however, sent intimation to the Court in writing that he had been appointed to act as a Subordinate Judge, and as he was going that day to join his appointment, he was unable to attend the Court. He therefore requested that the case should be adjourned till his return, or that a notice be issued to his client to enable him to make the necessary arrangements for the conduct of his case. Held that the pleader, having been temporarily appointed to act as a Subordinate Judge, was unable to attend the Court in consequence of a "necessary cause" within the meaning of s. 54 of Regulation II of 1827; and as he had sent the necessary notification in writing to the Court, the suit should not be dismissed, but adjourned for a reasonable time. IN RE NARAYAN SADASHIV KALE I. Neither ss. 2 and 36 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882) nor ss. 38 and 76 of the Presidency Small Cause Court Act (XV of 1882) give the pleaders of the Bombay High Court that right. The provisions of s. 47 of Regulation II of 1827, authorizing persons holding sanads from the High Court to practise in the mofussil Courts, are still in force. PER BAYLEY, WEST, FISHER, and LATHAM, J.J.—S. 2 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882, does not give every pleader a title to appear and plead; it only enacts that "pleader" means every person entitled to appear and plead for another in Court, and includes an advocate, a vakil, and an attorney of a High Court. Consequently, if pleaders or vakils, who are the same class of practitioners, are not entitled by law to appear or plead for another in Court, the definition of "pleader" gives them no new right or status. The words in s. 36 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882) "by a pleader duly appointed to act on his behalf," do not simply mean a person duly appointed by the party in the suit, but a pleader duly appointed according to the law regarding pleaders in force in the particular Court. PER FISHER, SCOTT, and LATHAM, J.J. (WEST, J., dissentiente).—The High Court has the power of making rules for the admission of pleaders to practise in the Bombay Court of Small Causes; and the Bombay Court of Small Causes, under s. 9 of the Presidency Small Cause Court Act (XV of 1882), also has the power of making similar rules with the sanction of the High Court. *IN RE PLEADERS OF THE HIGH COURT, BOMBAY I. The suit was numbered and after the evidence on either side had been gone into the trying Court made an order dispaupering R. On an application by R who offered to pay the Court fees, the High Court under its extraordinary jurisdiction made an order directing the lower Court to receive the fees and to proceed with the suit. R paid the fees, but the suit was compromised. The plaintiff did not attend to the suit after remand. The plaintiff having sued the defendant for his fees the Subordinate Judge was of opinion that one fourth fee under s. 51 of Act I of 1846 should be awarded to the plaintiff. 70. ———— Suit by pleader to recover fee from client—Legal Practitioners' Act (XVIII of 1879), ss. 27, 28, 29, 30—Agreement for fee—Agreement not in writing and filed in Court.—Ss. 27, 28, and 29 of the Legal Practitioners' Act (XVIII of 1879) do not relate to any arrangements or agreement made between a litigant and his own pleader as to the receipt of his fees which are actually allowed upon taxation. They do not provide as to matters which relate to the opposite party, or the fees that he has to pay to the legal practitioner of the opposite party, but provide what, as between the pleader and his client, shall be the method in which certain special arrangements are to be entered into. They make provision for arrangements between pleaders and their clients, which relate to the payment of remuneration in excess of and apart from the amount allowed in the taxation, and were framed upon the principle which regards with jealous scrutiny contracts brought about by persons holding positions of active confidence towards others, such as a pleader necessarily occupies in reference to his client. The note was not filed in Court, and it exceeded in amount the vakil's regulation fee. The defendants subsequently made a promissory note in substitution for the above, and the vakil's representatives now brought a suit upon the last-mentioned note. Held (1) that the agreement with the defendants' brother was invalid by reason of the Legal Practitioners' Act, s. 28, and the plaintiffs were not entitled to recover the amount of the note; (2) that the plaintiffs were entitled to recover in this action the amount due to the vakil independently of that agreement. *ANANTAYYA v. The words "open place," coupled with "road, street, or thoroughfare," should not be interpreted ejusdem generis. On that day she anchored at Atcheepore and remained there till the morning of the 16th. G refused to fulfil the contract, and P & Co. sued him thereupon. 1. EVIDENCE OF POSSESSION.

1. ——— Statement as to fact of possession—Evidence.—A statement by a witness that a party was in possession is, in point of law, admissible evidence of the fact that such party was in possession. MANIRAM DEB v. DEBI CHARAN DEB

[4 B. L. R., F. B., 97; 13 W. R., F. B., 42

2. ——— Acts of ownership.—A witness's statement that a party "is in possession" is no evidence of the fact. The question of possession is a mixed one of law and fact, and the evidence produced must give the various acts of ownership which go to constitute possession, so that the Court may arrive at its own conclusion. ISHAN CHUNDER BEHARA v. RAM LOCHUN BEHARA

[9 W. R., 79

3. ——— Visiting and making use of house—Possession as of right.—Occasionally visiting and making use of a house is ample evidence of possession, unless shown to have been done by the claimant in the capacity of a visitor, and not in his own right. UNUNTO RAM SEAL v. BROJO BULLUB SEAL

11 W. R., 136.

4. ——— Acts of ownership—Omission to show acts of ownership.—In special appeal, the High Court held that evidence which did not allude to any specific acts of ownership was not sufficient evidence to prove possession. The finding of the fact of possession by the lower Appellate Court upon such evidence reversed on special appeal.

of land with a defined boundary has been throughout claimed by a person as owner, and acts of ownership

have been done on various portions of it, such acts may be accepted as evidence of the possession of the whole tract Bhaskarappa v. Collector of North Kanara, I. L. R., 3 Bom., 452, distinguished. SIVASUBRAMANYA v. SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA [I. L. R., 9 Mad., 285]

6. — Thakbust award—Boundary.

Question of.—A thakbust award of boundary would in any case be material evidence of possession. PRANLAD SEV v. RAJENDRA KISHORE SINGH [2 B. L. R., P. C., 111 (37): 12 W. R., P. C., 6] 11 Moore's I. A., 293

7. — Survey proceedings—Survey

by revenue authorities—Records in Government maps—Plaintiff sued in 1876 to recover certain alluvial lands which had been in existence over twelve years, together with recent accretions thereto which he alleged, appertained to his taluk. The alluvial lands had been surveyed by the revenue authorities in 1863, as appertaining to no permanently-settled estate, and claimed by the Government. The plaintiff's predecessor, however, subsequently in 1864 laid claim to the lands, and the Collector, abandoning the claim of Government, recorded him in the Gov-

JOGGODISHURY . . . 7 C. L. R., 269

8. — Measurement of land by Government officers.—The evidence of Government having sent its officers to measure the land and to surround it with pillars is the very best evidence of possession of a lately-formed chur. COLLECTOR OF BURLINGHEAD v. KALER DOSS HAZRAH [17 W. R., 196]

9. — Decree for rent—Subsequent suit for possession.—A decree against the registered tenant, in a suit for rent against him and another, is not conclusive evidence of the possession of such tenant as between him and the other, in a subsequent civil action. HERRON NATH BHUTACHALDER v. HANVEY . . . 25 W. R., 23

10. — Receipt of rent—Failure to show collection of rent for portion of property.—Receipt of rent is good evidence of possession, but it does not necessarily follow that a party in possession has been disturbed because he cannot prove that he has collected rent of a particular portion of the property. PUDAR BINDOO MAHADEV v. MOHSEN CHANDER SAN . . . 20 W. R., 183

Receipt of rent is only evidence of possession. ABDOOL ALI v. ABDOOL KHAMAN 31 W. R., 420

11. Receipt for revenue.—Possession of receipts for Government revenue, though evidence of possession, does not prove it. LALLU SINGH v. AMRIT KOORN . . . 17 W. R., 400

Suit for possession—Registration under Beng. Act I of 1876.—Quære—Whether, in a suit founded upon possession alone, or in which the relief sought depends wholly upon possession, registration under Bengal Act VII of 1876 ought not to be treated as prima facie evidence of actual possession at the date when the registration was effected. RAM BIRMAN MAHTO v. JESHI MAHTO I. L. R., 8 Cal., 853

13. — Decision of Col

lector—Beng. Act VII of 1876 s 55—Per GARTH C. J. Semble—That s 55 of Bengal Act VII of 1876 constitutes the Collector a competent Court under particular circumstances for determining, as between two disputants the question of possession, and his recorded decision upon that question in the register might be evidence of the fact of possession as between those two parties. Ram Birman Mahto v. Jeshi Mahto, I. L. R., 8 Cal., 633, explained. SARASWATI DASS v. DHANPAT SINGH [I. L. R., 8 Cal., 431: 12 C. L. R., 12]

14. — Finding as to possession—

Mamladar—Magistrate—Criminal Procedure Code, 1872, s 530—Irregularity in taking possession.—A Mamladar's finding as to the point of actual possession is not conclusive. A Magistrate's finding is conclusive under s 530 of Act of 1872. LILLIE v. KNAJI PARASHRAM I. L. R., 5 Bom., 387

15. — Dispute as to possession between purchaser from heir and grantee from widow—Effect of decision of Magistrate as to possession.—In a former suit appellant sought as purchaser from the heir to a former proprietor to establish her mukurari right in certain lands as against the grantee from the widow of such proprietor, upon the death of the last sur-for arrears of rent due by H. B. the former proprietor, and which had been purchased by K. B. and H. B., who had granted a dar patni of the same to the respondents in 1849. In 1841 there was a proceeding of the respondents was tried as a regular suit between the objectors (respondents) as plaintiffs and the decree-holder (appellant) as defendant, and was decided in favour of the respondents in the lower Courts. On appeal to the Privy Council, their Lordships held that the proceeding in 1841 was conclusive of the present case, as showing that the actual possession then was in the grantee of the widow; that it was in the highest degree improbable that they, having established their possessory right against H. B., would, without a struggle, have allowed themselves to be

[18 W. R., P. C., 1

2. EVIDENCE OF TITLE.

17. — Onus of proof.—Person out of possession.—Possession is evidence of title, and is primarily exclusive. It is for him who impugns this exclusive title to show that the possession arose in some way which has preserved his own right. In every case the person who has been out of possession for more than twelve years must make out some prima facie title, and some agreement or acknowledgment of that title, such that possession is deprived of its ordinary effect through being held on a joint right or a subordinate right. *RAMCHANDRA NARAYAN v. Lost records.—Proof of long possession.—The plaintiff claimed a right of pre-emption as safee-sharikh, or partner in the thing sold. The Court of first instance gave him a decree on the ground of long possession as proprietor. The lower Appellate Court reversed the decision on the ground that the plaintiff's title depended on a deed of purchase, which it was admitted had been set aside in a former suit in 1855, and that the plaintiff had failed to show that the decision in that suit had been reversed. The plaintiff proved that he had preferred an appeal from that decision, and alleged that it had been overruled; but there was no proof of the result of the appeal, as the records of that suit had been burnt in the Mutiny. In 1881 she brought a possessory suit against the first defendant in the Mamlatdar's Court, which suit was dismissed in January 1885, the Mamlatdar holding that she had not been in possession. In a civil suit, however which (pending the proceedings in the Mamlatdar's Court) she had filed against the first defendant in the Court of the Subordinate Judge of Haveri, the Judge found that she had been in possession since 1880, and awarded her damages against the first defendant (who was held to be her farm servant) for crops which had been taken away by him. In 1887 the second defendant as mortgagee from defendant No. 1 obtained a decree against plaintiff in the Mamlatdar's Court awarding him possession of the land, and in execution of that decree the plaintiff was dispossessed in December 1887. In 1890 the plaintiff filed this suit to recover possession and for mesne profits since 1887. The defendant pleaded that the plaintiff had no title to the land, and that the suit was barred by limitation, inasmuch as the plaintiff had not brought a suit to establish her right within three years after the Mamlatdar's order in 1885 dismissing her possessory suit. Held that the plaintiff's possession prior to 1887, confirmed as it was by the decree of the Civil Court in 1885 and by the finding of the lower Court of appeal in the present case, must prevail against the defendant, who claimed through plaintiff's farm servant only, and whose possession commenced with the disturbance

3. NATURE OF POSSESSION—continued.

72. ———— Symbolical possession, Effect of.—Where in execution proceedings symbolical possession is given to a person, such possession amounts to an actual transfer of possession as between the parties to the suit; but such possession has no such operation against third persons who are not parties to the suit. Juggobundhu Mukerjee v. Ram Chunder Bysack, 1. L. R., 5 Calc., 554, explained. RUSHT SINGH v. BUNWARI LALL SAHU [I. L. R., 10 Calc., 993]

73. ———— Formal possession—Limitation.—Where a plaintiff, who has obtained a decree for possession of immovable property, undergoes the mere ceremony of receiving formal possession on the spot by beat of drum and posting of bamboos, and then allows twelve years to elapse without taking any steps to acquire and assert actual possession, he loses the title conferred by the decree. PRABEE MOHUN PODDAR v. JUGOBUNDHOO SEN [24 W. R., 418]

74. ———— Formal possession—Cause of action—Possession under decree barred by limitation.—Where a decree declared that plaintiff was to get possession of a certain quantity of land on a batwara being made, and the decree-holder, after allowing his right to be barred by lapse of time, applied to the Collector, had a batwara effected, and obtained merely formal possession,—Held that such possession gave him no fresh cause of action. *KISHORE SINGH v. 115 ———— Possession by one member of family— Neglect by plaintiff to take possession of his share notwithstanding request that he would do so—Limitation—The plaintiff and the defendant were brothers and members of an undivided family. The plaintiff was in Government service, and had been for a long time absent from his native place on duty, the family property remaining under the management of the defendant. In 1803 the defendant wrote to the plaintiff, requesting him to return and manage his share of the property, or to employ some one to manage it for him. Nothing however, was done by the plaintiff in the matter, and the defendant continued in possession. In 1882 the plaintiff sued the defendant for partition. The defendant pleaded that the suit was barred, contending that he had been in adverse possession from the date of the letter. The Court of first instance awarded the plaintiff's claim. The defendant appealed, and the lower Appellate Court reversed the lower Court's decree, holding that the suit was barred. On appeal by the plaintiff to the High Court—Held that the suit was not barred. The above-mentioned letter of the defendant showed that up to the date at which it was written, the defendant had not been in possession of the property "as his own property to the exclusion of the plaintiff, and the mere circumstance that subsequently to the date of the letter the plaintiff had not participated in the profits would not in the absence of other evidence justify the inference that the plaintiff was then excluded. DEVKAR SADASHIV r BHUKARI SADASHIV

On the 6th April 1880, in execution of the decree, he was put in formal possession by the Court under s. 163 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877) in the presence of A, who made no objection. At the time of these proceedings A's sons (the present defendants) were living with him in the house, and they continued to do so subsequently. A died in 1885, and his sons continued in possession of the property and cultivated it. On the 4th April 1891 the plaintiff brought this suit to eject them. They pleaded that the suit was barred by limitation, contending that the execution-proceedings in 1880 did not bind them, as they were not parties to that suit. Held that, as the present suit would not have been barred against A had he survived, it was not barred against the defendants, whose rights were derived from him. The defendants living with their father had no independent juridical possession of the premises. The father A was the only person in possession. The possession which the plaintiff obtained through the Court from A in 1880 operated as well against the defendants (A's sons) as against A himself. PANDHAPINATH v. MAHABHUKAN

Possession under gift making valid title.—Of two brothers of a Mitakshara family, the younger who had been born deaf and dumb was disqualified from inheriting, but the action of the elder to the younger was such as to recognise for some years that the younger had a joint interest in the family property, although it was found that there was no intention shown by the acts of the elder brother to waive the rights accruing to him in consequence of his brother's disqualification. The brothers died and also a daughter of the elder brother, who was their only descendant. This daughter had an only son, who died before her, after taking, however, the whole family estate under a gift made to him with his mother's assent by his maternal grandfather in 1867. In 1882 the plaintiff, a collateral relation, sued the widow of the donee to obtain the estate of the younger of the brothers. The widow made title under the gift to her deceased husband, followed by his possession, and hereafterwards, since the date of the gift. In March 1875, less than twelve years from the expiration of such lease, the plaintiffs brought a suit for possession against B and the talukhdars of the estate of which the lands in dispute formed part. The latter alleged that the lakhiraj title of the plaintiff was invalid; that although no proceedings, as required by the Rent law, had been taken to invalidate the plaintiff's title, they, the talukhdars, had resumed possession of the land by receiving the rents from B from 1859; and that the suit was barred by reason of their possession since that date. Held that the suit was not barred, inasmuch as nothing had occurred to determine the tenancy which existed between the plaintiff and B, and that the possession of the latter was in law the plaintiff's possession. PARBUTTI DAS v. 129 ———— Adverse possession of a partial interest (e.g., a tenant's) in land.—Title by adverse possession asserted by a plaintiff against the true owner as well as alleged as a defence.—Limitation Act (XV of 1877), s. 27 and art 144.—Adverse possession for more than twelve years by one claiming to hold land as its full owner not only extinguishes the title of the true owner to the land so held and debars him from suing for its recovery but creates a title by negation in the occupant which he can actively assert, if he loses possession, even against the true owner. A partial interest in land may be lost by adverse possession as well as the whole interest and the right to such partial interest may be asserted by suit. So, where a landlord seeks to recover from his tenant possession of land in his tenant's occupancy, and the latter alleging a perpetual tenancy successfully resists on that ground the landlord's attempt to dispossess him, the tenant may, after the statutory period has expired plead limitation in bar of a subsequent suit in ejectment by the landlord. In the year 1882 the Collector declared the alienation to be illegal and in the year 1883 ordered that the plaintiff should be reinstated in the possession of his share. At plaintiff's request, his share was given into the possession of the defendant, who was the plaintiff's brother and kinsman of the entire share. In the year 1882 the plaintiff brought this suit against the defendant to recover possession of his share. The defendant contended that the suit was time-barred the plaintiff not having been in possession of his share for more than twelve years.

the estates that came within the scope of the permanent settlement, it withdrew its sovereign right to vary the assessments; beyond that they did not go; they do not constitute a contractual relationship between the Government and the owners of permanently-settled estates, or any relationship as would debar Government from claiming and exercising against those owners the rights of an ordinary proprietor. Although therefore Government continues to receive the full revenue from the proprietor of a permanently-settled estate for the entire estate, the former is not precluded from claiming title by adverse possession in respect of any portion thereof. When a person is let into possession of a particular property by another claiming it to be his own, the former cannot contend, after the expiration of his tenancy, that the latter (i.e., the person alleging himself to be the owner) cannot acquire an adverse title against him as well as others by efflux of time. *Kally Churn Sahoo v. The first was redeemed by the father of defendant No. 1 alone in 1868; the second was redeemed by the defendant No. 1 more than twelve years before the suit. The parties were Mahomedans, and the plaintiff had a brother and three sisters only, one of whom (defendant No. 2) was a party to the suit. Defendant No. 1 contended that the suit was defective for want of parties, and that it was time barred. Held that the plaintiff's brothers and sisters ought to have been joined as co-plaintiffs, the defendant No. 1's possession after redemption not being adverse to them. If it was adverse at all, it was adverse to the whole of the plaintiff's branch of the family, so as to bar the right of the group altogether. The plaint bore a stamp sufficient to cover a suit for recovery of possession. Held that, inasmuch as the effect of the refusal of the Collector to register the plaintiff's name under s. 78 of the Land Registration Act (Beugal Act VII of 1876) was to prevent the plaintiff recovering the rent of the estate, and that such refusal was alleged in the plaint, the suit might be taken to be in substance a suit for recovery of possession, and ought not to have been dismissed. *Amir Hossein v. ## 2. LIKELIHOOD OF BREACH OF THE PEACE—continued.

The following, however, was a later holding under the Code of 1872 with regard to a police report.

37. — Criminal Procedure Code, 1872, s. 530—Record of grounds—Police report, Incorporation of—Evidence of possession—Evidence of title.—In proceedings under s. 530 of the Criminal Procedure Code, the Magistrate recorded the following words: "Whereas from the police report a breach of the peace is probable," and found that certain persons were in possession. Held that, although the record of grounds was unsatisfactory, as the initial proceeding did not contain within itself all which the law requires to be recorded, —viz., in the first place, that the Magistrate is satisfied that a dispute likely to induce a breach of the peace exists; and in the second place, the ground upon which he is so satisfied,—yet that, as the police report from which the grounds for apprehending a breach of the peace appeared was incorporated by reference, the final order was not defective. IN THE MATTER OF THE PETITION OF KALI KRISTO THAKUR v. GOLAM ALI CHOWDHRY [I. L. R., 7 Cal., 46; 8 C. L. R., 245]

And under the Code of 1882, the Magistrate is now to be "satisfied on a police report or other information."

38. — *Police report setting out probability of breach of peace.—Semble—*That a reference by a Magistrate to a police report which clearly sets out the probability of a breach of the peace is a sufficient statement of the reasons for the Magistrate's being satisfied of the existence of a dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace, within the meaning of s. 145 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1882. GOLUCK CHUNDER PAL v. KALI CHARAN DE . . . I. L. R., 13 Cal., 175

39. — Examination of parties—Criminal Procedure Code, 1861, s. 318—Land dispute.—When both the disputing parties are examined, and state that men were collected by their opponents for the purpose of committing a breach of the peace, a Magistrate is justified, without inquiring who was the aggressor or the aggrieved party, to proceed under s. 318 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, and to take whatever steps are in his opinion necessary to prevent a breach of the peace. GUNGA NARAIN MITTER v. GOUR SOONDER CHOWDREY [15 W. R., Cr., 85]

In cases under the Codes of 1861 and 1872 it was generally ruled that a proceeding stating the grounds for his belief in the likelihood of a breach of the peace must be recorded by the Magistrate. ANONYMOUS CASE . . . 4 Mad., Ap., 49

Where a Magistrate, in consequence of the institution of various cases relating to breaches of the peace between the parties of two rival zamindars had directed the police to enquire and report whether there were sufficient grounds for proceeding under s. 145 Criminal Procedure Code, and having received a report which both suggested the necessity for such proceedings and set forth substantial reasons in support of the suggestion made such report the foundation for the proceeding which he instituted it was contended among other things, that the Magistrate had not complied with the provisions of the Code in omitting to state the grounds to cite it as the ground of his proceeding on which he was satisfied that a dispute within the terms of s. 145 existed, and that it would be open to the parties and this must be served on the parties to the dispute; for it is the intention of the law, not only that Magistrates should have sufficient grounds for proceeding under s. 145, but that they should inform the parties concerned of the grounds on which they are proceeding. A Sessions Judge is not competent to order a Magistrate to take action under s. 145. He should rather draw his attention to the nature of the dispute in the trial before him, so that the Magistrate may exercise his own discretion as to the necessity of proceedings. Proceedings so initiated, when there is nothing in the police report or elsewhere to justify them, would be void, and s. 537 of the Criminal Procedure Code would have no application. *Gour Mohan Majee v. It is not sufficient that the Magistrate should have before him a police report, and that he should have given orders thereon that a written order be drawn up within the terms of s. 145. It is his duty to draw up, or have drawn up, an order which in all respects satisfies the requirements of the law. It is absolutely necessary that the written order should be correct and complete in its terms. MOHESH SOWAR v. NARAIN BAG . . . . . I. L. R., 27 Calc., 981

48. ———— Parties claiming to be in possession of land, the subject of dispute, Right of, to appear in proceedings—Criminal Procedure Code, s. 145.—Before taking action under s. 145 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, the Magistrate is bound to be satisfied from a police report or other information as to the likelihood of a breach of the peace, and he is also bound to make an order in writing, stating the grounds of his being so satisfied, and this must be served on the parties to the dispute; for it is the intention of the law, not only that Magistrates should have sufficient grounds for proceeding under s. 145, but that they should inform the parties concerned of the grounds on which they are proceeding. Parties who, though not actually involved in the dispute, claim to be in possession of lands which are the subject of proceedings under s. 145, should not be shut out from giving evidence in support of their claims. To do so would undoubtedly occasion very serious prejudice and interference with any possession which they might be able to establish. QUEEN-EMPRESS v. GOBIND CHANDRA DAS [I. L. R., 20 Calc., 520]

On 1st June B S applied to be substituted as a party in place of his father B D K and B S were made parties without any fresh proceeding under s. 145 of the Code. The case was heard on 27th June and 7th July, and on 17th July the Magistrate found as regards the possession in favour of D K. Held by PETHERAM C J., and TREVELLAK, J. (RAYNARD, J., dissenting), that since the possession to be enquired into was the possession at the time of the institution of the proceedings the words “parties

The Magistrate had power to substitute the name of B S for that of his father without commencing the proceedings de novo. The alteration in s. 145 of Act V of 1898 (the present Criminal Procedure Code of the Madras) of s. 510 of the old Code, Act V of 1872, implies that the Magistrate is to decide on the possession not at the time of the institution of the proceedings but at the time of recording the evidence. It is impossible to lay down any hard-and-fast rule which may be applicable to all cases as to the exact point of time to which an inquiry under s. 145 must be directed, and the time at which possession must be found in one party or the other must be governed by the facts of each particular case. To hold that the Magistrate is precluded from inquiring into anything before the date when he actually commenced his own proceedings might in some cases lead to a person who has been acting in an unwarrantable manner in raising the process of the law to enable him to carry out a high-handed and improper scheme, which could never have been the intention of the Legislature. In a proceeding under s. 145 regarding a dispute between two parties concerning certain collieries, it appeared that the first party were certainly in possession of the collieries which contained the office where the business of the collieries was transacted, and where all the cash books and papers of the business were kept, and that the second party had during a period of about fourteen days prior to the commencement of the proceedings succeeded in obtaining possession of the pits, wharves, tramways, etc., of the colliery by what the Court considered to be a high-handed and improper scheme, and acting in an unwarrantable manner. The Magistrate, considering himself bound to find who was in actual possession at the date of the commencement of the proceedings by himself, passed an order in favour of the second party. He'd that such order was bad, and that, as the second party was undoubtedly not in possession of the whole of the property in dispute, and the effect of it was to place them in possession of the portion that was in the possession of the first party, the proper order to make under such circumstances was one under s. 146, attaching the property. *KATRAS JHERRIA COAL CO. v. Criminal Procedure Code, 1872, s. 539—Actual possession—If a person of wife or agent—In an inquiry under s. 539 of the Code of Criminal Procedure the only thing to be determined is the fact of actual possession. In a dispute between the wife of a lunatic and the manager of his estate with regard to the possession of certain property, the Magistrate attached the property, under s. 531 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, on the ground that he was unable to satisfy himself as to who was in possession. It had been proved before him that the wife was in actual possession, but there was a doubt as to whether she was not in possession merely as the agent of her husband. Held that s. 530 has only to do with actual possession and that the Magistrate should have decided that the wife was in possession.

The right of use of land contemplated by s. 147 is one of an entirely different description resembling a right of easement, not one arising from the terms of a contract between landlord and tenant. A dispute between the landlord and tenant regarding the right of the latter to erect or re-erect a gola which has fallen down is not a matter properly coming within s. 147 of the Code. 170. — Criminal Procedure Code (Act X of 1872), s. 522, 523, 524—Order to restore possession of immovable property.

—An order made under s. 522 of the Criminal Procedure Code (Act X of 1872), restoring possession of immovable property to a person who has been dispossessed of it by criminal force, is an independent order and may be made subsequently to the date of the conviction of the offender. It need not be made at the same time as the conviction. The case

if they are, the order is not thereby necessarily invalid. Cl 2 of the section gives them a remedy by civil suit. On 27th September 1897 complainant charged one I with criminal trespass under s. 447 of the Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860). He alleged that in the previous July R had entered into possession of the land and sowed rice upon it, and that, when in the month of September 1897 he (the complainant) went to the field, R had turned him out by force and refused to vacate the land. On the 17th November 1897 the case was heard by the Third Class Magistrate who convicted R of the offence charged. On the following day (18th November 1897) the complainant applied to the Magistrate under s. 522 of the Code of Criminal Procedure (Act X of 1872) to be restored to possession of the land and of the standing crops. The Magistrate ordered possession of the land to be restored to the complainant, but attached the crops under Ch. XLIII of the Criminal Procedure Code. Thereupon one I intervened, and claimed the crops as having been sown by himself. His claim was disallowed, and the crops were ordered to be sold and the proceeds credited to Government under ss. 523 and 524 of the Code. Held that the order made by the Magistrate under s. 522 restoring possession of the land to the complainant was bad because it did not appear that the offence of which the accused was convicted was attended with criminal force, and that the dispossession was due to the use of such force. The legal entry complained of had taken place in July 1897. The accused then took possession, and in September, being then still in possession, forcibly resisted the complainant when he attempted to enter upon the land. The complainant, however, did not charge the accused with this assault, but with the trespass which had taken place in July. It is only when the actual use of criminal force leads to dispossession that an order under s. 522 can be made. Held also that the order passed under ss. 523 and 524 with reference to the crops were illegal. The crops were not property in respect of which the offence was committed, nor were they used in the commission of the offence. They were not such property as is referred to in s. 517, 523, or 524 of the Criminal Procedure Code. Held also that the Third Class Magistrate as such had no authority to make an order under s. 524. *NARAYAN GOVIND v. whether B had authority to enter into that transaction. Per GARTH, C.J.—That although, on the authority of The Bank of Bengal v. Fagan, 5 Moore's I. A., 27, a power to negotiate Government securities would authorize the negotiation of Government securities by way of pledge, yet W was entitled to a decree, on the ground that A and B had no power, under the power-of-attorney, to borrow money in the name of W; and that therefore the defendant was not entitled to retain the security given for the advance (viz., the Government promissory note). WATSON v. JOMMENJOY COONDoo. I. L. R., 8 Calc., 934

On appeal to the Privy Council,—Held that, with regard to the general objects of the power, B had under it no authority to pledge, and that the lender of the money acquired no title to the note as against W. The power-of-attorney was not in the same form as that in the Bank of Bengal v. Macleod, 5 Moore's I. A., 1, and Bank of Bengal v. Fagan, 5 Moore's I. A., 27, not containing, in express words, power to indorse. Had it done so, the question would have been whether there was anything to prevent it from being a power, in the discretion of the donee of it, to indorse the note, and convert it into one payable to bearer, whenever he thought fit to do so, for any purpose. It was not laid down in the judgment in those cases that the words used in a power-of-attorney, to express its objects, are always to be construed disjunctively, though they may be so construed; and there is no reason why a rule of construction, intended to aid in arriving at the meaning of the parties, should not be applied in construing a power-of-attorney as much as any other document. JOMMENJOY COONDoo v. WATSON

NATIONAL BANK OF INDIA

POWER-OF-ATTORNEY—concluded.

(I of 1879), s. 5.—It is not necessary for the Courts in India to consider whether a power-of-attorney issued in England, but which is intended to operate in British India, complies with the fiscal requirements of the stamp laws in England. It is sufficient if such power-of-attorney is stamped according to the stamp laws of British India. Bristow v. Sequerille, 5 Ex., 275, and James v. Catherwood, 3 D. & R., 190, followed. *Clegg v. to enter a decree and asked for an adjournment in order to obtain further evidence the Court granted an adjournment on the terms that the plaintiff should bear the whole costs of the hearing. SHANKS v SAVAGE, 1 I. L. R., 7 Calo, 177

3 ——— Admiralty Court—Consolidation of salvage claims—Civil Procedure Code (1932)—Rules and Regulations under Stat 2 & 3 Will IV c 51—Procedure—On an application by the impugnant for the consolidation of three separate salvage claims made by three different promisors for salvage services rendered by them—Held (following the more recent English practice) that the claims should not be consolidated against the will of the promisors but should be heard one after the other successively, subject however to one set only of costs being allowed to them in the event of the Court finding at the hearing that the application for consolidation was resisted without sufficient grounds. In such a case (as there is no procedure for such an application prescribed by the Rules and Regulations made in pursuance of 2 and 3 Will IV c 51 nor any procedure for consolidation in the Civil Procedure Code) the practice of the Court of Admiralty in England ought to be followed.

11. ——— Application for decree on terms of agreement to compromise suit—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 375.—After the hearing of the suit had begun, the plaintiffs and defendants came to an agreement by which they settled all the matters in dispute between them in the suit. The agreement was in writing, and dealt in one clause with the dispute, the subject-matter of the suit, and in a second clause, with another dispute of long standing between the parties, with which the suit had nothing to do. The plaintiffs subsequently objecting to consent to a decree being taken in terms of the first clause of the agreement, the defendants took out a rule nisi, calling on the plaintiffs to show cause why the agreement should not be recorded in Court and why the Court

32. ———— Cases to be entered in the list of suits for liquidated claims—Rules 281 and 284 of the Calcutta High Court, Original Jurisdiction—Removal of cases improperly entered in that list—Ordinary mortgage suit—Notice of transfer of case.—Held that the practice of the Court having been for many years to place ordinary mortgage suits on the list of suits for liquidated claims in the view that the incidental relief sought in such suits did not prevent them from being regarded as suits in which the claim was in substance a claim only for a liquidated demand in money, the practice should be adhered to. Held also that, when a suit is transferred from the general list of causes (at the instance of the plaintiff), it is desirable that this should be done on notice to the defendant, so that he may not be taken by surprise. *BENODE LALL ROY v. 64. ————— Interrogatories—Civil Procedure Code, 1877, s. 121—Ex-parte order for interrogatories.—S. 121 of the Code of Civil Procedure contemplates (1) leave to interrogate, and (2) the service of the interrogatories through the Court. It is the duty of the Court under that section to determine whether the applicant should be allowed to interrogate the other side, but not to determine at that stage what questions the party interrogated should be compelled to answer. Where an ex-parte order is made in chambers giving leave to interrogate, the party ordered to answer has a right to come into Court to have the order set aside if the case is one in which interrogatories should not have been allowed. When an order for the administration of interrogatories is properly made, a party objecting to the interrogatories administered may, at his peril, omit to answer the interrogatories to which he objects; but the more prudent course is to file his affidavit in answer, stating in it his objections to answer such questions as he objects to. Where interrogatories are scandalous, or in any way an abuse of the process of the Court, the Court may interfere at any stage. The powers given to the Court by s. 136 should not be exercised except in extreme cases. SHAM KISHORE MUNDLE v. SHOSHIBHOOSUN BISWAS [I. L. R., 5 Calc., 707; 5 C. L. R., 509]

some Government promissory notes, which had been deposited as security for certain loans, and claimed a specified sum as damages or in the alternative a decree for an account. The defendant bank denied the alleged agreement, and asserted that the notes had been sold after due notice and on failure of the plaintiff to comply with the terms on which the loans were made. Interrogatories were administered for the examination of the plaintiff, and amongst them one in the following terms: "State how your estimate of damages to the amount of ₹1,30,000 mentioned in the eighth paragraph of the plaint is arrived at?" Upon the plaintiff declining to answer that interrogatory, the defendant bank applied on notice for an order under s. 127 of the Code of Civil Procedure requiring him to answer it fully. Held that the plaintiff was not bound to answer it. If, on the one hand, it was intended to elicit the principle on which the damages were estimated by the plaintiff, the defendant was not entitled to discovery on that point. If, on the other hand, it was sought to elicit an account of the transactions between the parties, it was unnecessary, as the transactions were within the knowledge of the defendant bank; and if it were not, then the enquiry was premature, as the question whether there had been any wrongful act committed and whether the plaintiff was entitled to any damages should be first determined. *NICKRAM DOBAY v. When a person, on whose behalf a suit had been revived and carried on by his next friend, made, after attaining his majority, and long after the death of the next friend, an application in his own name for execution of the decree in the suit without having complied with the requirements of s. 451 of the Civil Procedure Code as to electing to proceed with the suit and obtaining leave of the Court to do so, and the application was admitted and notice of execution given to the defendant,—Held, under the circumstances, that such omission to comply with the requirements of s. 451, though an irregularity, was not a bar to the application being allowed to proceed. An application, under s. 451 for leave to proceed with a suit, does not require any notice, but may be made ex-parte at any time. Even if the application in this case therefore were not itself a sufficient indication that the applicant elected to proceed with the suit, and that the Court in allowing him to proceed in his own name gave him the required leave (and semble that would be the case), the Court could give such leave at the hearing of the application nunc pro tunc. MORGAN*. 3 Bom., O. C., 63

121. ——— Time for objecting to appeal for non-compliance with rules of Court.—Appeal dismissed, as the appellants had not given security for costs, and as the appeal had not been filed within the time required by the rules of the Court. It is sufficient for the respondent to object at the hearing of the appeal in the case of non-compliance with the rules of Court, and he need not apply specially to have the appeal rejected, when the memorandum of appeal is preferred. MUHAMMADBAI DHARAMSI v. BHANJI TOPAN. 3 Bom., O. C., 64

122. ——— Civil Procedure Code, s. 549—Dismissal of appeal—Practice.—The last paragraph of s. 549 of the Civil Procedure Code seems to contemplate that, on failure to furnish security within the time fixed, an order for rejecting the appeal should be obtained from the Court that gave the order to furnish security. Upon the application of the respondent in a second appeal pending before the High Court, an order was passed requiring the appellant to furnish security for the costs of the appeal, and to lodge such security at any time before the hearing. This order purported to be made under s. 549 of the Civil Procedure Code, but neither the application nor the order stated the amount of the security required. At the hearing of the appeal, no security having been lodged, the respondent objected that, with reference to the terms of s. 549, the Court had no option but to dismiss the appeal. Held that the proper course was to have applied to the Judge who passed the order for security, at any time before the case came on for hearing, for the rejection of the appeal, and that it was too late at the hearing to ask the Court to reject the appeal. *THAKUR DAS v. 39. ————— Wajib-ul-urz, Construction of—Purchaser of isolated plot of land in mehal—Purchaser of sir land.—The wajib-ul-urz of a village gave a right of pre-emption to “co-sharers in the mehal.” One of the co-sharers brought a suit for pre-emption which the vendee-defendant resisted on ground that he also was a co-sharer in the mehal, and the plaintiff had therefore no preferential right. This contention was based on a former purchase by the defendant under a deed of sale executed by a co-sharer : and comprising (i) an isolated plot of land in the mehal; (ii) sir lands in the mehal. Held by the Full Bench that, it being found that the vendee-defendant had already become a co-sharer in the mehal prior to the date of the purchase which was in question in the suit, the plaintiff had no preferential right of pre-emption. Per MAHMOOD, J.—The decisions of the Full Bench in *Naimat Ali v. One of two co-sharers, entitled to equal shares in an inheritance, having taken possession of the whole, was used by the other for her share, with mesne profits from the date of the suit. To provide costs, the latter had sold to her co-plaintiffs the right to claim half of her share. The defences were—(1) relinquishment of her claim in favour of the defendant; (2) that the defendant had a right of pre-emption as to part, in consequence of the above transaction; (3) that the share in dispute was subject to a proportion of the debts due from the estate of the deceased, chargeable on the whole inheritance; and that, if the plaintiffs should be held to be entitled to a decree, they should also be declared liable to pay, according to shares, their part of all the debts of the deceased liquidated by the defendant, as well as a proportion of money which he had expended, in good faith, in litigation for the protection of the inheritance. As to (1), the two Courts below concurred in the finding that no relinquishment had taken place. As to (2), it was pointed out that there had been no attempt to sell a share of the inheritance, but only to sell a share in a suit; and it was held that the position taken up by the defendant was inconsistent with his claiming to pre-empt, so that pre-emption was inapplicable. As to (3), it was held that, although the plaintiffs could not have a decree for mesne profits during the whole period of the defendant's possession, yet, if any account was to be taken of the defendant's payments, it must also be taken of his receipts; and the new mehal sold property to both to a stranger Thereupon a co sister in the original mehal brought a suit for pre-emption in respect of the property situate therein which had been sold, excluding the property situate in the new mehal. Rent Act (XII of 1881), s. 177—Interpretation of statutes.*—The expression "patti of a mehal" as used in s. 188 of the N.-W. P. Land Revenue Act (XIX of 1873) means a division of a mehal distinct from the share of an individual co-sharer. The right of pre-emption, therefore, which is given by the above-named section is not exercisable on the sale merely of the share of an individual co-sharer not amounting to such a division of a mehal. Moreover, the provisions of s. 188 of Act XIX of 1873 do not apply to a sale under s. 168 of the same Act of land other than that in respect of which the arrears which it is sold to satisfy accrued. Hence, where the share of a co-sharer in an imperfect pattidari village, not being the land in respect of which the arrears of rent, for the satisfaction of which the said share is sold, are due, is sold under the provisions of s. 177 of the N.-W. P. Rent Act (XII of 1881), no right of pre-emption can be claimed in respect of such sale. So held by EDGE, C.J., and YOUNG, J., MAHMOOD, J., contra. There being no statutory definition of the word patti, that word must be taken in its ordinary acceptation, and in that acceptation it means the share of a pattidar, whether such share amounts to a definite division of a mehal or not. The exigencies of the law of pre-emption require that in s. 188 of Act XIX of 1873, the word patti should be construed in its broader signification as equivalent to any share of a pattidar. The words of s. 168, which provide that land sold under that section is to be proceeded against "as if it were the land on account of which the revenue is due under the provisions of this Act," render the incidents of sales under s. 166, including pre-emption applicable to sales under s. 168, with the exception that in such case only the defaulter's interest in the land sold passes by the sale. Hence a right of pre-emption would accrue under s. 188 in respect of the compulsory sale of any share of a co-sharer, though such share did not amount to a patti in the sense of a definite division of a mehal. *BAIJ NATH v. 53. ——— Effect of perfect partition—Wajib-ul-urz—Co-sharers—Purchase of equity of redemption by mortgagee in possession—Acquiescence—Equitable estoppel.—The wajib-ul-urz of three villages which originally formed a single mehal gave a right of pre-emption to co-sharers in case of transfers of shares to strangers. Afterwards the shares in these villages were made the subject of a perfect partition and divided into separate mehals. Subsequently, by two deeds of sale executed on the 13th January 1884, and registered on the 17th January 1884, some of the original co-sharers sold to strangers their shares in all three villages. At the time of the sale, the shares in two of the villages were in possession of the vendees under a possessory mortgage, the amount due upon which was set off against the purchase money. The share in the third village was, at the time of the sale, in possession of another of the original co-sharers under a . . . . . On the 17th January 1885 this . . . . . sharer brought a suit against the vendors and the vendees to enforce his right of pre-emption under the wajib-ul-urz in respect of the shares sold in the three villages. Held that, notwithstanding the partition of the village into separate mehals, the existing wajib-ul-urz at the time of partition must be presumed to subsist and govern the separate mehals until it was shown that a new one had been made. Gokal Singh v. Mannu Lal, I. L. R., 7 All., 772, referred to. Held also that the Court below was wrong in holding that the plaintiff, by reason of his having omitted in a suit previously brought against him for redemption of his mortgage, and dismissed for want of jurisdiction, to set up in defence any right of pre-emption or to express any desire to purchase, was equitably estopped by acquiescence in the sale from asserting his pre-emptive right. *SHIAM SUNDER v. the same patti as the vendor. The deed contained a specification of the interests purchased and the considerations paid by the co-sharers and the stranger vendees respectively. In a suit for pre-emption by certain co-sharers of the same patti as the vendor, the lower Appellate Court held that, although the co-sharers-vendees had a pre-emptive right of the same degree as the plaintiffs, nevertheless they, having joined a stranger with them in purchasing the property, had forfeited their right, and could not resist the claim even in respect of such portions as they had purchased under the sale-deed. Held that this view was erroneous, and that, inasmuch as the deed of sale contained an exact specification of the shares purchased by the co-sharers-vendees, who had an equal right of purchase to that of the plaintiffs in respect of such shares, and as the shares purchased and the consideration paid by the stranger vendee were also exactly specified, the lower Court should not have decreed the claim for pre-emption as to that portion of the property which had been purchased by the co-sharers. *SHEOHAROS RAI v. 67. — — — — — Claim based upon custom—Evidence afforded by obsolete wajib-ul-urz—Rules of the Board of Revenue for the settlement of the Gorakhpur and Basti districts (B. E. C., 8—1, s. 39).—The plaintiffs brought their suit in 1890 to pre-empt certain property situated in the Gorakhpur district. Their claim was based upon two grounds: one, an alleged contract said to be recorded in and proved by a wajib-ul-urz of 1860 relating to the village in question; and the other, a custom of pre-emption alleged to be existing in the village. The period during which the wajib-ul-urz of 1860 was in force expired prior to the sale which gave rise to the right of pre-emption sought to be enforced. Subsequently to the expiration of that wajib-ul-urz, certain rules had been framed, with reference to the settlement of the Gorakhpur and Basti districts, the material portions of which, for the purposes of the present case, were as follows: "A memorandum of the village customs will be appended to each khewat by the Assistant Settlement Officer, when he verifies the jamabandi, and it will take the place of the document hitherto known as the wajib-ul-urz" * * * "In regard to any custom or constitution peculiar to the mehal, the following matters should be noticed: class (d), s. 25]: (a) Pre-emption (as regards mehals which belong to other than Mahomedan proprietors) when the proprietors expressly demand that it may be noted and proved conclusively that the custom exists." At the new settlement made in accordance with these rules, no mention of the right of pre-emption as obtaining in the mehal in question was recorded. Upon these facts it was held by EDGE, C.J., and BURKITT, J., that having regard to the rules above-mentioned framed by the Board of Revenue for the settlement of the Gorakhpur and Basti districts, the mere absence of any mention of the right of pre-emption in the new memorandum of village customs was in itself no evidence that the custom of pre-emption had ceased to exist, and that the wajib ul urz of 1860 might be used as evidence of the existence of such a custom. Per ALKMAN, J.—The absence from the new memorandum of village customs of any mention of the existence of a right of pre-emption was a circumstance which the Court would be entitled to take into consideration in any conflict of evidence as to whether or not the custom of pre-emption did exist. *SADUL SAKH v. There was no evidence that the plaintiff had satisfied the requirements of the Mohomedan law as to immediate and confirmatory demands or that there was any custom which absolved him from compliance with those requirements or that he was at any time willing to pay the actual contract price. Held that, in the absence of evidence of any special custom different from or not co-extensive with the Mohomedan law of pre-emption, that law must be applied.

On appeal, the District Judge in effect dismissed her claim as against the defendants who were the rival pre-emptors but gave the plaintiff a right to obtain the share if the other pre-emptors did not avail themselves of the decree within the time allowed in the law. On the 1st day of the month of the year 1885, the plaintiff's share was sold in execution of a decree in another suit. Respondent contended that as since the appeal the share out of which plaintiff alleged that her right arose was sold, she could not get any decree now in her favour.

Held that this Court as a Court of appeal has only got to see what was the decree which the Court of first instance should have passed, and if the Court of first instance had wrongly dismissed the claim, the plaintiff cannot be prejudiced by her share having been subsequently sold in execution in another suit, such a sale could not have affected her right to maintain the decree if she had obtained a decree in her favour in the Court of first instance either on review or on appeal, nor could it have been made the ground of appeal. Further plaintiff being out of possession of her share at the time she instituted the suit for pre-emption was immaterial the Court should have ascertained whether the plaintiff was at the date of suit entitled in law to the share out of which her right of pre-emption was alleged to have arisen. Held by MANMOON, J., that the passage from Hamilton's Hedaya by Grady, p. 562, means that in the pre-emptive tenement the pre-emptor should have a vested ownership and not a mere expectancy of inheritance or a reversionary or any kind of contingent right, or any interest falling short of full ownership. *SAKINA BIBI v. The said wajib-ul-urz contained a clause relative to pre-emptive rights to the following effect: "When any musafidar in the patti desires to transfer his share, then first a shareholder in the patti takes it, and if he does not take it, then another man who desires to take it takes it." Held that this clause was declaratory of the village custom, and that it was not intended thereby to adopt the Mahomedan law of pre-emption. *RUSTOM ALI KHAN v. If no person interested in the village takes it, then a stranger may take it.” Held that, under the circumstances of the case the plaintiff had no right of pre-emption in respect of the land claimed by him, the vendor not being, within the meaning of the wajib ul urz a co-sharer in the village by virtue of his possession of a portion of the resumed musaf. KALLIAN MAL & MADAN MOHAR I. property. If the term of the mortgaged share of any co-sharer is about to expire and notice of foreclosure has been issued, and the co-sharer mortgagor has not the means to redeem, then another co-sharer, after paying up the money, may take back the share, and when the original mortgagor has the means, he, after paying the money, may take possession of the share. Held that, in the case of a conditional sale of property to which this wajib-ul-urz applied, there were only two stages contemplated by the wajib-ul-urz, and not three. The first stage was at or about the time of the execution of the deed of conditional sale, and at that time pre-emption might be had by a co-sharer at the rate indicated in the wajib-ul-urz. The second stage was when the conditional vendee had brought his suit for foreclosure, and at that time the pre-emptor would have to pay the amount found to be due under the deed of conditional sale. When once, however, the order for foreclosure had been made absolute, the co-sharer's right of pre-emption was gone and extinguished. GYA BHARTI v. LAKHNATH RAI . . . . . I. L. The village was subsequently divided into three separate mehals by means of a perfect partition under the N.-W. P. Land Revenue Act (XIX of 1873). Held that the agreement regarding pre-emption remained in force after the partition. The term "village," as used in the wajib-ul-urz, means a definite area of land with houses upon it, and does not necessarily imply a joint ownership of such land, inasmuch as after partition there may remain some community of interest, and things held and used in common by all the inhabitants. Every one who lives in that area has a share in it, and may therefore be regarded as a "shareholder" within the meaning of the wajib-ul-urz. GOKAL SINGH v. MANNU LAL

99. ———— Simple mortgage—"Transfer"—Mortgage—Charge—Act IV of 1882 (Transfer of Property Act), s. 58.—The wajib-ul-urz of a village gave a right of pre-emption to co-sharers on a transfer (intikal) by sale or mortgage (rahn) by a co-sharer of "rights and interests" (hakkiyat). Per PETHERAM, C.J.—That as a simple mortgage, as defined in s. 58 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, by giving a right to sell, transfers an interest in the property mortgaged, a simple mortgage of his share by a co-sharer created a right of pre-emption under the terms of the wajib-ul-urz. Per MAHMOOD, J.—The circumstance that possession had not been transferred to the mortgagee was one which had no bearing on the question whether a right of pre-emption arose under the terms of the wajib-ul-urz in the case of a simple mortgage. The word "intikal," as used in Hindustani, has the broadest meaning in connection with "alienation," "conveyance," "assignment," or "transfer" of rights in immoveable property. The word "hakkiyat" means rights and interests in the legal sense of the phrase. The word "rahn" is a generic word indicating all that is included in the English word "mortgage," and is not limited to usufructuary mortgages, but includes simple mortgages also. When general words are used in a document, they must be understood in a general sense, unless they are accompanied by any expression limiting or restricting their ordinary meaning, or unless such limitation or restriction arises from necessary implication. The words "intikal," "hakkiyat," and "rahn" in the wajib-ul-urz could be understood only in the most general sense. "Mortgage," as understood in Indian law, includes simple mortgage as well as usufructuary, and one is as much a "transfer of an interest in specific immoveable property" as the other. A simple mortgage is a "transfer," being the transfer of the right of sale. Held, therefore, by MAHMOOD, J., that a right of pre-emption accrued under the terms of the wajib-ul-urz in the case of a simple mortgage by a co-sharer of his share to a "stranger." Per BRODRURST, J., that one of the entries in a statement showing the transfers which had taken place in the village at or about the time the wajib-ul-urz was framed, which statement was connected with the wajib-ul-urz, related to a simple mortgage, from which it appeared that it was the intention that the co-sharers should have the right of pre-emption in all cases of mortgage, whether usufructuary or otherwise, and therefore a right of pre-emption accrued under the terms of the wajib-ul-urz in the case of a simple mortgage. Per DUTHOIT, J., that a pre-emptive right was raised by the terms of the wajib-ul-urz only upon the occurrence of a transfer of a share in the property of the mehal, and a simple mortgage was not a transfer of property. OLDFIELD, J.—The word "transfer" used in the wajib-ul-urz was not intended to refer to a simple mortgage, but to mortgages where possession of the property passes to the mortgagee. *SHEORATAN KUAR v. Full Bench that this transaction was a transfer of haqiyat within the terms of the wajib-ul-urz. Held also that the plot of land which was given in exchange for the 1 biswa and 6 dhurs must be considered as a price (qimat) within the terms of the wajib-ul-urz. Per MAHMOOD, J., that the word "qimat" must be interpreted in the sense given to it by the Mahomedan law, including not only money, but other kinds of property capable of being valued at a definite sum of money, and covering the consideration of "sale" as well of exchange as defined in ss. 54 and 118 of the Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), respectively. NIAMAT ALI v. ASMAT BIBI . . . I. L. R., 7 All., 626

99. ——— Simple mortgage—"Transfer"—Mortgage—Charge—Act IV of 1882 (Transfer of Property Act), s. 58.—The wajib-ul-urz of a village gave a right of pre-emption to co-sharers on a transfer (intikal) by sale or mortgage (rahn) by a co-sharer of "rights and interests" (hakkiyat). Per PETHERAM, C.J.—That as a simple mortgage, as defined in s. 58 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, by giving a right to sell, transfers an interest in the property mortgaged, a simple mortgage of his share by a co-sharer created a right of pre-emption under the terms of the wajib-ul-urz. Per MAHMOOD, J.—The circumstance that possession had not been transferred to the mortgagee was one which had no bearing on the question whether a right of pre-emption arose under the terms of the wajib-ul-urz in the case of a simple mortgage. The word "intikal," as used in Hindustani, has the broadest meaning in connection with "alienation," "conveyance," "assignment," or "transfer" of rights in immoveable property. The word "hakkiyat" means rights and interests in the legal sense of the phrase. The word "rahn" is a generic word indicating all that is included in the English word "mortgage," and is not limited to usufructuary mortgages, but includes simple mortgages also. When general words are used in a document, they must be understood in a general sense, unless they are accompanied by any expression limiting or restricting their ordinary meaning, or unless such limitation or restriction arises from necessary implication. The words "intikal," "hakkiyat," and "rahn" in the wajib-ul-urz could be understood only in the most general sense. "Mortgage," as understood in Indian law, includes simple mortgage as well as usufructuary, and one is as much a "transfer of an interest in specific immoveable property" as the other. A simple mortgage is a "transfer," being the transfer of the right of sale. Held, therefore, by MAHMOOD, J., that a right of pre-emption accrued under the terms of the wajib-ul-urz in the case of a simple mortgage by a co-sharer of his share to a "stranger." Per BRODHURST, J., that one of the entries in a statement showing the transfers which had taken place in the village at or about the time the wajib-ul-urz was framed, which statement was connected with the wajib-ul-urz, related to a simple mortgage, from which it appeared that it was the intention that the co-sharers should have the right of

pre-emption in all cases of mortgage, whether usufructuary or otherwise, and therefore a right of pre-emption accrued under the terms of the wajib-ul-urz in the case of a simple mortgage. Per DUTTORT, J., that a pre-emptive right was raised by the terms of the wajib-ul-urz only upon the occurrence of a transfer of a share in the property of the mehal, and a simple mortgage was not a transfer of property. OLDFIELD, J.—The word "transfer" used in the wajib-ul-urz was not intended to refer to a simple mortgage, but to mortgages where possession of the property passes to the mortgagee. SHEORATAN KUAR v. MAHIPAL KUAR . . . I. L. R., 7 All., 258

100. ——— Mortgage by conditional sale—"Transfer"—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 58.—A clause in the wajib-ul-urz of a village gave a right of pre-emption in respect of "transfer" by the sharers of their rights and interests by sale and mortgage. Held that a deed of conditional sale of a share in the village, which did not transfer possession, was a transfer of an interest in the village, and was sufficient to let in the right of pre-emption. Sheoratan Kuar v. Mahipal Kuar, I. L. R., 7 All., 258, followed. AZIMAN BIBI v. AMTE ALI [I. L. R., 7 All., 343

101. ——— Conditional sale.—The pre-emptional rights of the parties to a deed of conditional sale cannot be affected by a wajib-ul-urz prepared subsequently to the execution of the deed of conditional sale, but prior to the sale becoming absolute, they not being parties to the wajib-ul-urz, and the wajib-ul-urz not apparently indicating any pre-existing custom of pre-emption in the village. *Raghubir Singh v. 102. ——— Sale without registration of transfer—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 54.—Fraudulent omission to transfer by registered instrument.—The wajib-ul-urz of a village gave the co-sharers a right of pre-emption in cases where any one of them should wish to "transfer his share wholly or partly by sale or mortgage." One of the co-sharers entered into a transaction by which he transferred the possession of his share to a stranger for Rs 300 and had mutation of names effected in the Revenue Department, but, in order to avoid the right of pre-emption, the parties omitted to execute or register a deed of sale in respect of the transfer. Held by the Full Bench (MAHMOOD, J., dissenting) that the transaction gave rise to the right of pre-emption within the meaning of the wajib-ul-urz. Per PETHERAM, C.J., that the terms of the wajib-ul-urz meant that, if any co-sharer transferred his right wholly or partly, the right of pre-emption should arise; that although the legal interest in the share was never transferred, the effect of the transaction in question was to transfer absolutely the whole right of possession from the vendor to the vendee, and that it was therefore such a transfer as let in the right of pre-emption Per STRAIGHT, J, that, inasmuch as the defendants deliberately omitted to observe the necessary legal formality of a registered instrument with the object of defeating the premutation of names not having been registered, the provisions of s 54 of the Transfer of Property Act prevented it from taking effect as a sale, or passing the ownership from the vendor to the vendee; and that therefore, under the wajib ul-urz, the right of pre-emption could not arise *JANKI v. 109.—Arrangement between vendor and vendee as to payment of purchase-money—Right of pre-emptor to stand in the position of the purchaser.—A co-sharer of a village sold part of his share to a stranger. Only a part of the purchase-money was paid in cash, it being agreed that the balance should remain on credit, and be secured by two deeds in which the property was hypothecated by the purchaser to the vendor. Held that it could not be said that the partners of the vendor had not only the right of pre-emption, but also the right to be put in the same position with reference to all the peculiar incidents of the payment of the purchase-money as that arranged between the vendor and purchaser. *NIHAL SINGH v. One of the co-sharers, without first offering his share to the other co-sharers, sold it to a stranger, for a price higher than that which would be payable according to the above-mentioned provision. A suit for pre-emption was brought against the vendor and vendee of a certain fractional share in the village, and the plaintiff claiming the benefit of the above provision disputed the price entered in the sale-deed as the proper price for the share according to current rates. Held, following *Karim Baksh Khan v.
